The streets included in next year's contract are: Parker, Carlson, Carruth, Gilmore, Willard, Edwin, Ashland, Salem and Grove Streets; Wilson and Forest Avenues and Wren Terrace.

In most cases, pipes that are approximately 80 to 100 years old will be replaced with new, larger diameter pipes. The erosion of the older pipes also lead to a shrinking of the actual flow diameter in the pipe, further reducing the pressure.

"Many spots that are in elevated areas or pipes that dead end need to be evaluated," said O'Donnell. "We have taken a comprehensive look at the entire city and we are systematically addressing areas that we believe would be substantially improve with a new system."

In 2005, the city replaced water mains throughout the Hospital Hill area, an elevated neighborhood with aging pipes. The new water mains also provide improved water pressure and service to the Quincy Medical Center.

Gardner Endorses Bracken For Ward 6 Council Seat

Councillor Alicia Gardner has endorsed Mark Bracken for the Ward 6 city council seat she is leaving.

Bracken and Brian McNamee, both of whom ran against Gardner two years ago, are contenders for the seat in the Nov. 8 city election.

Gardner, who decided not to seek re-election to a second term because of family reasons, said:

"Mark Bracken is a lifelong Ward 6 resident. He grew up in Ward 6, attended Sacred Heart school and spent his life in Ward 6. I am hoping that the residents of Ward 6 will share my confidence that he is the most experienced and best qualified candidate."

Bracken, a legal and policy analyst for state Rep. Ronald Mariano, said:

"I appreciate Councillor Gardner's support and I know that she supports me because I share her goals to ensure that the position of Ward 6 councillor is used to improve the quality of life in Ward 6.

"The city is changing and tough decisions have to be made to balance development, population growth and the needs of businesses with our every day quality of life."

He cited for examples traffic and the repair of roads and sidewalks in Ward 6.

Gardner said deciding not to seek re-election "was a difficult decision and I appreciate all of the support I've had."

Sheets' Book Moving Along

Jim Sheets has completed the first two chapters of his "tell it like it was" book, a behind-the-scene look at his historic six terms as mayor and Quincy politics.

SHEETS

"Some people may not agree with what I write," he says. "But I'm not going to dodge anything. I'm going to tell it like it was. Tell it as it happened."

The tentative title of the book is "Mr. Mayor: An American Odyssey."

The odyssey: growing up in the small town of Clarksville, Pa. where his father, Harry, two grandfathers and seven uncles (one killed) were coal miners, coming to Quincy as an Eastern Nazarene College student, making Quincy his home and going on to become mayor.

"An American Odyssey," says Sheets, "where your father can be a coal miner and you can become a mayor."

The first chapter is about his years in Clarksville and the second about his coming to Quincy.

His mother, Pauline, never wanted him to follow in the family's footsteps as coal miners and decided to take matters into her own hands to see that he didn't.

Unknown to him, she sent an application for admission and his high school graduation certificate to Eastern Nazarene College in Wollaston.

He was accepted and arrived here in 1953. And looking at Quincy Bay, saw the Atlantic Ocean for the first time.

And, the next year he saw a pretty, young lady named Joann Roberts who had enrolled at ENC. She came from Scotdale, Pa. where he father was a minister. Although their hometowns were only about 45 miles apart, they had never met.

But they did at ENC, never dreaming he would become mayor and she the city's first lady.

The second chapter brings him up to his election as mayor in 1989. And the rest of the book will be about his 12 years as mayor.

"There will be some cases of humor, some cases of accomplishments and some cases of failure," he says.

One subject will be the 2001 election that brought his 28-year career to a sudden end when a virtual political newcomer, William Phelan, defeated him by a scant 17 votes as he sought a seventh term.

PHELAN

It was the closest mayoral race and one of the biggest political upsets in the city's history.

The former rivals are on friendly terms now. And it was Phelan who had the new addition to the Thomas Crane Library dedicated in Sheets' name.

The long dreamed of addition was built during Sheets' administration and he was a major factor in making it a reality.

But saving Quincy Hospital from closing is considered his finest hour as mayor.

Sheets worked hours, days, weeks, and months to keep the hospital, now Quincy Medical Center, open as one of Quincy's most important facilities.

But in his book he will spread the credit around.

To the union employees who took a 10 percent cut in wages and benefits, to Senator Edward Kennedy and Governor Paul Cellucci for their crucial, non-partisan help and to others.

"People should know what really happens inside public office," Sheets says. "The challenges, the accomplishments – and the failures."

Quincy Hospital was both a challenge and accomplishment.

One of the failures was his attempt to re-open the Fore River Shipyard and put Quincy back in the shipbuilding business. Some think he put too much faith in one man.

The shipyard story will be in the book.

"I'm not going to exclude anything," he says.

He has no comment on it, for now, but that would seem to indicate he will include that idiotic City Hall break-in that occurred unknown to him during his final days in office.

Sheets estimates it will take him a couple more years to complete the book because of his other project.

He is regional director of the Adams Memorial Foundation, raising funds for the planned Washington, D.C. memorial to Presidents John and John Quincy Adams and the Adams family.

He looks back on his 12 years as mayor "as the most meaningful and happiest in my life."

Does he ever think of a political comeback – returning to the mayor's office?

"No," he says. "That's over."

He may elaborate on that more in his book.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS an early 1960s postcard view of Quincy Square. One the left in the Adams Building the Capitol Supermarket was next to what was the main office of the old Quincy Savings Bank where the Quincy Sun is now located. In the distance the South Shore National Bank sign was there for 20 years until the bank became South Shore Bank in 1977. That was the sixth name change for the bank that was founded in 1836. Since 1977, it has gone through four more name changes until last year it became a branch of the Bank of America. Rogers Jewelry next to the bank hasn't changed its name or location in over 50 years. One the right, the ART Theater had just been demolished and soon after this picture was taken the old Mount Wollaston Bank building would make way for a city parking lot, now the site of the Stop & Shop headquarters building. Fix Flooding Problem 'Today'

I am compelled to respond to Mayor William Phelan's front-page diatribe against the MWRA for the emergency release of untreated sewage into Quincy Bay ("Phelan Blasts MWRA For Dumping Raw Sewage Into Bay," Quincy Sun issue dated Oct. 20). According to the article, the mayor described the release as follows:

"The MWRA spent $3.8 billion on a treatment plant that still dumps sewage into our bay. That is simply an injustice. Our state government creates these independent agencies that are unaccountable to the public and this is the result. Our best interest are not being represented if this is allowed to continue. The MWRA needs to fix this problem today. There is a solution available for one-tenth of 1 percent of the total project cost and they are now reacting to their second major sewage release in Quincy Bay. Their lack of response to this major environmental problem is unacceptable, completely unacceptable."

The story appears just below a picture of one of my Connell Street neighbors pumping out his severely flooded back yard. Mr. Mayor, with all due respect, the same logic and outrage that you express at the MWRA can easily be directed at you and your administration for the flooding problems that continue unabated in West Quincy.

I have lived on Connell Street for 12 years and this is at least the fourth catastrophic flood that affected Connell Street, Ballou Street, Robinson Street, Steadman Street and Alrick Road, which has occurred within that time. This is simply an injustice. Is your administration accountable? Why is this being allowed to continue? Are you representing our best interests?

There is a solution available, but within the same article, your own Public Works Director attributes your complete inaction to the $25 million price tag of the solution. In these days of budget austerity, all cities and towns are forced to do more with less. You are doing absolutely nothing! Do something. I am not an engineer but it is reasonable to assume that there is something that could be done for a lot less than $25 million to alleviate at least some of this problem.

In an amazing coincidence, a report ordered by the mayor "on what to do, and how much it would cost" will be ready for a Nov. 21 meeting with the City Council. Mr. Mayor, please talk to the Public Works Director. I think he already has some information on "what to do and how much it would cost" that you might find useful.

I wonder if this is the same report (by engineers from the firm of Weston & Sampson, I believe) that was talked about at a City Council meeting conducted the last time these neighborhoods flooded?

You are outraged at the MWRA for allowing untreated raw sewage into Quincy Bay as the result of an unplanned emergency power outage. I am outraged at you for doing absolutely nothing and allowing raw untreated sewage into my neighbors' homes resulting from a situation that you knew all about.

In conclusion, if the MWRA were to respond to your concerns by adopting the same fallacious logic espoused by your administration, that the solution is too expensive, I doubt that you would find that response viable or responsible. Mayor Phelan, you have a clear and pressing duty, responsibility and obligation to take some action to alleviate the pervasive flooding problem plaguing West Quincy. In your own words you need to "fix this problem today."

New Contract For 5,100 Fore River Shipyard Workers

Oct. 27 - Nov. 2
49 Years Ago

The Bethlehem Steel Co. and the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America reached agreement on a new contract covering some 15,000 workers in the company's East Coast shipyards, including 5,100 at Fore River.

The wage section of the agreement provided for raises of nine to 22 cents an hour the first year and seven to 10 cents the second and third years for workers who are currently making $1.71 to $2.27 an hour and some specialists making more.

Other improvements under the agreement included four hours call-in pay instead of two, one more paid holiday (Feb. 22) making seven in all, changes in the vacation plan plus better pension and insurance plans and elimination of "in between pay rates."

Meanwhile, the Fore River management filed suit in Suffolk Superior Court for a temporary injunction to restrict picketing by 300 members of the draftsmen union, who were striking for a new contract. Their picket line had halted production at the yard.

And Donald Edmonston was reelected president of the Shipbuilding Workers Local 5 with 1,560 votes to 1.350 for his opponent, Stanley Kyller of the pipe shop. Edmonston also was reelected to the local's negotiations committee.

SCHOOL OVERSPENDING

Purchasing Agent Joseph A.E. Erickson told the City Council he can prove the School Department "is going to spend a lot of unnecessary money" for equipment for the new Broad Meadows Junior High School. The cost is already $30,000 over estimate, he said.

City Councillor Thomas S. Burgin assailed an item in the Broad Meadows contract that called for some $5,000 in travel expenses for the architects to fly back and forth between Boston and Chicago. The city had already received two bills for $250 each.

USS Salem Becomes Haunted Halloween Ship

The Haunted Ship has once again put into port at the Fore River Shipyard, complete with a full ghostly complement of spirits, goblins and other scary apparitions.

The malevolent craft will be at the spot usually reserved for the USS Salem Thursday through Sunday on the next two weekends as well as Halloween night (Monday, Oct. 31).

Admission is $10 for adults and $8 for children.

This is the eighth Halloween visit by the ship and promises to be the biggest ever, according to Michael Condon, who doubles as skipper of the Haunted Ship and executive director of the USS Salem.

"We decided to add the main deck to our haunt," said Condon. "The deck has become an enormous haunted cemetery with the addition of over 100 gravestones as well as the usual ghosts and goblins."

Below decks there are more than 50 different displays, including the ship's own functioning electric chair."

Many of its current crew can tell stories of seeing ghostly figures or "feeling a presence," and there have been many occasions of voices reported heard in closed off areas of the ship.

"Whatever ghosts live on the ship year 'round, I hope they are enjoying the company," said Condon.

For more information, call the Haunted Ship at 617-479-7900 or check the website www.hauntedship.com.

TRACY O'SULLIVAN, a music teacher at the Montclair School in Quincy, wows the audience as the guest soloist with the Cape Cod Symphony Orchestra at the annual Pops in the Park concert in Orleans.

Tracy O'Sullivan Guest Soloist

Montclair School Music Teacher Shines At Cape Concert

If the crowd estimated at 5,500 under the tent that warm night in Eldridge Park in Orleans weren't sure what they were going to get when Tracy O'Sullivan stepped to the mike, the girl from Quincy soon showed them.

"Tracy O'Sullivan's full-time job may be as a music teacher in her hometown of Quincy," wrote the critic for the Cape Codder newspaper, "but she showed why she has sung at both Carnegie Hall in New York and Royal Albert Hall in London, Joining the orchestra for several numbers."

Tracy, who teaches music at the Montclair School in Quincy, was the guest soloist with the Cape Cod Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Royston Nash at the Pops in the Park Concert in Orleans, an annual event that attracts people from all over the country.

She was selected after performing before a Rotary International audience in April and being deemed a "perfect fit" for Pops in the Park as a former Rotary International Ambassadorial Scholar and frequent Rotary guest speaker.

TRACY O'SULLIVAN gets a hug from Royston Nash, conductor of the Cape Cod Symphony Orchestra.

Tracy obtained both bachelor's and master's degrees in music from Ithaca College in Ithaca, N.Y. and, in 2002, was awarded the Rotary International Ambassadorial Scholarship to live, study and contribute in Wales for one year.

While abroad, she performed several benefit concerts of the Polio Pius, an initiative of the Rotary Foundation while completing her studies at the Welsh College of Music and Drama earning her a past graduate diploma in Vocal Performance.

A highlight of her experiences overseas was performing for radio and television broadcast with the BBC National Chorus of Wales. In addition to singing in Carnegie Hall and Royal Albert Hall, Tracy has performed in the Marlinsky Summer Vocal Institute in Mikkeli, Finland

She gives private music lessons in addition to her work at the Montclair School and her public performances.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

All In One Oven Bake

I think most everyone will agree is that there is nothing like making dinner all in one pan. And so it was this week, when I had about a cup of beans, two pork chops and two lamb chops that I wanted to use up. It was a cloudy, rainy day and the oven felt pretty good.

All In One Oven Bake

four chops (any kind can be used)
1 1/2 cups rice (uncooked)
10 ounces chicken stock (cans are good)
1 package frozen peas
1 cup beans (optional)
1 small onion (chopped)
salt and pepper to taste
garlic powder
3 tablespoons soy sauce
2 tablespoons cooking sherry

First pre-heat the oven to 350 degrees. Then season the chops with garlic powder, the salt and pepper.

In a roasting pan preferably with a cover otherwise use aluminum foil, place the chops first, sprinkle the rice over them.

Add the frozen peas (unthawed), the beans and then add the chicken stock, sherry and soy sauce.

Cover the pan and cook for 1 1/2 ;hours. Halfway through, stir the peas (which are now thawed) and the rest of the ingredients and then cover again and cook until done. You can also use string beans in place of peas and if you do, you won't need the other beans.

It just is so delicious when done and only one pan to clean!

Lions Club Halloween Pancake Breakfast Sunday

The Quincy Lions Club will hold its annual Halloween Pancake Breakfast Sunday from 8 a.m. to noon at 1000 Southern Artery.

Tickets will be available at the door. Donation is $5.

A highlight of this year's breakfast will be the presence of the Lions Eyemobile, which will provide free vision, hearing and blood pressure screenings to attendees. In addition, children who attend the Halloween Breakfast in costume will receive a special treat as well as photos taken with costumed characters.

A prize raffle and silent auction will also be held, with prizes including 2006 Red Sox tickets, a harbor cruise for two and a round of golf for two plus lunch at the Wollaston Golf Club.

Proceeds from the breakfast will go to the Quincy Lions Club programs that fund eye research and provide eye exams, eyeglasses and other services to blind and visually impaired persons.

"The pancake breakfast is a much-anticipated annual event that's fun for the whole family," said Quincy Lions Club President Joyce Hogan. "We hope everyone will come out and enjoy a delicious breakfast while supporting the Lions Club's many worthwhile service activities in our community."

With more than 1.4 million members around the world, Lions Clubs International is the largest service organization in the world.

The Quincy Lions Club has been serving the local community for more than 60 years. Through such fundraising events as the pancake breakfast and its spring Run/Walk for Sight, the Quincy Lions Club raises thousands of dollars each year for eye research, scholarships to local high school students, donations to help blind or visually impaired residents and other worthwhile community projects.

Senator Kennedy Receives John Adams Award

"The Adams family vitality and devotion to public interest runs like a scarlet thread throughout the entire tapestry of American history and the record of their accomplishments intimidates us all."

Senator Kennedy, the award notes, "understands and promotes the importance of the Adams history and legacy to America."

The ceremonies were held in the Carriage House at "Peacefield," the estate where Adams lived out his days after leaving the presidency, now the cornerstone of the Adams National Historical Park.

Over the past 10 years, with the support of Kennedy in the Senate and a big boost from the publication of David McCullough's biography "John Adams," the park's program has grown from 35,000 to 200,000 visitors annually.

Kennedy's contribution included federal funding that linked the presidential sites throughout the city with trolley transportation and an interim visitors' center in downtown Quincy.

The Quincy Partnership is a group of individuals one of whose purposes is to capitalize on the city's rich historic, cultural and natural surroundings to increase the awareness of Quincy as a rewarding place to live and visit.

Some of its projects have included Historic UpLighting of National Historic Landmarks, signs for Historic Quincy, the John Adams statue, the Abigail Adams and John Quincy Adams statue, the fountain at Merrymount Park.

License Board Continues Hearing On Noise Complaints

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The License Board Tuesday continued a hearing regarding noise complaints at Titan Roofing, 115 Old Colony Ave.

Angelo DeSimone, manager of Titan Roofing, did not attend Tuesday's meeting, causing the board to state that if he does not attend the Nov. 15 meeting, his license will be suspended.

Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro told the board he has received numerous complaints about the noise from residents of Newton Street, Warren Avenue and Standish Avenue, "a good distance away."

Neighbors said "they were loud, disruptive," especially between the hours of 4:30 to 5 a.m.

Gutro said trucks are sitting there "idling well before 7 a.m." and the "neighbors are fed up" and also the yard is in disarray.

Gutro asked the board to take action by either suspending their license if they do not abide by the rules, or issue a fine to let them know "that the city of Quincy means business."

Gutro said when a license is issued it should be done in good faith.

Chairman Joseph Shea said the owners in the past have been receptive and do attend the meetings.

Police Chief Robert Crowley said they should have at least "made a courtesy call if they could not attend the meeting." He said this is happening "more and more when persons do not show up or fail to call."

Tips For A Safe Halloween

By MANNY GONZALEZ

On Oct. 31, children around the country celebrate Halloween. Halloween is a festive time of the year for little boys and girls to dress up as their favorite super hero, scary villain or creature.

Children also get a chance to go to their neighbors' houses and collect candy. This is a joyous time of the year for children because of the free candy and Halloween parties at home and school.

Throughout all the fun, safety must be remembered at all times during Halloween. Here are some safety tips that will help keep your children out of danger. Children should:

• Go only to well-lit houses and remain on porches rather than entering houses. Never enter a house you don't know.

• Travel in small groups and be accompanied by an adult. Never go out alone.

• Know their phone number and carry coins for emergency telephone calls.

• Have their names and addresses attached to their costumes.

• Bring treats home before eating them so parents can inspect them. If you question whether a treat is safe, just discard it.

• Use costume knives and swords that are flexible, not rigid or sharp.

• Use flashlights, stay on sidewalks and avoid crossing yards.

• Cross streets at the corner, use crosswalks where they exist and do not cross between parked cars.

• Stop at all corners and stay together in a group before crossing. Make eye contact with the driver before crossing.

• Be sure to look left, right and left again before crossing the street.

• Wear clothing that is bright, reflective and flame retardant.

• Consider using face paint instead of masks. Masks can obstruct a child's vision.

• Avoid wearing hats that will slide over their eyes.

• Avoid wearing long, baggy, loose costumes or oversized shoes to prevent tripping.

A parent's role during Halloween and trick or treating is crucial to the child's safety. Parents should always supervise the outing for young children. Parents should:

• Supervise the outing for children under 12.

• Establish a curfew (a return time) for older children.

• Prepare homes for trick-or-treaters by clearing porches, lawns and sidewalks and by placing Jack-o-lanterns away from doorways and landings.

• Avoid giving out choking hazards such as gum, peanuts, hard candies or small toys as treats to young children.

• Inspect all candy for safety before children eat it.

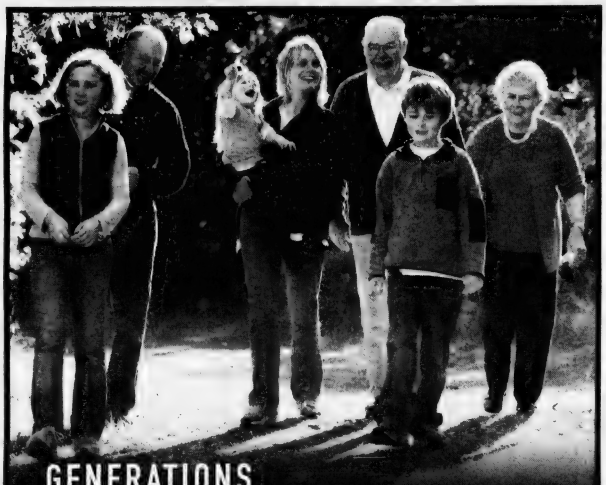
• Make sure children under age 10 are supervised at they cross the street.

• Drive slowly and watch for children in the street and on medians.

• Exit driveways and alleyways carefully.

• Have children get out of cars on the curbside, not on the traffic side.

By following these Halloween safety tips, you and your children can enjoy this festive holiday safely.



For more Halloween safety tips, visit www.greenhillspd.org/kids/halloween.

GENERATIONS
My family is extremely lucky. My kids are growing up with their grandparents and other family members just down the street. My story is not a unique one in Quincy. But we all have other stories of family members and friends leaving our city for "better" school systems. I feel by better promoting our schools' achievements and proactively addressing our problems we can reverse this trend. I know I can be a positive force for Quincy's schools. As one of your next School Committee Members I will work tirelessly so that generations of families, both old and new, will continue to call this great city home.

Fall Household Hazardous Waste Day A Success

Mayor William Phelan and DPW Commissioner Steve O'Donnell announce that more than 270 Quincy households took advantage of the Fall Household Hazardous Waste Day.

Drop-off of materials such as oil-based paints, car batteries, pesticides, pool chemicals, motor oil and antifreeze was allowed to Quincy residents free of charge.

"I want to thank all of our residents that took advantage of this service and disposed of their hazardous materials in the proper fashion," said Phelan. "Working together, we can keep these materials out of landfills, storm-drains and other places where they can cause damage to our environment."

O'Donnell estimated that the turnout was lower than the Spring drop-of date but that it was consistent with other Fall Household Hazardous Waste Days.

"People generally do their 'clean-outs' in the spring so that tends to be the busier day," said O'Donnell. "For those that missed the opportunity, we will be conducting another household hazardous waste day this coming spring. This program has been a great success for the city and its residents and we hope to continue it."

Ron Iacobucci
SCHOOL COMMITTEE

All the candidates for School Committee this year want what is best for our children and they are all talking about the same things: a new high school, full time kindergarten and small class size.

So why cast one of your three votes for RON IACOBUCCI?

Take a look at ideas, experience and achievements.

RECENT ACHIEVEMENTS

- Ron led a team of volunteers to secure the future of a Quincy church with a townhouse project that raised over $1 million
- Ron is leading a team of volunteers to build mini-Fenway Park having secured legislative and environmental approvals and a fifty year lease

EXPERIENCE WITH CHILDREN AND EDUCATION

- Ron as Co-founder of the Adam Walsh Center Boston worked with National Founder John Walsh host of America's Most Wanted to promote child protection curriculum for schools
- Ron has twelve years of public service working for two former Mayors that included helping youth-at-risk obtain their high school diplomas and employment

WHERE RON'S IDEAS COME FROM

As a graduate of Quincy Public Schools and as a parent of three school aged children that are in or have graduated from the Quincy Public School System, Ron sees the public schools through their eyes. Many of Ron's ideas and concerns come from his children's experience. Ron also receives many great ideas from listening to voters from across the City.

Ron Iacobucci is ready to put ideas, experience and achievements to work for the citizens of Quincy. On November 8TH lets give him a chance. Please cast one of your three votes for Ron Iacobucci for School Committee.

Firefighters Praised For Quick Work At Two Fires

Fire Chief Tim Pettinelli praised members of the Quincy Fire Department for their quick and professional response to two fires on Sunday.

Both fires were contained in quick fashion, preventing further damage and potential threats to the public.

The first fire took place early Sunday morning on Adams Street, A basement fire broke out in the area of the boiler at 621 Adams St. Flammable materials stored near the fire exacerbated the situation, but drew from Engine 4 and Ladder 2 were able to confine the fire to the basement.

"I want to compliment our crews for their professional response and limiting the further loss of property. Their quick containment prevented a tenuous situation from occurring." said Chief Pettinelli.

Crews from Ladder 2 responding to a kitchen fire at 145 Willard St. rescued an individual from his apartment later that morning. Fire Department personnel rescued a semi-conscious male from an apartment on Willard Street during a fire that broke out mid-morning. They suppressed the fire and prevented major damage to the building.

"I want to compliment the job that our fire department did Sunday in response to both fires," Mayor William Phelan said. "Their quick response alleviated a potential serious injury on Willard Street. In both cases, they quickly contained the fire and prevented the situations from growing out of control."

Project SAFE Rescheduled To Nov. 5 In Elderly Homes

Project S.A.F.E., the day that firefighters and volunteers fan out across the city to install and update smoke detectors in the homes of the elderly, will be Saturday, Nov. 5, this year.

It was originally scheduled for Oct. 1 but so many Quincy firefighters wound up in New Orleans and environs helping victims of Hurricane Katrina that the day had to be postponed.

"This unique program provides an essential citywide service for seniors at no cost to seniors or to the city," said Sharron Beals, executive director of Beechwood on the Bay, one of the sponsoring organizations.

"Since we launched this initiative nine years ago, we have installed more than 8,200 smoke detectors in the homes of Quincy seniors."

In those nine years, Project S.A.F.E. has installed 8,000 detectors with an estimated value of $96,000 and batteries and other products worth $2,700.

During the day, 20 service teams, made up of firefighters, volunteers from Quincy Rotary Club and Rotary "Interact" students from Quincy and North Quincy High School will check, install and replace detectors and batteries in the homes of "at risk" seniors.

The National Fire Prevention Association (NFPA) is donating 10-year lithium batteries.

"At risk" seniors, those 70 or older or those with mobility or vision limitations, can call Beechwood on the Bay at 617-471-5712 to request a home visit Nov. 5.

"This community program has become a model throughout the Commonwealth and beyond," said Beals. "Sharon Gamache of NFPA tells us that NFPA now promotes our service concept and model nationally and internationally."

Bracken Pledges Support For 175 Tax Classification

Mark Bracken, candidate for Ward 6 City Council, pledges his full support of the 175 tax classification which, he says, is the most favorable rate for the homeowners allowed by law.

"Walking the streets of the ward has presented one prevailing issue this year — taxes," Bracken said. "The residents of Ward 6 over the past few years have seen increases in taxes that are really pulling on the purse strings. This is something that needs to be addressed."

The city had favored the 169 tax classification, which, he said, favors business properties over residential properties. It was not until two years ago that the council voted to approve the 175 tax classification which provided relief to the homeowners.

"With such a large percentage of homeowners in Ward 6m I think the Ward 6 councillor has a strong responsibility and sense of duty to the constituents to vote for the 175 tax classification. That is the pledge that I make," said Bracken.

Bracken, who is seeking the seat being vacated by Alicia Gardner, said he is running as "The Independent Voice of Ward 6."

"This campaign is about the issues . . . period. Ward 6 deserves a voice who will be independent and is not afraid to take tough stances in the best interest of the Ward 6 residents, and taxes is one of those issues," said Bracken.

"I am not afraid to talk about the issues or take these tough stances. When people go to vote on Election Day they will know exactly where I stand on the issues that affect our friends, our neighbors and our community."

FIRE SAFETY

by Captain Tom Lyons
Fire Prevention Bureau
Quincy Fire Department

Smoke Detectors And Other Inspections

As I have mentioned before, we frequently conduct smoke detector inspections within homes which are under agreement for sale.

We conduct thousands of them each year. More often than not, the passing date on the home has been set so that obtaining the certificate of inspection from us in a timely manner is essential to complete the scheduled transaction.

Occasionally though, while conducting the smoke detector inspection, an inspecting officer will observe a condition in the home which he questions. For instance, if he knows he is inspecting a single-family home and there appears to be an arrangement that can be construed as an apartment in a basement, it raises his concern. Should there be a bedroom in a basement or attic without an alternate egress, it can catch his eye as well. He will then contact Fire Prevention asking for our intervention or that of the Building Department. In many cases, issuance of the certificate can be delayed until a determination can be made and we can correctly apply the smoke detector law.

After one such occurrence, I had an individual take me to task asking why inspecting officers just don't do what they are there to do, check the smoke detectors. Investigating a reported condition can take time and briefly disrupt the process. This individual couldn't comprehend our concern so I explained it the best way I could.

Massachusetts General Law, Chapter 148, Section 28A states: "The head of the fire department or any person designated by him who, in the performance of his official duties, observes any condition which he believes to be a violation of any provision of the state building code and any amendments thereto, shall report the same to the authority charged with the enforcement of such provision."

This law refers to building department issues while another refers to any other agency's issues as well.

Meanwhile, any firefighter with experience has emblazoned in their heart the tragic consequences of fire. Whether it is a life lost or someone's treasured domain rendered unlivable, it has an impact on us. Consequently, when an inspector enters a home for a smoke detector inspection, he cannot ignore a blatant life safety concern. He can't! He realizes that much of code historically arises from tragic experience and there are reasons for things being done with safety in mind.

I conveyed this view to him, whether he embraced it, I don't quite know for certain. It certainly seems, however, that we have our conscience and the law on our side. I believe we make every effort accommodating realtors and homeowners who are in the process of selling a home. We do so within the confines of our own limitations of time and manpower. We also do so within the constraints of conscience and life safety.

We therefore ask they understand, too, the view we take with us while conducting the inspection. If they anticipate a possible problem arising during an inspection, I encourage them to discuss it beforehand so that any delay may be averted.

MEMA Offers Safety Tips To Residents In Floods

With storm-driven flood waters rising across the state, the Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency (MEMA) has issued a list of safety tips to help residents cope with the dangers.

• Do not walk through flowing water. Six inches of swiftly flowing water can knock you off your feet. Flash flood waters can roll boulders, sweep away cars, destroy buildings, obliterate bridges. If you must walk through a flooded area, use a stick to ensure the ground is still there and solid.

• Heed evacuation requests. Follow recommended evacuation routes, shortcuts may be blocked or dangerous.

• Do not drive through a flooded area. Cars can be swept away in just two feet of moving water. Do not drive around road barriers. A road or bridge ahead may be washed out. If your car becomes trapped in floodwaters, abandon it immediately and climb to higher ground.

• Avoid power lines and electrical wires. Electrical current can travel through water. Report downed power lines to your utility company or local emergency manager.

• Watch for animals, especially snakes. Small wild animals that have been flooded out of their homes may seek shelter in yours. Use a stick to poke and turn items over and scare away small creatures.

• Look before you step. After a flood, the ground and floors are covered with debris, including broken bottles and nails. Floors and stairs that have been covered with mud can be very slippery.

• Be alert for gas leaks. Use a flashlights to inspect for damage. Do not smoke or use candles, lanterns or open flames unless you are sure that the gas has been turned off and the area has been aired out.

• Remember that carbon monoxide kills. Only use camp stoves, generators or other gasoline-powered machines outdoors. Fumes from charcoal are especially deadly.

• Clean everything that gets wet. Floodwater have probably picked up sewage and chemicals from road, farms and factories. Spoiled food and flooded medicines and cosmetics are health hazards, When in doubt, throw them away.

• Be prepared for a rough time. The after effects of this type of disaster and you and your family may last a long time. Consult a health professional on how to recognize and care for anxiety, stress and fatigue.

MEMA officials also reminded residents who have experienced flood damage to take photographs of the damage as soon as possible.

And those who have a flood insurance policy should contact the insurance company or agent who wrote the policy as soon as possible in order to file a claim.

FALL CAR CARE

Failed Batteries Don't Have To Be A Drain

Almost everyone who drives knows the frustration of a failed vehicle battery.

No matter when a battery fails to start a car, it never seems to be at a convenient time or place, and the complications or finding and installing a replacement battery can seem endless.

Knowing what to expect from a vehicle battery, and what can be done to prevent inconvenient battery, are the keys to avoiding this common and stressful event, says AAA Southern New England.

"Despite warranties that claim an expected battery life of four, five or six years, some vehicle batteries could fail, or at least weaken, after 3.5 years," said John Paul, AAA Southern New England's Car Doctor. "The constant chemical reaction inside a lead-acid battery, vibration caused by driving and extreme changes in temperature all conspire to rob a battery of its ability to be recharged."

Last year, AAA roadside assistance responded to more than 5.3 million calls from members with cars that wouldn't start. Many of these calls involved batteries that could not be recharged. In many other cases, car owners assumed their vehicle battery would be fine after a jump-start, only to experience a second battery failure the next time they tried to restart their vehicle.

"To end this frustration motorists should change their thinking about batteries," Paul said. "New technology has made it possible to reliably determine the condition of a battery in a few minutes without removing the battery from the vehicle. This test should be requested by vehicle owners any time they have their vehicle inspected."

Signs of a weak battery are slow engine cranking, dim headlights and illumination of the battery/charging system warning lights on the dashboard.

AAA offers these battery care tips:

• Keeping the battery case clean by wiping it down with a moist paper towel and mild detergent will help reduce any current drain caused by dirt or grime. Corrosion around the terminal connections and battery hold down can be cleaned with a small stiff brush and a solution of baking soda and water.

• Battery terminal connections should be tight. Adjust loose fittings or replace fittings that have cracked.

• Instructions for jump-starting a failed battery can be found in vehicle owner's manuals. However, jump-starting can be dangerous and motorists uncertain about battery maintenance and safety should seek professional assistance.

• When selecting a new battery, always choose one that is of the same physical size as the original battery. This will ensure proper fit and avoid excess vibration, which will shorten battery life.

Practice Energy- And Wallet-Friendly Home Maintenance

(NAPS) — Besides making your home more attractive, well-planned home improvements can cut energy costs. Whether you're considering an addition, purchasing new comfort systems or weather-proofing your home, here's how to save on utility bills:

Room Additions

• Install Energy Star-labeled windows, doors and skylights. The location and type of windows and doors affect your system's efficiency.

• Passive solar designs take advantage of solar heat in cold weather and shading in warm.

• For additions, use advanced framing techniques for increased insulation and less thermal bridging.

Choosing Comfort Systems And Windows

• Look for the bright-yellow EnergyGuide labels on heating and cooling systems. These identify energy-efficient furnaces, air conditioners, refrigerators and other appliances.

• The U.S. Department of Energy says all newly installed residential central air conditioning systems need a 13 SEER (Seasonal Energy Efficiency Ratio) or higher rating.

• Consider the U-Value of windows — U-Value measures how well a window conducts heat.

Weatherproofing

• Insulate your attic using at least R-30-rated material (fiberglass, cellulose, etc.).

• Seal openings in walls, around windows, doors, electrical outlets and plumbing.

• Weather-strip doors.

• Install thresholds and door shoes on main doors and a door sweep on those less used.

Preventive Maintenance

• Have your home's heating and cooling system serviced seasonally by a NATE-certified technician to ensure that it is working at peak efficiency.

These tips are brought to you by North American Technician Excellence (NATE), the nation's largest nonprofit certification organization for heating, ventilation, air-conditioning and refrigeration technicians. The U.S. Department of Energy endorses NATE for raising quality standards and energy efficiency.

For a contractor with NATE-certified technicians, go to the Consumer Contractor Connection at www.natex.org. Remember, when purchasing a new unit, select one with Energy Star-qualified seal.

It Could Pay To Check Plumbing System

(NAPS) - If your house, mobile home or other structure had its plumbing system installed between January 1978 and July 1995, you may have some potentially valuable work to do this weekend – thoroughly checking your plumbing system.

What you're looking for is polybutylene ("PB") plastic pipes. If you are one of the thousands of Americans whose residence has a PB pipe system that has leaked, is leaking now or may leak in the future, you may be eligible for a replacement plumbing system at absolutely no cost.

How To Spot A Plastic Pipe

PB plumbing systems are distinguished by flexible, gray plastic pipes joined by plastic or metal fittings held in place by small aluminum or copper bands, about the size of a man's wedding band. These can be located inside a home, the attic, crawl space or water heater closet, often buried beneath insulation materials. Outside a home, blue, gray or black piping at the water meter or pipe entry site may indicate the presence of a qualifying PB yard service line.

Owners of properties with a PB plumbing system should call the Consumer Plumbing Recovery Center (CPRC) toll-free at 1-800-392-7591 or visit www.pbpipe.com. The Web site contains all pertinent information needed to file a claim, including a Claims Eligibility Form, which may be completed online.

What To Do

"Homeowners with leaking PB pipe, particularly those who brought their homes within the past 36 months, need to call us or access the Web site as soon as they can," said Tim Taylor, CPRC General Manager. "We are eager to inform them about the relief they are eligible to receive and to help them establish eligibility for the simple and streamlined replacement process."

PB pipe was installed in millions of residential properties in the U.S. beginning in the late 1970s, but it was never used for drains, waste or vent piping, yard sprinkler systems, irrigation systems, fire sprinkler systems, sewer lines, faucets or fixtures. PB pipe should also not be confused with PVC or CPVC products, that are rigid and white or off-white plastic.

Since 1995, more than 330,000 property owners across the United States have had their leaking PB plastic plumbing replaced at no cost – but there remain thousands of others who have purchased homes or other properties in the last several years that qualify for the same free replacement benefits which others have already received.

If a structure that you purchased after August 12, 2002, had PB plumbing and you do not wish to participate in the benefits of the replacement program, you may exclude yourself from obtaining relief under this settlement. You must sign and return an exclusion request form before Dec. 31, 2005. Complete details on how you can exclude yourself are outlined in the Notice of Class Action and Settlement available by calling 1-800-392-7591 or visiting www.pbpipe.com.

It takes roughly four months from a homeowner's first contact with the CPRC to a replumbed house. If your plumbing system qualifies, you can select your own plumber or use one of the plumbers recommended by the CPRC.

How Clean Is The Air In Your Home?

(NAPS) - Most people know that the air outside can be filled with pollution but few realize the air inside a home can be just as harmful, if not worse.

According to the EPA, indoor air pollution levels can be two to five times higher indoors that outdoors.

Many sources can affect the indoor environmental quality of your home, such as building materials, furnishings and household products. While short-term effects of indoor pollution may seem mere annoyances – eye, nose and throat irritations or headaches – long-term effects can pose more serious problems, such as respiratory and heart complications.

The Institute of Inspection, Cleaning and Restoration Certification (IICRC) offers some tips to protect your air – and your health:

• Keep walkways and entries clean to eliminate tracking in debris.

• Use entry mats to trap soil at entries and reduce the amount of particles that can build up and become airborne.

• Remove shoes upon entry – studies show this easy step can reduce fine particles such as lead.

• Use a good-quality vacuum cleaner and a high-efficiency vacuum filter bag to eliminate dust and particles that can cause respiratory problems.

• Vacuum regularly, especially in entry and high-traffic areas, to remove soil and dust before they become embedded in the carpet pile.

• Use HVAC filters (quality reusable electrostatic filters for HVAC systems) and remove or clean them on a monthly basis.

• Have your carpet cleaned by a "professional" on a regular basis. Check your carpet manufacturer's warranty for recommended frequency.

• Clean other soft surfaces such as upholstery, drapery, bedding and other fabric surfaces; wash linens weekly.

• Control moisture and humidity to protect against dust mite infestation and mold growth.

THIS IS A HAMMER

Winterize Your Garden

DEAR THIS IS A HAMMER: Last winter I discovered how the old, dead cornstalks in my garden could lead water into the ground, where it would freeze solid. My neighbor pointed out that cutting down the stalks and turning the soil before the first hard freeze would prevent this problem and help ready the soil for next spring's planting. I thought I would pass this along to you and your readers. — Terry F., Hartford, Conn.

DEAR TERRY: Many thanks! Readers, this is an excellent suggestion and is just in time for the onset of cold weather.

Once you've cut down any old plant stalks in the garden and turned the soil over, cover the area with a thin layer of mulch (or leaves, grass or straw). If you're worried about the mulch blowing or washing away over the winter, place a sheet of chicken wire or screening on top of the mulch layer. Secure the screen in place with rocks or bricks, placed at the ends or corners so that rain and melting snow can filter through to the soil beneath.

Mulch is an excellent insulator for outdoor plants, enabling them to endure the coldest months. A light mix of raked leaves and homemade mulch (from that nice, rich pile you've been cultivating all year in the corner of the yard — right?) should be placed around the base of trees, shrubs and other plants. If you're not keen on creating your own, mulch is available at the nearest garden center or home-improvement store.

Late October through early November is a good time to plan for spring. If the first hard frost is less than three weeks away, it's a good time to plant those bulbs that you'd like to bloom in the spring. Also, any thin or bare spots in the lawn can be reseeded now — some seeds may sprout, but most will lie dormant through winter.

Finalize your garden winterizing work by disconnecting, draining and storing hoses and sprinklers. Next year's garden should be very nice, thanks to all this preparation!

Improving Water Quality

(NU) - There's one water source that many people are forgetting about when aiming to improve the water quality in their homes: the refrigerator.

Poor filtration can allow chemcial contaminants to pass through the refrigerator's water and ice system. To ensure clean drinking water and ice, the experts at FiltersFast.com, a leading retailer of water filters, recommend changing the water filter every six months.

If your refrigerator doesn't have a filtration system in the water and ice dispensing unit, it is recommended that you purchase and inline water filter that is easy to install and designed to fit most refrigerators.

For more information, visit www.filtersfast.com or call (866) 438-3458.

Home Improvement

(NU) - When it comes to making a home's features more functional for people with disabilities, many people don't know where to start.

To help homeowners create barrier-free spaces for family and friends with disabilities, Easter Seals and its corporate sponsors, Century 21 Real Estate LLC, teamed up to provide guidance and a variety of resources through the Web site, www.easterseals.com/easyaccess.

Presidents Prevail In Thriller Over Plymouth S.

FOOTBALL

By CHRIS POISSON

The Quincy High School football team remained in contention for a possible Atlantic Coast League championship with a thrilling 15-14 victory last Friday at Plymouth South.

The Presidents (3-3 overall, 3-1 ACL) scored a touchdown with 1:30 remaining in the game and converted a risky two-point conversion for the go-ahead points to hand the Panthers (5-1, 4-1) their first loss of the season.

Plymouth North (6-0 overall) leads the league with a 4-0 mark. It defeated Quincy, 13-7, Oct. 1. at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

"This allows us to stay where we are," said head coach Bob Noble. "We just have to keep playing. We'll see where we are at 1 o'clock in the afternoon on Thanksgiving Day. If we come up short, it means we come up short by seven points."

Quincy returns home tomorrow (Friday) night at 6:30 to take on Nauset, which is coming off a 28-0 loss to Sandwich.

Like it has all season, the Presidents' defense stood tall as the Panthers scored both touchdowns on a short field after recovering Quincy fumbles.

"Plymouth South didn't do a lot offensively," Noble said. "That's a credit to our defense. They've played great all year. Bill Reardon, the coordinator, has done a great job with them.

"Unfortunately, turnovers have been a problem for us. They happen at the most inopportune times, giving the other teams an advantageous position to score."

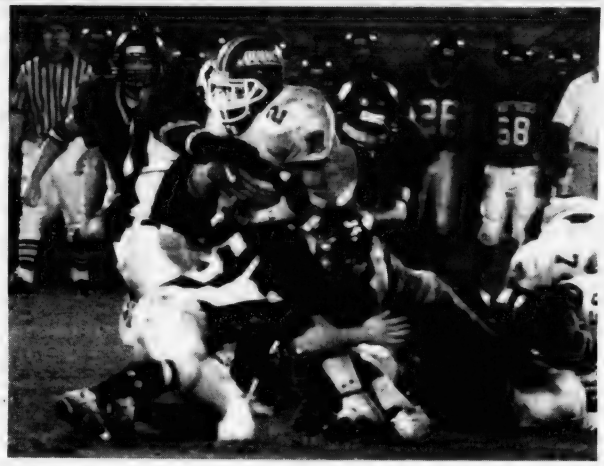
Aside from those turnovers, Quincy's offense did manage to orchestrate two long scoring drives against a team that given up only 19 points heading into the game.

Plymouth South grabbed a 7-0 lead in the first quarter after it recovered a fumble at the Quincy 20. Senior captain Eric Sundberg scored from 10 yards out and junior Anthony Tognacci added the extra point.

Quincy evened the score with 20 seconds left in the first half when junior quarterback Matt Boyle (5-of-14, 91 yards) fired a 26-yard TD pass to junior Tom Hazelhurst, capping a 10-play, 64-yard drive. Senior captain Everton DeCastro kicked the extra point.

In the third quarter, the Panthers recovered a fumble at the Quincy 15 and sophomore Derrick Duquette connected with Tognacci for a 9-yard TD pass. Tognacci's extra point made it 14-7.

Quincy engineered its game-winning drive beginning at its 32-yard line with 7:30 remaining in the game. Boyle found Hazelhurst for a 24-yard gain that put Quincy deep in PS territory and he capped the 12-play drive with a 1-yard TD run with 1:30 left to make it 14-13.



"My initial reaction was to kick the point after," Noble said. "Quite honestly, my assistant coaches advised me to go for the win at that moment of time. I agreed in all of about five seconds."

The Presidents lined up in their Power-I formation and DeCastro followed the surge created by captains Pat Stroud at halfback and D.J. Andrew at fullback into the end zone for the winning points.

"We didn't walk in; it was a rugby scrum," Noble said. "We ran that same short-yardage play very successfully during the game."

On Plymouth South's final possession, Andrew pressured the quarterback who threw up a pass that was intercepted by Hazelhurst. Quincy converted a fourth-and-1 play to run out the clock.

DeCastro turned in a strong all-around game, rushing for 107 yards on 26 carries, making a 15-yard reception, kicking an extra point, rushing for two points and returning three kickoffs for 101 yards. He also averaged 35 yards a punt

QUINCY DEFENDERS Chris Pratt (59) and Will Ortiz (44) try to get to Plymouth South's Eric Sundberg before he crosses the end zone for a 10-yard touchdown run in the first quarter.

North Quincy Heading To Tourney

GIRLS' SOCCER

The North Quincy High School girls' soccer team qualified for the Division 1 South tournament for the ninth straight year by edging Atlantic Coast League North champion Whitman-Hanson, 1-0, last Thursday at Teal Field.

The Red Raiders are undefeated in their last six games, going 4-0-2 during that stretch, including three shutout victories.

"We've been playing great soccer," said head coach Paul Bregoli. "We're not making mistakes any more. We're playing to our ability as well as we can. We're peaking at the right time. This is when you want to be playing well. The kids believe we're a good team now."

NQ (9-4-4 overall, 4-4-3 ACL) was scheduled to play city rival Quincy Wednesday. The rain date is today (Thursday) at 7 p.m. at Veterans Memorial Stadium. It travels to Bridgewater-Raynham Friday and hosts

BAD VIBES

Most trucks, RVs, 4x4s, and all rear-wheel-drive vehicles employ a driveshaft or propeller shaft to transmit power from the transmission to the differential, where it is transmitted to the rear wheels. Because the transmission and differential constantly change their position relative to each other, at least two universal joints (U-joints) are required. Driveshafts and U-joints are usually trouble-free, but vibration may pose problems. This usually occurs at higher speeds, and the vibration can be very violent if the imbalance is severe. U-joint failures usually occur when the bears wear out. If you experience propeller shaft vibration, take your vehicle immediately to a technician, who can inspect the driveshaft for dents, rust, or anything else that could cause imbalance.

If you notice any vibration while driving your car it could be a sign of wear in the driveshaft. The technicians at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO are properly trained to inspect, diagnose, and repair your automobile. When you bring your car to 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree you can trust our staff to find the problem and fix it right the first time. Don't wait, if you are having issues with your car call 781-843-1550 today and get it checked out. We are "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer."

HINT: The first indication of U-joint problems is often clunking upon acceleration or when changing gears.

City Tennis Tournament Crowns 12 Division Winners

Newcomer Joshua Pendergast and defending champion Patrice Sullivan won the Men's and Women's Singles in the recent 35th annual City Tennis Tournament sponsored by the Quincy Recreation Department and Quincy Credit Union.

The Quincy fall classic, played over three weeks at the Russell Park tennis courts, saw a mix of familiar names and some up-and-coming players capture titles in 12 divisions.

Pendergast downed Bill Stevens, 6-3, 6-2, to receive the Lionel "Shine" Buckley Bowl. Sullivan beat tourney regular Phoebe Chan, 6-0, 7-6, to defend her Women's Singles title and defeated the two-time champion again in Women's 35 and Over Singles, 6-3, 4-6, 6-3.

Eight-time winner Aileen Eleey has a new family member to join with her on the Women's Doubles championship bowl. She partnered with her youngest daughter, Jacquelyn, to beat Phoebe Chan and Bernadette Wisniewski, 6-2, 6-4.

Aileen teamed with her mother, Isabelle, to win in 1993 and with her daughter, Alison, to win in 2003 and 2004.

In Mixed Doubles, Alison Eleey and Ron Abell bowed out to Kevin Murphy and Rushri Wijesundera, 6-4, 4-6, 7-6, in one of the most competitive finals seen in the tournament's history. Murphy and Wijesundera were presented the William F. Ryan Bowl.

In Men's 35 and Over Singles, John Zarnoch held off two-time defending champion Victor Luzarraga, 6-3, 5-7, 6-2, to win the first of two titles.

Zarnoch and Luzarraga joined forces to win the Men's Doubles, 6-2, 6-1, over Paul Carty and Kevin Murphy. They received the Henry "The Master" McAuliffe Bowl.

Longtime participant Bernie Holleran received the Richard Meade Bowl in the Men's 50 and Over Singles. He moved through a tough draw to knock off tourney newcomer Richard Skehan, 6-0, 6-2.

In the Men's B Singles, Bill Flach beat Angus Jennings, 6-4, 7-6. The event is made from players who are defeated in Men's Singles.

In the Boys' 16 and Under Singles, Kevin Chan and Robert Yee showed why they'll be players to watch as Yee was crowned champion by winning, 6-1, 6-2.

These 10 events were open to Quincy residents only in a tournament that has been recognized by USLTA and is considered one of the longest running municipal public court tournaments in New England.

Two events were added for city employees who do not have to be Quincy residents. Quincy fireman Jack Goddard defended his Men's City Employee championship, besting retired Planning Director Richard Meade, 7-0, 7-5.

For the first time there was a champion in the Women's City Employee event as Cami Medeiros, a Quincy High School physical education teacher, defeated Kristen Keohane of the Park Department, 6-1, 6-4.

Recreation Director Barry Welch, Tournament Director John Franceschini and Assistant Director Michelle Hanley presented awards to the champions and finalists. The champions also have their names engraved on permanent tournament bowls that date back to the start of the tournament.

Welch thanked Franceschini and Hanley. "Our tournament would not continue without the knowledge and enthusiasm of these two longtime directors," he said. "From the seeding, the many changes due to weather and participants schedules, this is not an easy task."

"I would also like to thank the board of directors and executives of the Quincy Credit Union, who understand the value of continuing this community event," he added. "We could not provide this family-oriented event and all its positive values without the credit union's financial partnership.

"Also the caliber of play and sportsmanship shown by all participants is what makes this a unique program for Quincy residents through generations. They are to be commended."

North Quincy Clinches League Championship

GIRLS' VOLLEYBALL

By CHRIS POISSON

The North Quincy High School girls' volleyball team clinched the Atlantic Coast League championship last Friday with a 3-0 victory at city rival and defending champion Quincy.

The Red Raiders (15-3 overall) finished league play with a perfect 10-0 record, including 30-0 in games.

"We had a tough non-league schedule to help us be competitive in our league and we certainly were," said head coach Jim Rendle. "I was pleased we went undefeated. That showed how dominant we were in our league"

North Quincy, which faced Bourne Monday and Canton Wednesday, hosts Arlington Catholic today (Thursday) at 5:30 p.m. and closes out the regular season next Monday against Bourne at home at 6 p.m.

Quincy (10-6 overall, 7-3 ACL) finished the regular season Wednesday (5:30 p.m.) when it hosted Barnstable, the No. 1 team in the state.

The Presidents took a 5-1 lead in game one before numerous receiving errors allowed the Red Raiders to climb back and win, 25-14. The Red Raiders cruised in the second game, 25-15, and pulled out a close 25-23 win in the third game.

Senior captain and middle hitter Erin Connolly led the team with 12 kills. Sophomore middle hitter Virginia Wong played a strong all-around game with eight kills, two blocks and two aces. Senior outside hitter Allison Aupperlee tallied 20 digs.

For Quincy, senior tri-captain and middle hitter Ashlee Scott registered 16 kills, eight digs and three blocks and sophomore middle hitter Liz Bock added 14 kills, six digs and two blocks.

Senior tri-captains and setters Leanna Lam (five digs, five kills) and Kim LeBel (six digs) combined for 20 assists. Joanne Wall and senior libero Nicole Kasanoff each had six digs.

"We didn't play well," said head coach Christine Barrett. "We made a lot of mistakes in the first game that put us behind the eight ball. We missed seven serves in the match. We struggled in our serving and receiving."

Last Wednesday, North Quincy routed Whitman-Hanson, winning 25-3, 25-6 and 25-12. Senior outside hitter Matrida Neli received valuable experience that should help in the tournament, totaling two kills, two aces and 10 digs. Junior setter Marie Della Croce had 17 assists and Wong added four aces and four kills.

Quincy defeated Plymouth North, 25-22, 25-15 and 25-11. Bock (16 kills, five digs) and Scott (12 kills, six digs, three blocks) powered the offense. Kasanoff (five kills, 10 digs), Wall (seven kills, four aces), Lam (five kills, 10 assists) and junior outside hitter Carla Nickerson (five kills, four blocks) all played well.

Last Tuesday, the Red Raiders suffered a 3-0 setback at home to a strong Medfield team, losing 23-25, 22-25 and 23-25. Connolly paced the team with 14 kills and three blocks. Aupperlee added six kills and 15 digs and junior setter Arta Dashi had 14 digs.

"They're probably the best defensive team in the state and we tried to be aggressive and that cost us," Rendle said. "We had 17 hitting errors and 11 serving errors which is uncharacteristic of us. Normally we play a ball-control game. We'll learn from it and get ready for the second season."

The Presidents picked up a victory at Dennis-Yarmouth, winning 25-15, 25-17, 23-25 and 25-11. Scott (four aces, 10 digs) and Bock once again ignited the offense with a combined 32 kills.

LeBel (two aces, 10 digs, eight kills) and Lam (five digs) each notched 15 assists. Sophomore outside hitter Marybeth Torpey had nine kills and six digs and Nickerson had eight kills.

North Quincy Tourney Bound For 9th Straight Year

them Monday at 3 p.m. to close out the regular season.

On Monday, the Red Raiders pulled out a 2-1 win at Plymouth North. They had trouble clicking offensively in the first half, generating just two quality scoring chances against one of the top keepers in the league in Joanna Bergman.

Scoreless at halftime, they got on the board with 13 minutes remaining in the game. Junior defender Bridget Coleman made a great run up the left side and passed to sophomore forward Paige Bonanni on her right.

Bonanni redirected the ball to senior captain Caitlin McCleary, who somehow twisted her body to hit a volley kick to the top right corner, stunning Bergman.

McCleary, who has scored in five of the past six games, leads the league in scoring with 17 goals and six assists.

The Panthers tallied the equalizer with six minutes remaining when a forward gathered an errant clear-out to the middle of the field and rocketed a shot past junior keeper Kristen Reamer.

The Red Raiders quickly answered a minute later. Sophomore midfielder Emily Milone hit a ball in front of the net off a corner kick, which sophomore forward Mary Kate Stille redirected for her fifth goal of the season.

In the W-H game, the Panthers had only one loss going into the contest and had severely beaten NQ, 5-0, on their field turf playing surface Sept. 22. NQ's home grass field slowed the quicker W-H team down.

The Red Raiders struck early when McCleary scored from directly out front, converting Emily Milone's cross.

W-H pressed the attack for the remainder of the half, failing to convert several glittering chances. NQ marked well and won the 50/50 balls at midfield to help keep the Panthers from building up their attack.

Senior Katherine Andreosatos, junior Keriann Cabral and Benn used their skill and quickness at midfield to negate the W-H forays.

Midway through the second half, McCleary nearly put the Red Raiders up two but her shot was cleared off the goal line.

NQ's defense, led by junior Tara Whooley, Phelan, Coleman and Mendall, stiffened in the second half. Reamer was solid in net, registering her first shutout of the season.

Last Tuesday, NQ traveled to Plymouth South and escaped with a hard-fought 1-0 win — its first victory there since 1998.

The Red Raiders dominated play in the first half but the game was locked in a scoreless tie. Best chances came from McCleary, Emily Milone and junior midfielder Lauren Stille.

Early in the second half, NQ put sustained pressure on the hosts. Again, McCleary came up big, taking a feed from senior captain Lauren Milone and knocking it past the Plymouth South keeper. It was Emily Milone's hustle play that got the ball to her sister, Lauren.

The Red Raiders survived a scare with 15 seconds left in the game when a Plymouth South corner kick resulted in a ball about to cross the goal line. However, Whooley made the biggest play of the season, clearing the ball off the line to preserve the win.

Reamer again stood out in goal with a shutout. Coleman and Phelan were solid defensively while senior captain Annmarie Campanale and freshman Amy Carchedi also played well at forward.

Tips From The American Heart Association

The Good And Bad Of Cholesterol

(NAPS) — Cholesterol can be both good and bad. With coronary heart disease the single largest killer of Americans, managing cholesterol levels and taking care of your heart can help you lead a longer, healthier life.

That's why all Americans should know what their — and their children's — cholesterol levels are, how those levels affect cardiovascular health and how a healthy diet low in dietary cholesterol, saturated fat and trans fat can help control cholesterol.

These tips from the American Heart Association may help:

Know what cholesterol is

Cholesterol is a soft, fat-like, waxy substance found in the bloodstream and in all your body's cells. It plays an important role in a healthy body, aiding in the production of cell membranes and some hormones. Too high a level of cholesterol in the blood, however, can present a major risk for coronary heart disease, which can lead to heart attack or stroke.

Know the numbers

• LDL (low-density lipoprotein) cholesterol is considered "bad" cholesterol because it can build up as plaque and clog arteries. An optimal level of LDL cholesterol is less than 100mg/dL. A level of 160 mg/dL or higher increases the risk of heart disease.

• HDL (high-density lipoprotein) cholesterol is the "good" cholesterol. Medical experts believe it removes excess cholesterol from the arteries and protects against heart attack. Ideal HDL cholesterol levels are 40 mg/dL or more.

• Triglyceride (TG) is a form of fat, and many people with heart disease and high LDL levels have high TG levels, as do diabetics and obese people.

Steps for prevention

To control your cholesterol, the American Heart Association recommends you get total, LDL and HDL cholesterol and triglyceride levels measured, maintain a health weight, be active, follow your health care professional's recommendations and eat foods low in saturated fat and trans fats, as well as cholesterol.

Use the heart-check mark

Smart eating can help control cholesterol levels. So, when grocery shopping, use the red heart with the white check mark to quickly and reliably find heart-healthy foods certified by the American Heart Association. Products bearing the heart-check mark meet the Association's nutrition criteria for being low in saturated fat and cholesterol. To make food shopping even easier, log on to heartcheckmark.org before you go.

Plantar Fasciitis

By Dr. JAY PROVENZANO

Did you know the average person takes approximately 5,000 steps per day? That is a lot of abuse on your feet. Of course footwear plays a major role in the health of your feet, but that cannot always correct the problem.

There are thousands and maybe even millions of people walking around with foot pain every day. Some may have a condition known as plantar fasciitis. This is characterized by pain on the bottom of the foot while walking or at rest.

Plantar fasciitis is an inflammation of the plantar fascia in the bottom of the foot. This condition can stem from a number of problems, such as too little or too much movement of the surrounding structures, muscular imbalance, nutritional deficiencies or an overuse syndrome.

There are several approaches to help the body recover from plantar fasciitis and to establish balance to prevent a future recurrence. Chiropractic can help by aligning the bones of the foot.

Some chiropractors have studied a special technique called Graston Technique, which decreases the scar tissue adhesions in the affected region. The Graston practitioner uses special tools to help him/her accomplish these corrections.

Chiropractic manipulation is an excellent way to restore proper movement to the joints of the foot. By restoring motion to the joint, the foot will be able to flex properly during walking and alleviate stress on the surrounding muscle and nervous structures.

Finally, some patients have nutritional deficiencies which affect the ligaments and fascia. Supplementing a healthy diet with specific minerals has also proven helpful for many patients with plantar fasciitis.

(Dr. Jay Provenzano is a chiropractic physician and has extensive training in several muscular techniques including Graston Technique. Dr. Ann Doggett is a chiropractor, licensed nutritionist and owner of South Bay Chiropractic, 110 West Squantum St., Suite 27, North Quincy. Finding the Right Personal Trainer

Q. I am interested in hiring a personal trainer to help me develop a fitness program. I have diabetes and want to make sure the trainer is educated on my condition and needs. How do I know if a personal trainer is qualified to train someone with my condition?

A. Hiring a personal trainer is an important investment, and there are many factors to consider before making a decision. Education, experience, personality and professionalism are all areas that should be investigated before agreeing to become a client.

The education and certifications of the trainer you choose are extremely important. Do not let the appearance of a trainer give you the impression that he or she is educated and equipped to train you. And just because someone was a professional bodybuilder or professional athlete does not mean they have the knowledge to safely design and implement an exercise program.

It is preferred that your trainer have a bachelor's, master's or doctorate degree in an exercise-science field (kinesiology, athletic training, physiology, etc.), in addition to a fitness-industry certification.

There are hundreds of certifications that are available to aspiring personal trainers — however, not all are created equal. Four certifications highly recognized by the fitness industry are the American College of Sports Medicine (ACSM), National Academy of Sports Medicine (NASM), National Strength and Conditioning Association (NSCA) and the National Athletic Trainers Association (NATA). All four require proof of prerequisite education, CPR and first aid certification, and a passed proctored examination before granting certification.

Your trainer should be open to discuss his or her education and certifications. If you receive a response that implies that education or certifications are not necessary because of his or her experience, I would consider that a red flag.

Ask your potential trainer about his or her experience with training diabetics. Even if someone is educated and certified, hiring a trainer that has specific experience in this area can be very beneficial. By law, personal trainers can give basic nutrition guidelines, but are not able to design meal plans or sell or suggest the usage of supplements. Unless your trainer also has a degree and training in nutrition, I would suggest meeting with a dietician or nutritionist to discuss your needs as a diabetic.

Finally, let's not underestimate the need for you to feel comfortable and enjoy the personality and attitude of your trainer. Your trainer should help establish realistic goals and encourage and motivate you along the way. He or she should be open to feedback and take your needs into consideration when designing a fitness program.

It may seem like work to find a trainer with all these attributes, but I believe the investment in your health is worth it.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program.

THE GREAT COVERUP!

When used in cosmetic dentistry, veneers or laminates are any materials that are used to cover up the front side of a tooth to make a cosmetic improvement. When it comes to veneers, porcelain is the material of choice. It is strong, durable, and able to resist discoloration. It also best approximates the natural look of tooth enamel. In addition, because it creates a thin, smooth transition between the veneer and tooth at the gumline, it allows minimal chance of plaque accumulation that might compromise periodontal health. These thin appliques of porcelain may be applied to the teeth to correct a number of tooth imperfections, including defects in the enamel, gaps and other spaces, discoloration, and fractures.

Porcelain veneers applied over your natural teeth can easily brighten your smile and your self-esteem. We discuss all the treatment options available, and our recommendations are always in the best interest of our patients. We feel a deep responsibility and commitment to provide you the very best care with state-of-the-art technology. Good dental health is no accident. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. Please call us at 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment for high quality dental care. Let us help you keep your teeth for a lifetime. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Porcelain veneers may be used to lengthen teeth, as well as to give the illusion that malpositioned teeth are straighter.

Scam Alert

By LIEUTENANT DAN MINTON
Quincy Police Department
Crime Prevention Unit

This past week, a scam was attempted on Quincy residents.

A senior citizen received a call informing her that was the winner of a sweepstakes and she would be mailed her winnings, however, she would first have to pay the taxes. She was given the address to send her check.

She elected to call the Quincy Police Department and was advised not to get involved in the scam. If you receive a call similar to this, the obvious question you need to ask yourself is, "Did I enter the sweepstakes?" Any sweepstakes that requires the winner to pay taxes up front is not legitimate. Taxes on large prizes are paid directly to the government after you receive your winnings.

Another situation arose recently when I received a call at home from the New England Police Officers' Association, soliciting donations in order to provide "advance training" to police officers. I asked them to send me a pamphlet describing the association. The telemarketer said that a pamphlet would be sent with a receipt after the donation was made.

This is one of the warning sings of a questionable charity. I asked her where she was calling from and she said that the company is located in Wisconsin. After further inquiries, I learned that the New England Police Officers' Association receives only 15 percent of the revenue collected by the telemarketers.

Remember, with any solicitation for police associations, departments or agencies, the topic of training is often used to lure you. As a taxpayer, you already pay for our mandatory training.

When the telemarketing company receives 85% of your donation, you are paying their salaries. If you have questions about a specific charity, call the Massachusetts Attorney General's Office at (617) 727-2200, ext. 2101.

A Job Well Done

By LT. DAN MINTON

On Friday, Oct. 14, at approximately 9:07 a.m., Officers William Lanergan and Paul Jackson were dispatched to the Star Market on Granite St. for a "Disorder in Progress." As the officers neared, the dispatcher told them that the male suspect was drinking bleach inside the store.

LT. DAN MINTON

Upon arrival, the officers were met by the store manager, who stated that the man was "nuts", then told them the following: The suspect had been in the men's room for a long time, so he (the manager) went to check on his welfare. After knocking on the door, the suspect emerged and sprayed the manager with oven cleaner, then fled to the cleaning product aisle where he opened a bottle of bleach and drank from the container.

The suspect then sprayed Raid into his mouth. The suspect, with two bottles of bleach in hand, then returned to the men's room, closed the door briefly, then came back out, still holding bottles of bleach. The suspect, now spitting up blood and screaming, ran around the store.

Store employees called "911", and once the officers arrived, they began their search of the suspect, described as 6 feet tall and weighing 200 pounds. Officers Paul Pieper, John O'Donnell and Sergeant Igo also responded.

Officer Lanergan found the suspect in the aisle, drinking from the bleach bottle. The suspect then lunged at Officer Lanergan's holster, trying to get his gun. Officer Lanergan then pushed the suspect away, ordered him to lie flat on his stomach and called on his radio for help.

Officer Pieper ran down the aisle and tried to subdue the suspect, but was kicked and punched. Officer Paul Jackson came to the scene and he was able to get one handcuff on the suspect, who was spitting blood at the officers.

Due to the slippery floor, covered in spilled bleach, blood and vomit, it was difficult to restrain the suspect. Officer Lanergan then used his mace, but failed to control him. Officer Duran came to assist and he used his mace on the suspect.

Now the mix of bleach and mace fumes was taking its toll on the officers. Officer Lanergan then used his baton and struck the suspect in the thigh area and after numerous attempts, the officers used two sets of handcuffs to restrain the suspect, who continued to spit blood at the officers.

Once under control, the suspect was transported by Fallon Ambulance to Quincy Medical Center for treatment. Officers involved in the apprehension also went to the hospital to be treated for exposure to blood and inhalation of bleach and mace.

Detective Menz, who conducted the follow-up investigation, went into the bathroom where the suspect had been and found a plastic bag, a pair of shoelaces, and an empty container of Benadryl pills. Based on all information available, it appears that the suspect wanted to commit suicide, but due to the diligence of all officers involved, he was unsuccessful.

At the time of this story, the suspect's identity is unknown and he was transferred to a psychiatric hospital. Criminal charges are pending.

In summary, the officers involved initially responded to a "Disorder in Progress," which quickly elevated to a suicidal, raging maniac, who intended to complete his mission, ultimately fighting Officer Lanergan for his gun. This is just another example of the uncertainty of day-to-day police work.

The confrontation alone is the immediate stressor. The exposure of the suspect's blood onto the officer's skin is a serious health concern since, at this time, we still don't know who he is. The efforts by all these officers saved this man's life. Nice work!

SCOTT DEWARE

A Thought For The Week

WITNESS! Let's think about the word, not necessarily in a religious sense, but from an earthly view of human reaction. All of us witness things every day. We see varying circumstances, situations and attitudes all around us, both good and bad. As we witness these things in other people, wouldn't it be a good idea for us to ponder what other people see or witness in us? Each of us individually sets a standard of behavior, thought and expression linked to ourselves. In doing this, we naturally provide a scene or knowledge for others to witness. The things we do and the things we say cause people to talk about us favorably or gossip about us unfavorably.

We create our own image, good or bad. We control the destinies of our image in the minds and thoughts of others. When we can be rightfully proud of what others witness in us, we gain an inner gladness that automatically portrays a better, more likable image.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You might be growing impatient with a situation that seems to resist efforts to resolve it. But staying with it raises the odds that you'll find a way to a successful resolution.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Travel and kinship are strong in the Bovine's aspect this week. This would be a good time to combine the two and take a trip to see family members for a pre-holiday get-together.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A colleague could make a request you're not comfortable with. If so, say so. Better to disappoint someone by sticking with your principles than disappoint yourself if you don't.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) The Moon Child's ability to adapt to life's ebbs and flows helps you deal with the changes that you might confront at work or at home, or both. Things settle down by the week's end.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) It's a good week for Leos and Leonas to get some long-outstanding business matters resolved. Then go ahead and plan a fun-filled family getaway weekend with the mate and the cubs.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A possible workplace change seems promising. If you decide to look into it, try not to form an opinion on just a small part of the picture: Wait for the full image to develop.

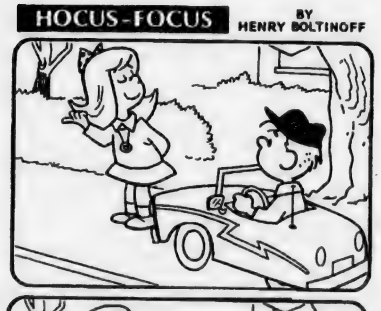
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A newcomer helps keep things moving. There might be some bumpy moments along the way, but at least you're heading in the right direction. You win praise for your choices.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You could be pleasantly surprised by how a decision about one thing opens up an unexpected new option. Also, assistance on a project could come from a surprising source.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) With more information to work with, you might now be able to start the process that could lead to a major change. Reserve the weekend for family and friends.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) This could be a good time to begin gathering information that will help you turn that long-held idea into something substantive. A personal matter might need extra attention.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) That new challenge might carry some surprises. But you should be able to handle them using what you already know. That new supporter should be there to lend assistance.



PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Someone might be trying to disguise his or her true motives. But the perceptive and perspicacious Pisces should have little or no problem finding the truth in all that foggy rhetoric.

BORN THIS WEEK: You can always rely on your people skills to help you find solutions to problems others often give up on.

Light Vote Seen For Next Tuesday

Open Council, School Seats In Election Spotlight

Contests for five open seats — three school committee and two council — will take the spotlight in next Tuesday's city election.

City Clerk Joseph Shea sees a light turnout with about 22 percent of the 54,899 registered voters actually casting ballots.

Shea said the fact there is no mayor's race on the ballot and that five ward councillors are unopposed will dampen voter interests.

Another indication the turnout will be small is the few requests for absentee ballots compared with previous elections.

Two years ago, with a mayor's race and three ward council races 35 percent of the voters turned out.

Mayor William Phelan, seeking a third term, has no opposition on the ballot.

But Charles Dennehy, 57, of 610 Willard St., an auto dealership employee, is running a sticker campaign.

Three new school committee members, a new councilor at-large and a new Ward 6 councillor will be elected next Tuesday.

Six candidates seek the three open seats on the school committee, guaranteeing three new faces on that board.

The open seats are those of Vice Chairman Michael McFarland, Ronald Mariano and Jo-Ann Bragg. McFarland is running for councillor at-large. Mariano and Bragg are leaving after serving 16 and 12 years, respectively.

The six contenders, nomination winners in a 12-candidate preliminary runoff in September, are in the order they appear on the ballot:

Ronald P. Iacobucci, 50, head of a group planning to build a mini-Fenway Park in Quincy.

Joseph Keegan, 35, 21 Moreland Road, attorney and former Quincy police officer.

Phelan Calls For MWRA Wetlands Mitigation Here

Mayor William Phelan has requested the Massachusetts Water Resource Authority (MWRA) perform wetlands mitigation required as a result of the Blue Hills Covered Storage Project in the limits of the city of Quincy.

In a letter to Fred Laskey, executive director of the MWRA, Phelan said:

"I would request that you consider Quincy for your wetlands mitigation project(s). We have sites that would fit your needs and would be of great service to the citizens and taxpayers of Quincy.

"I believe that the projects we have would meet your obligation and be of reasonable cost to the Authority."

The MWRA is creating the covered storage area in place of their reservoir in the Blue Hills Reservation to provide emergency drinking water to area residents. Administrative Magistrate Mark Sullivan freed the MWRA from further mitigation in the immediate vicinity of the project but did suggest that the MWRA now has a "wetlands mitigation deficit" of 8.7 acres.

"I believe it appropriate that whereas the loss of wetlands is in the Quincy limits than the mitigation should also be performed within the city," Phelan said. "The changes will drastically affect the enjoyment of the reservation by Quincy residents and there should be recognition of that through mitigation in other parts of our city."

Quincy has been improving wetlands throughout the Houghs Neck peninsula over the past three years. There are plans in place to transform the Broadmeadows marsh from a phragmites wasteland to a thriving saltwater marsh and 30-acre waterfront park.

The city has also begun preliminary studies of restoring the Squantum and Marina Bay marshes. The city hopes to restore the Dickinson parcel in Marina Bay, which was acquired for open space with state grant monies.

"Wetlands restoration has been a priority in our city and there is no shortage of projects that the MWRA could assist us with," Phelan said. "I hope that we can work cooperatively to restore the quality of the environment in Quincy. It is important to our residents, our environment and my administration that we continue to improve our wetlands and natural environment."

Part Of Reorganization

Crowley To Bolster Police Dept. Drug Unit

Police Chief Robert Crowley announced his ongoing efforts to reorganize the Quincy Police Department will include an increase in the amount of officers assigned to the Drug Unit and improving the coordination between the Drug Unit and detectives assigned to breaking and entering cases.

There are currently two police officers and a lieutenant assigned to the Drug Unit. Crowley will reassign existing personnel to bolster the unit to seven members.

"I applaud Chief Crowley's efforts to continue to improve our police department," said Mayor William Phelan. "The existence of a drug problem in a community can lead to all kinds of other crimes. The Drug Unit is the appropriate place to focus our resources in an effort to maintain the safe and welcoming environment we enjoy here in Quincy. Quincy does not have the problems of other urban areas and we intend to keep it that way."

Crowley also reassigned personnel to improve communication between the Drug Unit and the detectives assigned to investigating breaking and entering cases and robberies.

"We have found that robberies and B&E cases are often fueled by drugs," Crowley said. "A large percentage of these crimes are committed by a small number of people. If we can get them off the street, I believe we will see a dramatic reduction in a wide variety of crimes."

Father Bill's Place To Host Thanksgiving Day Dinner

Father Bill's Place will host its annual Thanksgiving Dinner of the community Thursday, Nov. 24, from 12 noon to 3 p.m. at Christ Episcopal Church. 12 Quincy Ave., Quincy.

All are welcome.

Homebound individuals may order dinner for home delivery by calling 617-770-3314, ext. 331, and leaving name, address (including apartment number), telephone number and the number of meals requested.

Family members who are unable to attend will be honored by including their names on a wall of honor the students will be creating for the ceremony.

Adams Direct Descendant Criticizes War In Iraq

A direct descendant of John Adams joined those who have expressed doubts about the war in Iraq Monday even as the nation honored his ancestor, the second president of the United States.

"Our problem is we have an open ended engagement that never had a final objective," said Peter Boylston Adams.

"We must establish a firm objective for what we would define as victory, set that standard, accomplish that standard and bring our young boys and young women home."

Adams, treasurer of the Adams Memorial Foundation, spoke at ceremonies observing the 270th birthday of John Adams with the laying of the annual White House wreath on his tomb at First Parish Church.

Adams noted that he was a veteran of 12 months in combat during the Vietnam war and that he had three sons on active duty, one of them just back from service in the mountains of Afghanistan.

"I fought in a war that at the time I thought was right," he said, "It was during an administration that was committed to that war. History records that war was fought for the wrong reason in the wrong place.

"We are in a terrible conflict in the Middle East. The United States has suffered in excess of 19,000 casualties in Iraq and probably another 2,500 in Afghanistan. If not for superior medical availability, the cost would be higher.

"The U.S. Army has failed to meet its objectives for recruiting and that tells you that we need to establish an objective and we need to convey it clearly to our elected lawmakers in Washington to give these men a chance to come home."

Adams was only one of a roster of speakers that included Peggy Baker, director of Pilgrim Hall in Plymouth, who spoke of the Adams family's relationship to John Alden and Priscilla Mullin of "Why don't you speak for yourself, John?" fame.

Also James Taylor, editor in chief of the Adams Papers Project for the Massachusetts Historical Society; Lt. Brad Colletti,, executive officer of the USS Constitution (Old Ironsides); Adrian Dede, a senior at the Woodward School for Girls.

Also Mayor William Phelan; Dr. Edward Fitzgerald, director of the Quincy Historical Society; Marianne Peak, superintendent of the Adams National Historical Park; Kirt Switzer, chairman of the Board of Governors of United First Parish Church.

Lt. Commander Scott Graham, commanding officer of the Quincy Naval Reserve Center, representing President George W. Bush, placed the presidential wreath on the Adams tomb, a tradition that was begun by President Lyndon Johnson 40 years ago.

Hymns sung at the ceremonies were "Alas! How Swift the Moments Fly," with the text written by John Quincy Adams; and "When Erst the Fathers of the Land," with text written by Louisa Catherine Adams, John Quincy's wife.

John Quincy Adams, the nation's sixth president, and his wife, Louisa, as well as John's wife, Abigail, are buried alongside John Adams in the crypt at First Parish Church, where they worshipped many years ago.

Musical selections were provided by U.S. Navy Brass Ensemble from Newport, R.I.; the Central Middle School Girls Choral Group from Quincy; and the Annisquam Village Church Choir from Gloucester.

Police To Strictly Enforce Overnight Parking Ordinances

Chief Robert Crowley warns the Police Department will vigorously enforce the city's overnight parking and sidewalk parking ordinances in the coming months.

Crowley said the enforcement effort was necessary to ensure that emergency vehicles and snow removal equipment can pass down city streets.

"Quincy residents should be aware of the ordinances restricting overnight parking and parking on sidewalks," Crowley said. "Our department will be enforcing these ordinances in the coming months to ensure an improved level of public safety. We do not intend to wait for a tragedy to respond to this problem."

Residents may be eligible for an overnight parking sticker, allowing their car to be parked on a city street. Residents must apply for a sticker at the Police Department at One Sea St.

The Police Department will assess the individual's request in terms of the amount of available off-street parking. Stickers are granted on an "as-needed" basis only.

"The increase in the amount of vehicles per household and the heavy amount of snow last year caused some precarious situations that we want to avoid this year," Crowley said. "We ask that residents cooperate with the city and keep their cars off the streets as much as possible. Cooperation is a much better solution than enforcement."

Cars are prohibited from parking on city streets from 1 a.m. to 5 a.m. without an overnight parking permit. Cars are not allowed to park on sidewalks at any time.

"Our summer neighborhood meetings have helped us identify parking issues as one of the main concerns of our residents," said Mayor William Phelan. "We will systematically address this issue and enforce our existing ordinances to improve public safety."

Project SAFE Saturday In Elderly Homes

Project S.A.F.E., the day that firefighters and volunteers fan out across the city to install and update smoke detectors in the homes of the elderly, will be Saturday, Nov. 5, this year.

It was originally scheduled for Oct. 1 but so many Quincy firefighters wound up in New Orleans and environs helping victims of Hurricane Katrina that the day had to be postponed.

"This unique program provides an essential citywide service for seniors at no cost to seniors or to the city," said Sharron Beals, executive director of Beechwood on the Bay, one of the sponsoring organizations.

"Since we launched this initiative nine years ago, we have installed more than 8,200 smoke detectors in the homes of Quincy seniors."

In those nine years, Project S.A.F.E. has installed 8,000 detectors with an estimated value of $96,000 and batteries and other products worth $2,700.

During the day, 20 service teams, made up of firefighters, volunteers from Quincy Rotary Club and Rotary "Interact" students from Quincy and North Quincy High School will check, install and replace detectors and batteries in the homes of "at risk" seniors.

The National Fire Prevention Association (NFPA) is donating 10-year lithium batteries.

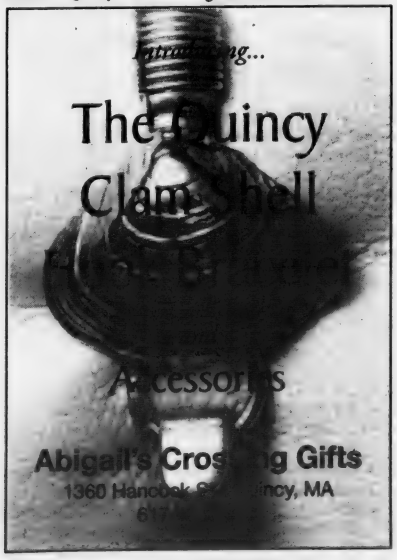
"At risk" seniors, those 70 or older or those with mobility or vision limitations, can call Beechwood on the Bay at 617-471-5712 to request a home visit Nov. 5.

"This community program has become a model throughout the Commonwealth and beyond," said Beals. "Sharon Gamache of NFPA tells us that NFPA now promotes our service concept and model nationally and internationally."

Veterans Day Parade Scheduled For Nov. 11

Quincy's Veterans Day Parade will be held Friday, Nov. 11, stepping off at 10:30 a.m. with ceremonies scheduled for about 11 a.m. at the Adams Academy.

The guest speaker will be Colonel Christopher C. Hines, staff judge advocate of the Massachusetts Army National Guard.



The event will be dedicated to all of the city's men and women who are currently serving in the armed forces defending freedom.

The parade, sponsored by the Quincy Veterans Council, will start on School Street and wind its way down Hancock Street to the Academy.

Thomas Stansbury of the Quincy Veterans' Services Department is parade chairman.

In the event of inclement weather, the exercises will be held in the Center for Technical Education on Coddington Street.

Information on any change in plans will be broadcast on WJDA, Radio 1300 AM.

McCauley: 'Time To Go'

One of Quincy's most familiar and enduring political names will be missing from next Tuesday's election ballot.

Frank McCauley will be looking at this election as a spectator, not a player for the first time in 32 years.

McCAULEY

At age 75, he is closing out a distinguished career spanning those 32 years. And will go into retirement as an historic Quincy political figure.

He is the only person in the city's 116-year history to hold all four of the city's elective municipal offices: mayor, councillor at-large, ward councillor and school committeeman.

He has been in 17 municipal elections with 15 wins and just two losses. If he was a major league baseball pitcher, with that record he'd be a millionaire.

He is also the only Republican in Quincy elective office.

Does he have mixed feelings about leaving the political arena?

"I've always looked forward to elections as a candidate," he says. "But I will still do so even though my name won't be on the ballot.

"I have no regrets about leaving. It's time to go. You can't stay forever. I'm comfortable with my decision."

McCauley is leaving on a high note.

For the past two years he has been city council president and in his last election two years ago topped the council at-large field.

His 32 years in elective office ranks him second in the city's history. The longevity champ: Dr. Nathaniel Hunting who served 36 years, all of them on the school committee.

During his four terms as mayor — 1982-1989 — McCauley, a former bank president, built a reputation of a no-nonsense, penny-pinching chief executive who believed in spending for necessities but balked at unnecessary frills and extras.

McCauley also called the shots as he saw them and didn't worry whether it cost him votes as long as he believed he was right.

Since his return to the city council in 1998, McCauley has been a fiscal watchdog, keeping close tabs on where the taxpayers' money is going — and why.

For that reason alone, he will be missed by many.

"It's time to go," he says. "Time to turn it over to someone else."

But you get the feeling you might see him in the audience at city council meetings, keeping an eye on things.

FORMER WARD 6 Councillor Joe Newton, who ran for mayor two years ago, hasn't lost his interest in the political scene.

NEWTON

Newton and Steve Curran, owner of the Fox & Hound on Sea Street, are planning a free "Night Before Election Get-Together" at that restaurant Monday, Nov. 7, at 6 p.m.

This year's city election candidates, present and past elected officials, campaign workers and friends are invited to stop by and socialize.

"It will be a nice time for this year's candidates to relax from campaigning," says Newton. "There will be appetizers and an open soda bar. We hope to make it an annual event."

Anyone wanting more information can call Newton at 617-328-2046.

GOVERNOR MITT ROMNEY will be in town Wednesday, Nov. 9.

ROMNEY

Tom O'Connell and Tony Agnitti are hosting an 8 a.m. breakfast for him at the Granite Links Golf Course, Quarry Hills Drive. Tickets are $500 per.

IT'S WEDDING BELLS for former Ward 4 Councillor Bryan Connolly and Carol Civello.

CONNOLLY

They will be married Saturday, Nov. 12, at St. Joseph's Church in Boston's old West End. The reception will be at the Omni Parker House.

Bryan will have two best men — not the traditional one. They are his older brothers, Kevin and David Connolly.

Carol, originally from Norwell, is a Nurse Practitioner at Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center. She and Bryan met three years ago at a wedding of two friends.

Bryan is now a lawyer with a Boston law firm, DLA Piper Rudnick Gray Cary. But keeping active in Quincy civic and political circles. He's a member of the Quincy Park and Recreation Board, a member of the Ward 4 Neighborhood Association board and chairman of the Ward 4 Democratic Committee.

The newlyweds will make their home on Emerald Street, West Quincy.

Quincy Lions Club To Hold Information Night Tonight

The Quincy Lions Club will hold a membership information night Thursday, Nov. 3, from 6 to 7:30 p.m. at the Neighborhood Club, 27 Glendale Rd., Quincy.

Residents and local business people interested in learning more about the Lions Club are urged to attend the event, which will include dinner and a brief presentation on Lions membership.

There is no charge to attend the membership information session.

Those interested in attending or who wish to receive more information should contact Membership Chair Jennifer Logue at 617-328-1384.

"This is a great opportunity for people who have considered joining a community service club to attend a Lions meeting and learn what the organization is all about," said Logue.

"Lions Clubs are a great way to give back to the local community while networking and enjoying social activities with club members,"

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1915 postcard view of Prospect Street in Atlantic looking north from Sagamore Street. Conveniently located just steps from the old Atlantic railroad depot this neighborhood was built up with a number of triple-deckers to accommodate the burgeoning population of Quincy at the time. Between 1900 and 1920 the population and number of dwellings in Quincy more than doubled. At that time, Quincy was known as the "Fastest Growing City in Massachusetts." Most of the growth came from foreign immigrants. According to 1920 U.S. Census data, 30 percent of Quincy residents had two foreign born parents and another 12 percent had mixed parents, one native and one foreign born. Now in 2005, 85 years later, the city has recently released census data that shows the population of Quincy has stopped growing, but the percentage of foreign immigrants seems to have dropped from the 1920 levels. READERS FORUM

Agrees With Phelan On Quincy High School Site

I am the former vice president of the Quincy Taxpayers Association and I have been the treasurer for the town of Hanover for 15 years.

I have read and researched over 150 public documents concerning the School Building Assistance Program. I have also reviewed public statements by both Treasurer Cahill and Katherine Craven which suggest the residents and the children of Quincy have been treated unfairly and continue to be treated unfairly in this process.

Treasurer Cahill has stated the city of Quincy must build on the original site. Any other site would be considered a major scope change and would not be eligible for reimbursement without resubmitting an application. Three other communities have already had major scope changes without having to begin the process again.

The city of Newton was listed on the priority list as having been approved for a renovation and yet they were allowed to build a new high school at a significantly higher cost without having to resubmit to the SBA and start the process over again because of significant scope changes.

The town of Needham made over 100 design changes (according to their own documentation) during the year following the submission deadline of Aug. 29, 2003. In fact, Needham's enrollment projections were 1,450 students when they submitted their application. Their documentation states, "Due to unexpected high kindergarten enrollments over the past two years, the highest projection for the next 10 years is 1,700, in 2014." This is a difference of 250 students. This would be considered a significant scope change.

Also, the town of Bourne submitted an application that was approved where the land is actually landlocked. There is no way these plans could be final until they have access to this property.

Katherine Craven's letter to Mayor Phelan dated April 27, 2005 states, in part, "I offer this letter as the Authority's directive on how best to proceed in planning the new Quincy High School, based on both the DOE's past practice as well as the new statute which governs the current operations of the MSBA."

Ms. Craven indicates past practice is in fact relevant to this process. Yet, Treasurer Cahill continues to state the city of Quincy must build on a specific area designated within this site. In fact, Christine Lynch stated in a deposition (Mandell, et al v Town of Reading) that the School Building Authority had never chosen a site for any other community involved in this process. So why should Quincy be treated differently than Newton, Needham and Bourne?

Also, Treasurer Cahill has made public comments (Standard-Times April 21, 2005) that the city of Quincy is the financial test case for this program. Treasurer Cahill was concerned about the projected $100 million cost of the Quincy project. Yet, on May 18, 2005 as quoted in the Springfield Republican, Cahill says rebuilding or renovating the Roger L. Putnam Vocational Technical High School (Springfield) is a priority. This school is not even on the priority list.

"The project whose price tag is estimated at well over $100 million has the potential as a statewide prototype to vocational and community education," Cahill said. "Any way we can help a city as important as Springfield, we'll do it."

Why should the residents of Quincy settle for less than other communities have received or been promised by Treasurer Cahill?

Newcomer Upsets 16-Year Councillor

This Week
52 Years Ago

Newcomer Frank E. MacDonald ousted Frank N. Orcutt, a veteran of 16 years service, from his seat on the City Council in the municipal elections.

Elected were Amelio Della Chiesa, Edna B. Austin, David S. McIntosh, Alfred H. Heflfrich, David J. Crowley, Carl A. Anderson and MacDonald.

Defeated were Charles L. Shea, Donald K. Mackay, Russell T. Bates, J. Frederick Cutler, L. Paul Marini, Frederick L. Farrell and Orcutt.

It was predicted that McIntosh and Della Chiesa would be the leading candidates for mayor, a largely ceremonial post under the Plan E charter.

Winners in the School Committee race were Dr. Charles Djerf, A. Wendell Clark, Dr. Joseph E. McDermott, Paul K. Duffey, Ethel B. Wiley and Alice Mitchell.

Della Chiesa's Council victory was saddened by the death of his mother, Virginia, 76, who died at City Hospital on Election Day.

'Cocktails With Cheever' To Open Quincy ArtsAlive! Winter Series

The Quincy ArtsAlive series of winter events will kickoff Thursday, Nov. 10, from 5:30 to 8 p.m. with a "retro" cocktail party fundraiser honoring Quincy-born author John Cheever at the Quincy Historical Society.

The event will feature hors d'oeuvres by Alba Bar & Grill, a cash bar and a brief presentation by Wheaton College Professor Samuel Coale, who has written about the Pulitzer Prize-winning writer.

Ron Della Chiesa, the Quincy native who is a featured performer on WGBH and WPLM, will select the music and also put in an appearance,

Tickets at $50 per person are available by calling 617-657-0527. Proceeds will benefit the Quincy ArtsAlive event series.

"We wanted to have an event that would spotlight John Cheever's connection to Quincy," said Jennifer Logue, executive director of Discover Quincy.

"Ed Fitzgerald (director of the QHS) suggested that since Cheever was considered to be the chronicler of the post-war suburban cocktail generation, a retro cocktail party might be a fun and interesting way to raise awareness of Quincy's most celebrated author."

Cheever was born in Quincy in 1912 and his early years were marred by his family's financial loss in the stock market crash of 1929. At the same time, he was expelled from Thayer Academy, an incident that would become the subject of one of his first published works.

"The Wapshot Chronicle," published in 1958, a semi-autobiographical look at the decline of a New England family, won the National Book Award but his collected short stories, published in 1978, that captured the Pulitzer Prize. He died in 1982.

The Quincy Art Association will hold an open house with artist demonstrations, while Quilters' Compass will offer residents and visitors the chance to decorate their own square to be added to the "Quincy Quilt," a large quilt representing life in Quincy in 2005.

• Preview screening of PBS's "John & Abigail Adams, Tuesday, Jan. 17, at United First Parish Church. The producers of the new two-hour primetime documentary on John and Abigail will introduce excerpts, portions of which were filmed in Quincy in 2004.

• Celebrate Quincy! Restaurant Week, Feb. 5-11. Quincy Center restaurants will offer special discounts and promotions combined with entertainment.

• "Marriage of True Minds," Feb. 24-26. Experience John and Abigail Adams' enduring love for one another in this new plat based upon their legendary correspondence.

There will be nominal admission charges to all events except the Holiday Stroll and the Restaurant Week.

"Quincy ArtsAlive! is truly a collaborative effort to bring arts and cultural events to Quincy residents and visitors," said Logue.

"We also hope these events will draw people to downtown Quincy to help support our local businesses, which contribute greatly to our historic city."

Quincy ArtsAlive is a collaborative co-sponsored by the city of Quincy, Discover Quincy, Adams National Historical Park, Quincy Art Association, Quincy Historical Society and Quincy 2000.

Fallon Ambulance is presenting sponsor of the Quincy ArtsAlive! event series. Additional major sponsors include Daniel J. Flynn & Co. Real Estate and South Shore Savings Bank.

A PROVEN TRACK RECORD

In 1992, the Board of Education sued the Quincy School Committee, after its members expelled a gun-toting student from Quincy High School, and then refused to pay for his tutor.

Jim Timmins represented the School Committee; he argued the case before the Supreme Judicial Court, and won. Quincy's challenge changed the law in Massachusetts; and Jim Timmins was the lawyer who mounted the challenge. He fought for us then, and he will continue to do what is right for our school children as a member of the School Committee...

''Tis The Season, A Quincy Christmas'

Music CD To Benefit Quincy Schools' Project Access

It was Christmas in September as 50 choir members from St. Joseph's Roman Catholic Church, Houghs Neck Congregational Church, Bethany Congregational Church and Quincy Point Congregational Church gathered earlier this month to record song tracks for the upcoming CD, 'Tis the Season, a Quincy Christmas.

"Quincy is one of those wonderful communities where you can put out a call for help, and everyone responds with a resounding 'Yes, you can count on me!'" said the Rev. Ann Suzedell, pastor of Quincy Point Congregational Church and one the CD's producers.

Rev. Suzedell said she was thrilled with the recording session. "When the combined choir gathered to record on Sept. 15, it was a thrill for me to listen.

"The sound engineers let me put on the headphones and what I heard was absolutely inspiring," she added.

Sales of the Christmas CD will raise funds for the Quincy Public Schools' Project Access. Project Access provides special services to homeless children to help them succeed in school: those living in cars, the street, abandoned buildings, shelters, transitional housing, motels, bridge homes (group homes from emergency placements) double-up (living with friends or family due to economic hardship), domestic violence shelters and unaccompanied youth who no longer live with their parents.

Last year, Project Access helped 213 children in Quincy.

Project Access provides transportation, clothing, bedding, medicine and eyeglasses, school supplies, after school programs, counseling, proper nutrition and academic support to Quincy's homeless children. Working with Project Access are Isabel Ventre, Project Access coordinator, and Janet S. Powell, director of Student Support Services for the Quincy Public Schools.

Performers on the CD include the St. Joseph Youth Choir directed by Virginia Vickery with guitar by Fr. Vincent Doolin.

Former Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson, Kirsten Huberdeau and Lutfullah Bulent Guneralp will be singing solos. Duets will be offered by Tom Clasby, Jr. and Mark J. Carey as well as by John Robie and Susan Dolan.

Matthew McArthur and Dr. Curtis Penney are playing the Great Highland Bagpipes.

Paul A. Thistle from the Quincy Point Congregational Church is the music director for the CD.

Sound engineer is Dave Messier from Same Sky Productions in Bridgewater.

Lynne Penney and the Rev. Suzedell from the Quincy Point Congregational Church are producing the CD.

'Tis the Season, a Quincy Christmas' will be available for sale in November and December.

Morrissey Praised For Energy Bills Support

MICHAEL MORRISSEY

State Sen. Michael Morrissey, chairman of the Committee on Telecommunication, Utilities and Energy, has been cited by Mass Energy for his support of the Appliance Efficiency Standards bill and the HEAT plan.

The standards bill would set efficiency standards for several commonly used appliances and, it is estimated, would save consumers more than $1.1 billion by 2020. It is expected to pass later this month.

The HEAT Plan would provide consumers with energy assistance this winter in the form of tax relief and incentives to become more energy efficient. It has the support of both Senate President and House Speaker.

"Senator Morrissey is taking his responsibilities as committee chairman very seriously," said Larry Cretien, executive director of the Massachusetts Energy Consumers Alliance (Mass Energy).

"He is not only supporting good legislation, but he is pushing it along in a way that is very good for energy consumers and the environment."

McGlone Receives Union Endorsements

School Committee candidate Celeste McGlone has received endorsements from the Quincy Education Association and other unions.

The unions include Norfolk County Central Labor Council, Plumbers and Gasfitters Local 12 and IBEW Locals 2222 and 103.

"I am honored and proud to be endorsed by a number of unions that represent the working people of this city, many of whom have children in the Quincy Public Schools," McGlone said.

"So many of Quincy's hard working union members rely on our public school system to meet the educational needs of their families. I'm encouraged by these endorsements and will work hard to live up to the confidence the unions have placed in my ability to advocate on behalf of their children."

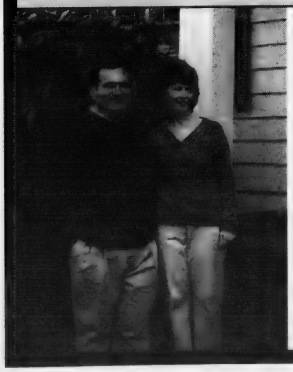
What's with the Sign?! 2005



Kevin knows that his Dad didn't sponsor legislation at the Quincy City Council, the master planning for our 200 miles of pavement in Quincy, to get his name on a sign! He knows the job isn't finished yet. But, he also knows great progress has been made and Quincy now has the technology, plan and resolve for rational pave way management throughout the city.

Joe Finn has played an important part in this progress. He has been an advocate for all the things that matter to the working families of Quincy: public works, public safety, public education, affordable housing for working families and access to city government for all.

We still need Joe's consistent and planned approach on the Quincy City Council as the City of Quincy moves forward.

LET'S GIVE HIM ANOTHER TERM!

New Homeroom System Helps Freshmen Transition At QHS

Quincy High School is providing multiple opportunities for grade nine or freshman students to transition into high school in a productive way.

All freshmen are now in homeroom groups of no more than nine students, each with a homeroom teacher and an upper-class student mentor.

Each morning, the freshmen are able to connect with a teacher and a mentor so that questions, concerns and procedures are handled in a positive manner.

The student mentors have been trained to lead workshops and activities for these grade nine students during the morning homeroom.

Last summer. the freshmen were invited to a leadership class sponsored by the office of Sheriff Michael Bellotti, where they worked on team building.

Many friendships were established there between the ninth graders and upper-class mentors prior to the start of the current school year.

Assemblies fostering team building have been enhanced by a presentation from Ed Gerety, who engaged students on respect, responsibility, decision marking.

Gerety will return Thursday, Dec. 1, to meet with Quincy High School parents to inform them of this initiative.

The new arrangement was made possible by a grant from the South Coastal Workforce Investment Board and the State Department of Education.

Quincy High teachers Karen Monahan and Jane Lundquist have spearheaded the programmatic change.

The "Where's My Refund?" feature on the IRS.gov Website provides taxpayers with information about their refunds.

To use it, taxpayer enter their Social Security Number, filing status (single or married filing jointly) and the refund amount shown on their 2004 tax return.

When the information is submitted, "Where's My Refund?" will show the status of a refund and, in some cases, provide instructions to resolve potential account issues.

Quincy Education Association Recommends Timmins, McGlone In School Committee Election

The Quincy Education Association (QEA) announces its executive board recommends School Committee candidates James Timmins and Celeste McGlone in next Tuesday's election.

Timmins and McGlone are among six candidates running for three seats on the School Committee.

The QEA formed a Candidate Recommendation Committee in September, which formulated questions for the candidates, and then interviewed each candidate for School Committee. That committee recommended Timmins and McGlone to the Executive Board of the QEA. The Executive Board adopted that recommendation and has informed the 900 members of the QEA of their recommendations.

The memorandum of recommendations states "The QEA is quite pleased with the entire field of candidates running in this election, and is pleased that we believe we 'could live with' any and all of the candidates. Nonetheless, QEA strongly recommends both Jim Timmins and Celeste McGlone."

The committee also recommended, and the Executive Board accepted, the recommendations of incumbent Mayor William Phelan for re-election. The committee cited Phelan's ongoing support for the public schools, and for the teachers who work with local children every day.

The candidate recommendation committee consisted of QEA Vice President Allison Cox, Executive Board member Ellen Kielmeyer of Broad Meadows Middle School, and Linda Monaco of Sterling Middle School.

In endorsing Timmins, a former Quincy assistant city solicitor, the QEA stated "Mr. Timmins impressed the committee with his understanding of the issues, his experience in Quincy political life, and the values he articulated in relating to our issues."

In recommending McGlone, a former administrative assistant to Mayor Phelan, the QEA stated "Ms. McGlone responded upfront to questions about her independence from the mayor, and followed that with a clear demonstration of her understanding and values on the issues the committee discussed with her."

Of the four remaining candidates – Anne Mahoney, Kevin Mulvey, Joseph Keegan and Ronald Iacobucci – the committee was unable to reach the consensus required for recommendation, but all agreed the QEA 'could live with' any of them.

The letter to QEA members emphasizes the recommendations are only recommendations.

"There are our recommendations; we would never insult our membership by telling anyone how to vote," wrote QEA President Paul Phillips to the membership.

"Our most basic recommendation," Phillips adds, "is vote on Nov. 8."

Ayers Testifies In Support Of Junior Operator License Legislation

Rep. Bruce Ayers recently testified before the Joint Committee on Transportation in support of H.1996, "An Act Relative to the Safety of Junior Operators." The committee is re-examining the current law to implement preventive measures help protect new teenager drivers.

BRUCE AYERS

The current Junior Operator Law was introduced in 1998. According to the National Highway Transportation & Safety Administration, there are roughly 47,000 teenagers involved in crashes in Massachusetts each year, or 128 a day. Car accidents are the number one cause of deaths for teenagers age 16 to 25.

"With teenage fatalities increasing every year due to car accidents, it is imperative that the law is reexamined and revised so that the necessary provisions are added to provide our youth with the critical experience and proper training that they need before they receive their license," said Ayers whose district includes Quincy and Randolph.

Ayers was appointed as a member of the Public Safety subcommittee to examine the current law. The committee has held public hearings throughout the state and has heard numerous testimonies from police and fire officials, driving instructors, parents and teenagers on this important legislation. The committee will be acting on this proposed legislation prior to the end of the legislative session.

The proposed legislation will increase the amount of time and training teenager drivers have behind the wheel from twelve to thirty hours with parental supervision. It also would increase the amount of time with a driving instructor from six to twelve hours behind the steering wheel.

Young drivers would spend more time learning to drive, have junior operator licenses for a longer period of time and face higher penalties for moving violations under this legislation. This legislation will also require more parental involvement and accountability.

"It is important that we pass legislation that will help better prepare our teenage drivers in an effort to prevent tragic teenage accidents." Ayers added.

To comment or for more information on this legislation, call Rep. Ayers at 617-722-2460.

Elect DOMINIC PAULO

NOVEMBER 8TH, 2005 "A NEW VOICE FOR QUINCY"

QUINCY COUNCILLOR AT LARGE

Dominic with son Brandon

What will Dominic Paulo do as Councillor at Large?

- He will be a fiscal watchdog
- He will oppose any new taxes or fees
- He will fight to protect Proposition 2 1/2
- He will work to keep property taxes affordable for homeowners
- He will work to increase the current property tax exemption amount for senior citizens.

Dominic Paulo will ask all of the City of Quincy's State House Delegation to support the following measures:

- Lift the current cap on Massachusetts Lottery revenue imposed by the State Legislature. 100% of Lottery revenue should be returned to the Cities and Towns. This is costing the City of Quincy millions of dollars in lost local aid.
- An immediate roll back of the state income tax from 5.3% to 5.00% as approved by the voters in 2000. This will give back to the average taxpaying citizen of Quincy hundreds of dollars annually. In fiscal year 2004 the Commonwealth of Massachusetts had an estimated $1.2 billion surplus.

STATE STREET employee Chris Meyers of Quincy (right) and Milton Little, CEO of the United Way of Massachusetts Bay, took part in the United Way's 2005 Fall Community Care Day activities, through the company's Global Outreach Employee Volunteer Program. Eastern Bank Raises $200,000 For Hurricane Relief

Eastern Bank's Hurricane Katrina donation drive ended this week, raising more than $200,000 from customers, employees and the bank's charitable foundation on behalf of the American Red Cross.

Thousands of people across eastern Massachusetts participated in the effort, raising money for the organization's civilian relief efforts in the Gulf States, which include providing shelters, meals and direct financial assistance.

"I am pleased with the results of this tremendous effort," said Stan Lukowski, Chairman and CEO. "Once again, we see the deep reserves of compassion and generosity among our customers, employees and management team, and we are grateful. They have truly made a difference."

Customers of the bank raised $105,000, while its employees, directors and trustees added another $51,000. The Eastern Bank Charitable Foundation matched that number with its own $51,000, which brought the total to $207,000.

This marks the latest in a long line of relief efforts organized by the bank, which also coordinated donations for the victims of the recent tsunami and the Sept. 11, 2001 terrorist attacks, among other causes.

"We are grateful to the Eastern Bank community and customers for their tremendous support, " said Deborah Jackson, CEO of the American Red Cross of Massachusetts Bay. "With this donation and others like it, the American Red Cross can continue its mission of providing help to those desperately in need."

Since hurricanes Katrina and Rita struck, the American Red Cross has provided food and shelter to 750,000 survivors spread across all 50 states and the District of Columbia. Nearly a million people have received financial assistance.

As of Tuesday, Oct. 4, the American Red Cross has spent or committed about $1.3 billion for hurricane relief efforts, including direct financial assistance, food and shelter, and temporary lodging expenses. Current Red Cross estimates put the organization's total need at more than $2 billion.

Former Emergency Manager Pleads Innocent To Rape

For 20 years, from 1980 on, if there was an awarded for volunteerism and citizenship, chances are Tony Siciliano got one.

He was The Quincy Sun Citizen of the Year.

He was the Jewish War Veterans Man of the Year.

He was the Massachusetts Municipal Association Employee of the Year.

Etc., etc., etc. . . .

Last week, Siciliano, 63, once Quincy's emergency management chief, pleaded innocent to four counts of rape of a teen-aged male volunteer on his Emergency Response Team.

He was released without bail in Quincy District Court Thursday, ordered to stay away from his accuser and all children and appear at a probable cause hearing Dec. 6.

For the people who knew him best, it was hard to believe.

"Let it go," said Frank McCauley, who, as mayor in the 1980s, submitted his name for the MMA's Employee of the Year Award. "Let it go and see how it lands."

Siciliano referred all calls to his lawyer, Frank Collins of Quincy.

"I am confident," said Collins, "after I present all the facts, including his years in high visibility positions in constant contact with young people, he'll be vindicated."

Siciliano was accused of molesting and raping the unidentified teenager between 1995 and 1998, beginning when the youngster was 13 years old.

His accuser said the molestations occurred in the Emergency Response Team office in the Public Works Building on Sea Street, in the Public Works garage and in Siciliano's home on Carlson Street.

Siciliano was named deputy director of the Emergency Response Team by Mayor Arthur Tobin in 1980 and kept the post through the administrations of Mayors McCauley and James Sheets.

He was fired by Mayor William Phelan in 2002 as unqualified for the job after the terrorist attack on New York and Washington made everyone acutely aware of emergency response.

Through it all, he also held the paying job of foreman in the Police Department's traffic department, retiring in 2002 when his emergency response job ended.

Fire Investigation Teamwork With Police

We received a call the other day from a member of the Quincy Police Department informing us that an individual was about to be charged with setting a fire that had previously occurred a few weeks ago within the city.

Hearing this news I initially smiled within, considering what has taken place over the years to arrive at successful conclusions like this one.

It is a state law that dictates that all fires which destroy or damage property must investigated. In some instances an officer in charge or incident commander can make a determination as to the origin and cause of a fire with little effort, where the cause is obvious. However, this is not always the case.

In this city we have two primary fire investigators, Lt. O'Hare and inspector Keegan who work out of the Fire Prevention Bureau office. They are on call 24 hours a day, seven days a week, taking turns on call. They have accumulated various credentials having participated in training programs over the years to hone their skills in determining fire origin and cause. They take it quite seriously and their successes speak loudly of their commitment to fire investigation and to minimizing the consequences of destructive fire in general. When a cause cannot be initially determined, or when the cause appears suspicious, they are called to the scene to make that determination. They are not, however, typically alone in doing so.

In the 12 1/2 years I have worked within this office, I have witnessed tremendous cooperation and enthusiasm from members of the Quincy Police Department. There are detectives assigned to work with us during an investigation if need be. They, too, have participated in fire investigation programs while bringing their own skills and expertise as criminal investigators and interrogators as well.

Consequently, there have been many successful investigations and indictments brought to completion by this team approach, particularly if an incident is determined to be of a criminal intent. It is this cooperation that I have witnessed over the years making the difference in bringing investigations to fruition. It is having witnessed the evolution of this cooperation which makes me smile at news of the results of this recent investigation, while it includes a great deal of gratitude for their participation in our successes as well.

So to Detective Bill Lanergan of the Quincy Police Department, who I first worked with investigating a fire those many years ago, and to those police investigators who have contributed and still contribute towards this team approach — thank you!

Your enthusiasm shows. It's much appreciated for the successes we have shared together speak volumes on your commitment. Thank you for that commitment.

Stop & Shop Launches 16th Annual Campaign Vs. Hunger

The 16th annual Food for Friends program of Stop & Shop Supermarkets got underway Sunday as the company began an effort to raise more than $1 million for some 300 food pantries throughout the Northeast.

As part of the campaign, all Stop & Shop stores will sell paper turkeys at checkout for $1 apiece. The turkeys can be personalized by each customer and will be displayed throughout the store.

One hundred per cent of the funds raised will go to local hunger relief organizations.

"This year, like no other, Stop & Shop customers have come to aid those in need," said William Cummings, executive vice president of operations for Stop & Shop.

"Whether it was for those who lost everything in a natural disaster, or were facing pediatric cancer or juvenile diabetes, our customers and associates came through time and time again to help those less fortunate."

In spite of the frequent pleas for aid from various charitable causes in this year of natural disasters, Cummings said there is still a strong need for the Food for Friends program.

"In the United State," he said, "five million people live at or below the poverty level, and nearly a third of them are children.

"Providing meals to those who need help is a cause that directly impacts each community in which we operate and gives each store the opportunity to form a lasting partnership with a local food pantry and make a difference."

Jennifer Wilkins Joins U.S. Army

Jennifer Wilkins has joined the United States Army under the Delayed Entry Program.

The program gives young men and women the opportunity to delay entering active duty for up to one year. The enlistment gives the new soldier the option to learn a new skill, travel and become eligible to receive as much as $50,000 toward a college education.

After completion of basic military training, soldiers receive advanced individual training in their career job specialty prior to being assigned to their first permanent duty station. The recruit qualifies for a $4,000 enlistment bonus.

Quincy High To Compete In First Academic Decathlon

Quincy High School will participate in its first Academic Decathlon Saturday, Nov. 19, in the large school competition at Sharon High School.

Local, regional and state competitions can lead to the national finals which this academic year will take place in San Antonio, Texas, April 26-29.

"We're very excited about the upcoming competition," said Coach Evelyn Ryan.

"These students have gained so much knowledge just in preparing every day to compete. There's really no way to lose taking part in an event like this."

The Academic Decathlon was created to provide opportunities for students to experience the challenges of rigorous team and individual academic competition.

Each student competes in 10 events — economics, essay, art, interview, language and literature, math, music, science, social science and speech.

Each year the science or social science topic is used as the Super Quiz topic.

A new theme of study is established every year with topics that are relevant, current and challenging. This year's theme is the European Renaissance.

Gold, silver and bronze medals are awarded for individual events and total scores. Overall individual winners are recognized as are champion teams.

Beth Canterbury Chorus Director Of Conservatory Opera Friday, Saturday

Quincy vocalist Beth Canterbury will direct the chorus of the South Shore Conservatory's two performances of the operatic comedy "Die Fledermaus" Friday, Nov. 4 at 8 p.m. in Hingham and Saturday, Nov. 5 at 8 p.m. in Duxbury.

The comedy, set in 1874 Vienna, tells of the hilarious shenanigans of husband and wife Gabriel and Rosalinda Eisenstein, their friend Dr. Falke, a sassy chambermaid, a very bored Russian Prince, a drunk warden and jailer.

The program begins at 8 p.m. and is preceded by a reception at 7 p.m. Tickets are $25 ($20 for seniors and students). Current Conservatory students may attend for free.

Die Fledermaus is one of eight productions in the new Conservatory Concert Series, which features live performances from September 2005 through April 2006. To purchase tickets for either performance, or to request information and a brochure about the Conservatory Concert Series, call 781-934-2731, ext. 10 in Duxbury, or 781-749-7565, ext. 10 in Hingham.

FALL CAR CARE

A Car's Tires Are Critical For Safety And Expensive To Replace

A car's tires are critical for safety and expensive to replace, so there should be no question you want to get as much life out of them as possible.

The key is maintenance, says AAA Southern New England. The three issues involved in maintaining tires are pressure, rotation, and balance and alignment.

Tire Pressure

One of the most overlooked maintenance items on today's cars is tire pressure. Proper tire pressure improves tire life, handling and ride characteristics, and fuel economy. In most cases, you should check tire pressure at least once a month.

Checking tire pressure is easy. All you need is a tire gauge. Always check the tire pressure when tires are cold. The best time usually is first thing in the morning after the car has been sitting overnight. Even sunlight will affect tire pressure, so later in the day the pressure may be altered by the heat.

To check the tire pressure, remove the cap from the tire stem and press the tire gauge against the end of the stem. You should hear the air escape from the tire momentarily as you press the gauge onto the stem and then it should seal. If the air continues hissing while you have the gauge applied, remove the gauge and try again. Once its seals properly, remove the gauge and check the reading on the end, then put the valve cap back on. The reading should be equal to the factory recommendation that appears in your owner's manual, on the sticker on the doorjamb or glove compartment door.

If the pressure is high, let a little air out of the tire and recheck the pressure. Repeat that process until the pressure is correct. If the pressure is low, add air to the tire. Chances are you won't have compressed air available, so you'll gave to take the car to a gas station to get the air.

Tire Rotation

How a tire wears depends on a number of conditions, not the least of those is which corner of the car they're on. For example, tires in the front tend to wear more on the edges than the rear tires because front tires turn when you turn the steering wheel.

The right side may receive additional stress because the right side of the car is more likely to make contact with potholes and curbs. Meanwhile, the left-side tires usually support more weight because that's the driver's side.

To prevent tires from wearing unevenly, AAA recommends motorists plan on having their tires rotated at least twice a year. In general (except for tires with directional tread pattern), manufacturers recommend this pattern of rotation:

• Rear-Wheel Drive: The rear tires move directly to the front, while the front tires should be switched side to side and them moved to the back.

• Front-Wheel Drive: The front tires move directly to the back, while the rear tires should be switched side-to-side and then moved to the front.

• Four-Wheel Drive: Both front and rear tires should be switched side-to-side and then moved to the opposite side.

Wheel Alignment And Balancing

Traditional wisdom says you should have your wheels aligned and tires balanced at least twice a year to get the most out of your tires. That's still true today. Aligning the wheels and balancing the tires regularly can increase your car's tire life considerably.

But here's a little food for thought: 25 years ago a good set of radial tires cost $200-$300. An alignment and four-wheel balance cost $25 and $30 and, if performed regularly, could provide up to 40 percent more life out of the tires.

Today, a set of radial tires still cost between $200-$400 and sometimes more. At the same time the cost of a wheel alignment could range from $60-$100 or more. The cost of balancing four tires could be $40 or more. So an alignment and wheel balance could easily cost $100 or more. If purchased six times over the life of the tires, the tire maintenance bill could easily cost more than twice the price of an average set of tires. So does it make sense to get your wheels aligned twice a year?

At first glance this doesn't seem like much of a pay-off for maintaining your tires. But there are other things to consider. Besides having a car that will handle properly and ride better, there are additional benefits. When your car is aligned properly, tire wear will be minimized and fuel economy will be maximized. When a car is "out" of alignment the tires will scrub on the road rather than roll smoothly, causing tire wear and increasing the rolling resistance of the tires, ultimately using more fuel.

There is one more fact about tire wear. It is best to align the tires on your vehicle after steering components are replaced or after hitting a pothole or curb. The problem is once a tire has established a wear pattern due to an alignment problem, realigning the car after the wear pattern has been established will improve handling but will not have much effect on the worn tires.

Of course, it won't hurt to have your vehicles aligned and tires balanced often but it may make sense to stay aware of your vehicle's overall driving condition. If you notice a vibration, have the tires inspected and if necessary re-balanced. If your vehicle pulls in one direction or the other, have the alignment checked. And finally, if any component of the steering or suspension system was replaced or you just hit the mother of all potholes, make a special trip to the alignment shop.

$2.5 Million Campaign Underway

Spring Ground Breaking Goal For Mini-Fenway Park

The dream of a mini-Fenway Park for kids in West Quincy took a giant step toward reality Tuesday when a capital campaign to raise $2.5 million got underway in ceremonies at the State House.

The Mini-Fenway Park Team also announced a new agreement with the Boston Red Sox which authorizes them to replicate Fenway Park and create a special license plate to raise money for operating expenses.

"All of us here at the 'big' Fenway Park salute your efforts and look forward to visiting when the gates open next year," wrote Dr. Charles Steinberg, executive vice president of the Red Sox for public affairs.

Ron Iacobucci, CEO of the Mini-Fenway Project, said groundbreaking on the 12-acre site of land leased from the state in the Quarry Hills section of Quincy is expected in the spring of 2006 with completion in the fall.

When it is finished, right down to the Green Monster in left field, the Pesky Pole in right and the flashing Citgo sign hovering over the outfield, it will entertain youth baseball, softball and teeball reams from all over New England.

"Today we have reached another important milestone," Iacobucci told the gathering at the State House, noting that the idea of a pint-sized Fenway Park for pint-sized ball players began in 1998.

"We have to respect the process involved in a public/private partnership and although everyone would love to see this happen today, it takes time."

Iacobucci said a construction manager and an architect will be selected soon.

Actually, the "Where Dreams Play" Capital Campaign is already 50 per cent toward its goal with $1.25 million guaranteed through a combination of foundation, corporation and individual pledges.

The Massachusetts Special License Plate is expected to raise a minimum of $3 million to be used primarily for operating expenses. They already have 1,000 applications. Five hundred more and production begins.

Iacobucci thanked the Red Sox, the state, the Quincy legislative delegation, particularly Sen. Michael Morrissey, and "especially the faithful Mini-Fenway Park Team who have volunteered their efforts to help make this dream come true for our youth."

A number of well-known baseball people also have participated in the Mini-Fenway Park Project.

The Board of Directors includes Hall of Famer Carl Yastrzemski, Luis Tiant, Mary Pratt of the All American Girls Professional Baseball League, and Ted Spencer, curator of the Baseball Hall of Fame.

Home Energy Assistance And Tax Relief

HEAT Program Helps Baystate Residents With Heating Costs

The Massachusetts House and Senate proposed legislation called the HEAT program (Home Energy Assistance and Tax Relief) to help Massachusetts residents with heating costs.

There are programs already established that can help.

The Massachusetts investor-owned utilities and the Low-Income Energy Affordability Network (LEAN) are promoting Energy Bucks — a statewide program that includes fuel assistance, utility discount rates and energy efficiency services.

Residents are eligible by household size and income and can find out more by visiting www.energybucks.com or calling their local community action program.

Home heating costs will rise approximately 21 percent this winter, an increase for the average consumer of more than $800 for oil and $600 for natural gas, according to estimates by the U.S. Department of Energy.

Energy Bucks is sponsored by National Grid, NSTAR Electric & Gas, Western Massachusetts Electric Company, Unitil, Bay State Gas, KeySpan Energy Delivery and the Cape Light Compact in collaboration with the Massachusetts Association for Community Action (MASSCAP) and LEAN.

You can reduce your energy bill by as much as 30 percent by taking a few simple steps:

• Determine if you are eligible for an energy savings program. Eligibility requirements for fuel assistance, discount utility rates or energy efficiency services vary annually based on size and income of the household.

• Maintaining an efficient heating system is an important step to conserving energy. Have your heating system serviced once every two years and never try to repair it yourself.

• For every 1 degree you set your thermostat back, you can save 1 to 3 percent on your annual heating costs.

• An energy specialist can make sure your home is properly sealed with special tools, like a blower door, to find hidden leaks, and develop a plan for the most cost effective measure to improve your home.

• Caulk, seal and weatherstrip all seams, door frames and openings to the outside to reduce air leaks. The biggest holes are most often found in the attic and the basement.

• Shut off heat to unused rooms and close the fireplace damper to seal air leaks.

• Insulate your attic, outer walls, ceilings and floors to prevent heat escaping to the outdoors.

• Clean or replace filters on furnaces once a month.

• Keep draperies and shades on windows that face south open during the day to let sunlight in. Close them at night to keep out the chill.

• Take showers instead of baths (which use 40 percent more hot water) but keep them short. A shower costs about 3 cents per minute if you have an electric water heater.

• Leaky faucets waste gallons of water fast. Repair them immediately.

• Use toaster ovens and microwaves as much as possible. They use less than half the energy that ovens use.

• Turn off VCRs, stereos and TVs when not in use. Unplug them when you are away from home longer.

Bill Would Require Carbon Monoxide Alarms In All Homes

Get Protection From The Silent Killer

To help prevent another tragedy like the January 2005 death of seven-year-old Nicole Garofalo from carbon monoxide poisoning, the Massachusetts legislature is considering a bill that would require carbon monoxide (CO) alarms in all homes.

Don't Wait

Each year CO kills more than 2,000 people, according to the Journal of the American Medical Association. In Massachusetts, the State Fire Marshal reports that firefighters responded to 2,739 CO-related calls in 2003, about 94 percent of which came from homes.

Home safety experts, such as Steve Gladstone of the American Society of Home Inspectors (ASHI®), are telling all residents "Don't Wait 'til It's Too Late!" and urging people to take the simple protective act of purchasing and installing a CO alarm right now – whether or not the bill becomes law.

"Because CO is an odorless, tasteless, invisible gas, it cannot be detected by human senses," says Gladstone. "And, according to the 2000 Census, nearly 70 percent of Massachusetts housing uses some form of fossil-fuel based heating (gas, fuel oil or kerosene), which can generate carbon monoxide. That means many people are at risk."

Simple Steps To Protection

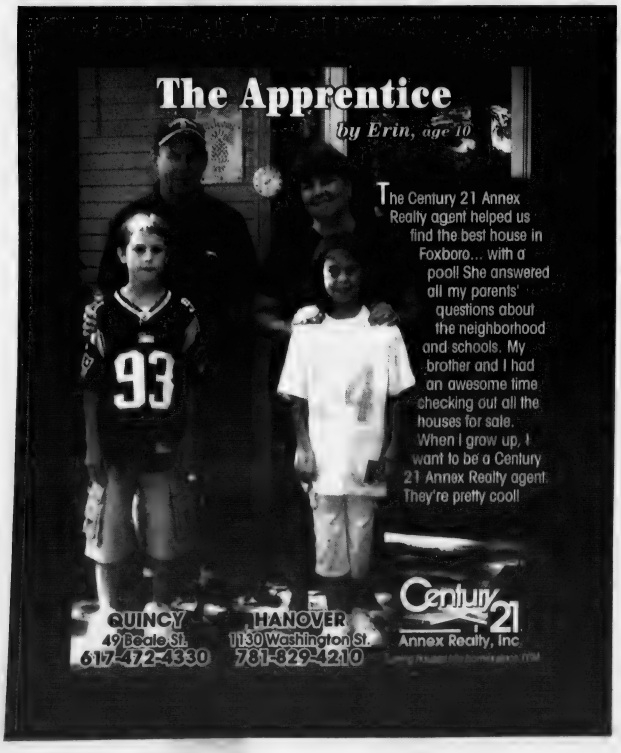
Now is the time to protect your family from the "Silent Killer." Following these steps as temperatures drop and the threat of CO poisoning rises can help reduce the chance of CO build-up in your home.

" Have a professional inspect and clean your gas furnace and all fireplaces. A faulty furnace heat exchanger or a clogged chimney can trap carbon monoxide in your home.

• Install CO alarms, such as those from Kidde, on every level of your home and in sleeping areas. That's the only way to detect carbon monoxide. Gladstone recommends CO alarms with digital display and battery backup.

"Digital display models allow you to see the level of CO as soon as it is present while battery backup protects during a power outage," comments Gladstone. "Also, a peak memory feature lets emergency personnel know how high the level was, and, therefore, how to treat victims."

• Do not use unvented gas or kerosene space heaters or generators inside.



• Open the fireplace damper before lighting a fire, and keep it open until the ashes are cool to avert the buildup of CO, especially at night while families sleep.

Taking a few minutes to prepare now will help ensure your family's safety before it's too late.

Weatherstripping Tips

Q. I live in an older house — more than a century old, to be precise — and most of the windows and frames are original. While they have an antique charm, some of them are a bit drafty as the wood frames have warped and are not airtight. Weatherstripping would help, but I don't think they make any that would fit these window frames. Any suggestions? — Philip P., Somerville, Mass.

A. You might be surprised — weatherstripping comes in a variety of widths and types, and even if you can't get an exact fit from the store, you can either improvise with a few types of weatherstripping or custom-order the size needed.

Of course, the ideal solution to drafty old windows is to replace them with custom-made, modern frames and windows that seal nice and tight. But that's an expensive proposition. So, weatherstripping, along with a few other tricks, is the way to go in reducing drafts.

Your old windows are probably double-hung, so close each window and fasten the sash lock, watching to see if the lock pulls the top and bottom halves of the window snugly together. If any gap exists, place a strip of vinyl foam tape between the halves. The foam will compress as the sash lock draws the halves together, creating an airtight seal.

Cracks around the window sash can be sealed with transparent weatherstripping tape, or with caulking cord/rope caulk. (Rope caulk lasts much longer, is flexible and — if you live in an apartment — you can remove it without damaging the surface).

Use caulking compound to seal cracks in the sash or frame on the outside of the house, as it's resistant to drastic temperature changes. You can also use it to seal cracks indoors and out, or to close gaps between old wooden floorboards.

Improve energy efficiency further by hanging heavy (insulated), floor-length curtains. Open them during the day so the sun warms the room, and close them at night. Place area rugs on bare floors or even over existing carpet. Run a humidifier in frequently used rooms, as damp air can feel warmer. Reverse the direction of the blades on ceiling fans (a switch can typically be found on the unit near the blades) to move warmer air near the ceiling into the room. Place a draft barrier at the base of all exterior doors.

Report From Register Of Deeds O'Donnell

Real Estate Activity Down 4 Percent In The Third Quarter In Norfolk County

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell announces quarterly real estate activity in Norfolk County was $2.27 billion for the period July through September, a decrease of 4 percent over the same quarter last year.

A total of 5601 deeds were recorded at the Norfolk Registry during the period, and the average sales price reported in deeds over $1000 (both residential and commercial properties), was $585,038, up 6 percent from the third quarter of calendar 2004.

Mortgage activity, while relatively steady in terms of numbers of filings, was down sharply in dollar volume on a year-to-year basis. There were 16,019 new mortgages recorded in the third quarter showing a total dollar amount of $5.56 billion. The total number of new mortgages was up slightly (1 percent), but the total dollar amount was down 46 percent from $10.40 billion in mortgages recorded July-September of 2004.

O'Donnell attributed the decline in mortgage volume to the interest rate environment and the decrease in mortgage refinancings since the record years of 2003 and 2004. "It is important to note," O'Donnell said, "that mortgage filings do not necessarily represent a change in overall indebtedness. Many mortgages refinance existing debt, or secure equity credit lines that may not be drawn in their entirety."

The Registry of Deeds is the principal office for real property records in Norfolk County. The Registry is a basic resource for homeowners, title examiners, mortgage lenders, municipalities and others with a need for secure, accurate and accessible land record information.

For further information regarding the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds, please call 781-461-6116 or visit the Registry website, www.norfolkdeeds.org.

Home Energy Tips

(NAPS) — This winter, expect a big shock when you receive your heating bill. The U.S. Energy Information Administration predicts that natural gas may increase 71 percent over last year, heating oil 31 percent and electricity 17 percent. If these statistics prove to be correct, Americans will be looking for simple and inexpensive ways to reduce energy costs.

The U.S. Department of Energy has some tips for lowering home heating bills this winter. Prepare your home early in the season to ensure that doors and windows fit tightly and that cracks that lead to the outside are sealed. One of the simplest ways to seal those cracks is to use Great Stuff Insulating Foam Sealant by The Dow Chemical Company.

The average home has lots of hidden holes, gaps and cracks around window and door frames, electrical outlets, plumbing lines, under siding, in the basement and many other places. Add them all up and it is about the same as having a 16-square-foot opening causing potentially bone-chilling drafts in the house. In fact, this loss can account for 30 to 50 percent of the energy used in most homes. When people feel a draft, their first reaction is to turn the thermostat up.

"In light of the unsteady economic forecast, many are wondering how they can cut costs, especially when it comes to their energy bills," said Janet Hansen, marketing communications manager for foam sealants at Dow.

She recommends a variety of things you can do around the home that will not only keep the heat in, but could also save you money throughout the winter.

- Close fireplace dampers when not in use.
- Seal and insulate air ducts.
- Wrap your water pipes in insulation.
- Add insulation to the attic, basement and crawl spaces.
- Turn down your thermostat.
- Install a programmable thermostat and set it for a lower temperature when you're not at home.
- Close curtains at night and open them during the day.
- Seal areas around baseboards and doors.
- Wrap your water heater in an insulation blanket.
- Clean and replace air filters according to the manufacturer's schedule.
- Don't let the kids "heat the outside" by keeping the door open.
- Purchase an inexpensive cloth or foam draft stopper to position in front of doors.
- Put an extra blanket on beds.
- Consider purchasing a new energy efficient furnace.

Red Hot Raiders Ride 9-Game Undefeated Streak

GIRLS' SOCCER

By CHRIS POISSON

The North Quincy High School girls' soccer team rides into the postseason as one of the hottest squads.

The Red Raiders are undefeated in their last nine games (5-0-4), including last Thursday night's 4-1 victory over city rival Quincy at Veterans Memorial Stadium and a pair of 1-1 ties with Bridgewater-Raynham last Friday and Monday.

"We're playing much better soccer," said NQ head coach Paul Bregoli. "We've been tough defensively and that was not the case at the beginning of the year. I think we're going to be a tough match-up for anybody."

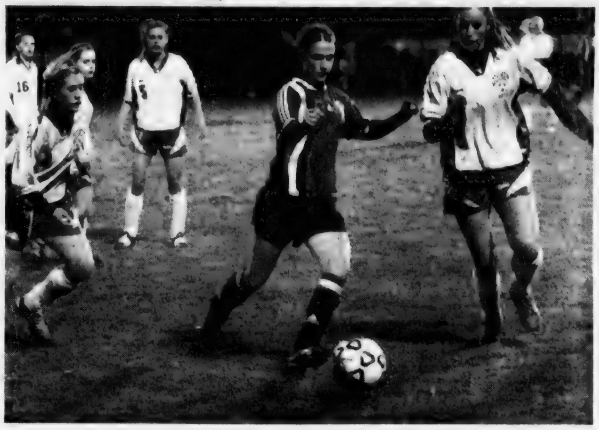
Tournament pairings for the Division 1 South sectional will be announced this morning (Thursday). Bregoli believes NQ (10-4-6 overall) will kick off the tournament in a preliminary game against either Natick or Dartmouth Friday at 2:30 p.m. at Teal Field.

In Monday's make-up game against B-R at Teal Field, the Trojans took the lead in the second half after a scoreless opening 40 minutes.

The Red Raiders had several chances in the second half with junior midfielder Lauren Stille's header hitting the post and Atlantic Coast League leading scorer Caitlin McCleary (18 goals, six assists) hitting the crossbar.

NQ netted the equalizer with two minutes remaining in the game on sophomore midfielder Emily Milone's penalty kick. It was her seventh goal of the year to go along with nine assists.

Sophomore defender Kerry Coughlin made the defensive play of the game, heading out a B-R shot at the goal line and clearing a follow-up shot off the line.



Also playing well were senior captains and forwards Annmarie Campanale and Lauren Milone and senior midfielder Alexa-Gail Jasey.

In last Friday's game at B-R, the Red Raiders jumped out to an early 1-0 lead when Emily Milone took a Lauren Stille cross and beat the keeper from 10 yards out.

NQ, which felt the effect of playing a late game against Quincy the night before, ran out of gas as the hosts pressed the attack throughout.

Presidents Edge North 2-1 In Cross-Town Showdown

BOYS' SOCCER

The Quincy and North Quincy high school boys' soccer teams have struggled this season, but you wouldn't know that when they face each other at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

The cross-town rivals met for the second time last Thursday, with the Presidents holding onto a 2-1 victory to rebound from their 3-1 loss in the first showdown Sept. 28.

"I thought the boys played hard," said Quincy head coach Kevin Orcutt. "They played together and played well. They controlled the game but North Quincy came on hard at the end and made it interesting."

"We played them tough," said North Quincy head coach Rich Hanlon. "The first time we played them, we beat them. This time they got the better of us. It could've went either way.

"We've both been struggling this year. It's always a war whenever we play each other. You could be having a great season and they're terrible, or vice versa, and it's always a one-goal game."

Quincy finishes the season with a 2-11-1 overall record as its final game against Plymouth South was canceled Monday.

"We've been in most of the games," Orcutt said. "There hasn't been any big losses. It's a very young squad, mostly sophomores. Nice group of kids. We were just young."

North Quincy (2-10-3 overall) tied Milton, 1-1, last Friday and ended the regular season at Bridgewater-Raynham Monday.

"We have a young team," Hanlon said. "We look strong coming up next year and the year after. We have a lot of good young players coming up which is encouraging. I'm looking forward to the future. We were looking to do it this year, though. We had some key injuries at the wrong time."

The Presidents struck first nearly 17 minutes into the game when junior forward Levi Boakye took a feed from sophomore forward Besmir Sulimani and lofted a ball from 20 yards just over the hands of senior goalkeeper Dave Regan.

In the second half, Quincy senior forward Jamar Harvey almost scored twice in the first 11 minutes. He made a great rush down the middle of the field but shot high on his first attempt and Regan later came out of net to make a great save on his semi-breakaway.

With 21 minutes left in the game, the Presidents added their second goal when Sulimani knocked one past Regan from in front of the net with Harvey assisting.

The Red Raiders quickly answered a minute later when senior forward and captain Imad Elkatrib blasted a ball off the crossbar and into the net on a penalty kick to make it 2-1. It was his 11th goal of the season.

Elkatrib, who netted a pair of goals in the final eight minutes to snap a 1-1 tie in the first match-up, nearly tallied the equalizer with seven and a half minutes remaining in the game.

He rocketed a shot from the top of the box toward the corner of the right post, but sophomore keeper Marty Bowes made a sensational dive to knock the ball away

A CHECK OF ENGINE WARNING LIGHTS

There are nearly four dozen reasons why a vehicle's Check Engine light can go on. Some are important and others are relatively less so, but each can affect engine life and performance. All should be checked out. The majority of Check Engine light triggers fall within a category called catalyst-damaging occurrences. From model year 1995 on, all automobiles are subject to stricter federally mandated emissions standards known as OBD2, and their onboard computers trigger the Check Engine light whenever exhaust emissions fall outside the normal range and could damage the catalytic converter. The problem can range from a lean or rich air/fuel mixture to a bad spark plug/plug wire to a failed oxygen sensors. A simple analysis pinpoints the cause.

At LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO, we hope that when your check engine lights turns on, you will seek a professional technician. There are so many different reasons that the light is on and at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree we can help you with every single one. We have advanced diagnostic equipment and we know how to fix the problem once we find it. If any of your indicator lights are on call 781-843-1550 and consult an expert as soon as you can to prevent serious damage to your automobile. Sunoco and most major credit cards honored. Open: Mon. -Fri. 6am-9pm, Sat. 7am-9pm, Sun. 9am-5pm. We are "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer."

HINT: Because a vehicle's sophisticated computer system is connected and interdependent, seemingly unrelated problems with the transmission, anti-lock braking system, or even loose gas caps can trigger a Check Engine light.

the past nine games, stood out. Defenders Bridget Coleman, Melissa Mendall, Roberta Phelan and Tara Whooley were on top of their game.

Junior keeper Kristin Reamer was sharp, holding the potent B-R offense at bay until a late goal off a corner kick tied the score.

Against Quincy, Bregoli played his seniors the first part of the game, as he normally does in this match-up.

The Red Raiders struck first 12 minutes into the game when Lauren Stille headed home a pass from Lauren Milone.

NQ had chances to build on its lead, but Quincy junior keeper Sarah Troy came up with a couple of huge saves. She stoned Lauren Stille on a break with 18 minutes left in the half and later came out for the ball on a NQ flurry in front of the net off a corner kick.

"Sarah Troy had a great game," said Quincy head coach Don Martin. "She's matured as a goalkeeper. What she lacked in experience at the beginning of the year she has now. In the first North game, she had trouble with five balls that she would save today."

The Red Raiders extended their lead to 2-0 with less than two minutes in the half when McCleary converted a feed from Emily Milone.

In the second half, Quincy got on the board 12 minutes in when senior captain Lisa McKeon knocked the ball past senior keeper Kelly Barden from a crowd in front of the net.

NQ quickly thwarted the Presidents' momentum 26 seconds later when Lauren Stille (nine goals, five assists) headed in a throw-in pass from Phelan for her second goal of the game.

With six minutes remaining, Jasey closed out the scoring when she shot the ball off the post but netted her own rebound for her first varsity goal.

"Overall I was pleased," Bregoli said. "I thought we played pretty well. We played as well as we could on this field. They played better. They've improved. Their goalie, Sarah Troy, is much, much better."

"I thought we played very well against a very good team," Martin said. "North Quincy is in second place in the ACL and they're playing very well right now."

Quincy (4-11) closed out its season Monday at Plymouth South. Playing for the Presidents this season were seniors Sarah Giudici, Donika Hajrizaj, Courteney Hall, Marissa Monaco, Jessica Page and McKeon, juniors Stephanie Almario, Jaquelyn Callahan, Bridget Hawko, Alison Moriarty, Katherine Shea, Sarah Stewart and Troy, sophomores Catherine Carella and Julie Kisielius, and freshman Leah Wood.

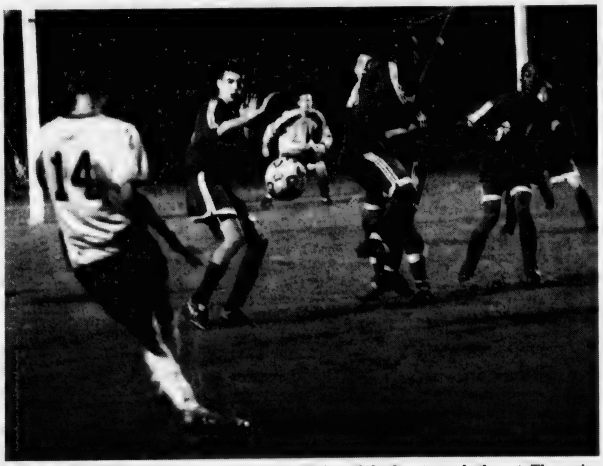
with two hands.



"Marty has made a lot of improvements," Orcutt said. "He's done a nice job for us this year."

North Quincy played without freshman midfielder Shane Regan, who had an asthma attack before the game.

Playing for Quincy this year were: seniors Alex Mendez, Timur Amerikanov, Rony Cruz, Muhaned Jawad, Tom Cabral, Mike Reynoso and Harvey, juniors Charles Dybaud, John Cameron, Ralphie Kondili, Ino Loloci, Chin Nagpal and Boakye, and sophomores Matt Bresnahan, Rob Ranalli, Rory Eliffe, Bill Berberan, Miguel Barzola, Durim Hyseni, Sulimani and Bowes.

Presidents Roll To 35-21 Win Over Nauset

By CHRIS POISSON

Head coach Bob Noble said he was fearful his Quincy High School football team might come out flat against an inferior Nauset squad last Friday night at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Quincy had knocked Plymouth South from the unbeaten ranks the previous week with an exciting comeback late in the game and Noble was concerned there might be a letdown.

The Presidents soothed any fears by scoring on five of their first seven possessions as they coasted to an easy 35-21 win.

"I'm very pleased with the way the kids responded," Noble said. "This is one of those games where you have to be careful because Nauset is down a little this year and you're afraid the first-team kids will come out a little flat. But we didn't show any of that."

Senior tailback and captain Everton DeCastro turned in another sizzling performance, rushing for four touchdowns and more than 200 yards while also kicking five extra points.

The victory keeps Quincy (4-3 overall, 4-1 league) in contention for a possible share of the Atlantic Coast League championship. It trails Plymouth North, which is on top of the ACL with a perfect 6-0 record.

The Presidents travel to Dennis-Yarmouth tomorrow (Friday) night at 6:30 and they finish the season at Sandwich Nov. 12 and against North Quincy in the Thanksgiving Day game.

"We have to keep playing hard and see where we are come Thanksgiving afternoon; see if we end up with a piece of the puzzle," Noble said. "We have a big game against D-Y. Any time you have to make that bus ride I think it's a factor."

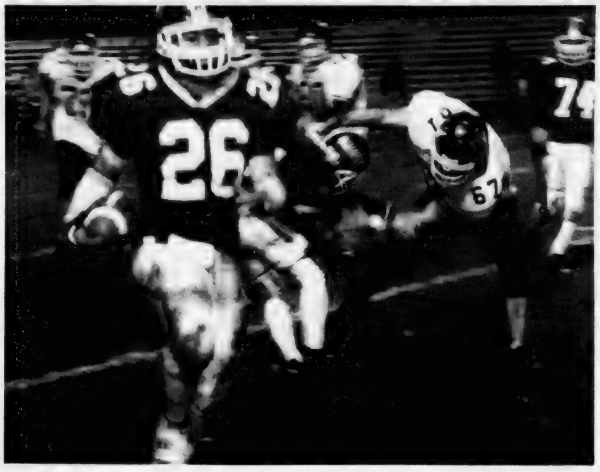
The Presidents scored on their first possession when DeCastro ran 6 yards into the end zone off right tackle with 7:53 left in the opening quarter.

They extended the lead to 14-0 with 1:07 left in the quarter when junior quarterback Matt Boyle fired a 20-yard touchdown pass to senior wideout Matt Giordani on play-action.

After Nauset went three-and-out, Quincy lined up in its Power-I formation on its ensuing series. With Pat Stroud at halfback and D.J. Andrews at fullback, DeCastro ran for 31 yards before he was pushed out of bounds at the Nauset 6.

On the next play, DeCastro ran up the middle, spinning at the goal line for the touchdown and a 21-0 advantage with 8:40 left in the half.

Quincy engineered a 10-play, 77-yard scoring drive to build a 28-0 halftime lead. DeCastro carried the ball six times for 61 yards, including a 9-yard TD scamper with 56 ticks remaining.



In the second half, Quincy scored on the opening series when DeCastro took a pitch from Boyle on an option play and darted 14 yards into the end zone to make it 35-0 with 8:40 left in the third quarter.

Noble pulled his first unit at this point and Nauset ended up scoring 21 points against the substitutes to make it seem like a closer game.

"Our first-team kids came and did what they were supposed to do," Noble said. "We got them out of there and let the subs play."

Quarterback Connor Seymour tossed a 5-yard TD pass to Matt Hossfeld with no time left in the third quarter to get Nauset on the board.

The Warriors added two touchdowns in the final two minutes of the game. Quincy fumbled deep in its territory and they recovered the ball in the end zone for a score. They converted the onside kick and Greg Monroe scored on a 45-yard run.

Raiders Notch First Win

The North Quincy High School football team notched its first win of the season with a 19-6 triumph last Friday night at Somerville.

Aside from snapping an eight-game losing streak, the victory was emotional for other reasons.

Quarterback Mike O'Mahony's father, Michael, died the Saturday (Oct. 22) before the game with the funeral Mass celebrated last Wednesday (Oct. 26).

Playing with a heavy heart, the junior would've made his dad proud as he passed for over 200 yards and a pair of touchdowns to lead his team into the win column.

North Quincy (1-7 overall) will try to make it two in a row when it travels to winless Nauset (0-7) tomorrow (Friday) night at 6:30. The Warriors are coming off a 35-21 loss to Quincy.

Trailing 6-0 in the first quarter, O'Mahony fired a 30-yard TD pass to senior wideout Benson Luc. Junior James Bleiler scored on a 2-yard TD run in the second quarter and O'Mahony closed out scoring with a 10-yard TD strike to junior Dave Guerriero in the third quarter.

Are You Getting Enough Sleep?

Q. I have heard that not getting enough sleep can keep you from losing weight. Even if I exercise and eat right most of the time, can lack of sleep still hurt my weight loss? And if this is true, how much sleep is enough?

A. As our busy schedules continue to get busier, so does our obesity rate, and our lack of sleep may have something to do with that. Sleep is essential to maintaining a healthy body, in addition to maintaining or losing weight.

On average, our society gets six to seven hours of sleep a night. That is as little as 2,200 hours a year, compared with the 3,300 to 4,000 hours of sleep our ancestors got by sleeping nine to 11 hours a night. It may seem far-fetched, but there are more benefits to getting enough sleep than just feeling well-rested.

You probably know that exercise and following a proper nutrition plan are absolute necessities in developing a healthy lifestyle, but so is getting enough sleep. Research studies have found a definite link between a lack of sleep and certain medical conditions, increased stress and being overweight.

One study found that people who sleep only six hours a night have a 23 percent chance of becoming obese. How, you ask? Well, sleep is not only essential in allowing your body to recover and rejuvenate from the stresses placed upon it each day, but sleep also allows your body to reset itself to prepare for the next day.

The longer we remain awake, the more we require the brain to continue to keep our energy level up so we can function. This can translate into eating foods high in sugar. It also means increased levels of the hormones responsible for regulating insulin responses in the body, and it affects cholesterol levels as well. To keep your body running effectively, sleep is imperative.

You exercise hard and eat properly, but you must give your body enough rest so that it can go about the business of processing body fat and building muscle. If the last time you slept for eight or nine hours was when you were a baby, now is the time to add more sleep to your total wellness plan.

It is recommended that we get nine to 12 hours of sleep per night. I know you may think that's impossible, but just do your best and try to give your body the uninterrupted sleep it needs and deserves.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program. If you have a fitness or training question, e-mail Andrea at letters.kfws@ hearstsc.com or write her in care of King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

Millions Of Smokers Expected To Take Part In American Cancer Society's Annual Event

Great American Smokeout Nov. 17

On Thursday, November 17, 2005, millions of smokers will take part in the American Cancer Society's 29th annual Great American Smokeout®.

For nearly three decades, the Society has designated the third Thursday of each November as a day for smokers nationwide to unite and kick the deadly habit of smoking. Approximately 45.4 million Americans are addicted to tobacco; roughly one in four adults and one in five teenagers in the United States are current smokers. And unless efforts to help them beat their addiction are substantially increased, 10 to 20 million current smokers will die from tobacco-related diseases.

There are enormous advantages to quitting smoking:

- People who quit, regardless of age, live longer than people who continue to smoke.
- Quitting smoking decreases the risk of lung cancer, other cancers, heart attack, stroke, and chronic lung disease.
- Women who stop smoking before pregnancy or during the first three to four months of pregnancy reduce their risk of having a low-birth-weight baby to that of a woman who never smoked.

Of course, quitting isn't easy. Tobacco dependence is comparable in severity to dependence caused by opiates, such as heroin, amphetamines and cocaine. Fortunately, smokers now have a variety of medications and treatments they can use to help them stop smoking. These medications include the nicotine replacement products such as the gum and patch and the antidepressant bupropion (Zyban, Wellbutrin).

Smokers can also combine their use of medication by seeking counseling from their physician, pharmacist, or a telephone quitline- clinically proven, free, telephone-based counseling.

For a quitline near you call the American Cancer Society at 1-800-ACS-2345. Research shows that smokers are most successful in kicking the habit when they have some means of support such as nicotine replacement therapy, prescription medication and counseling but, despite this data, only 22 percent of current smokers report using any of the recommended therapies in their last quit attempt, pointing to the need and potential for increased use of support.

In addition to spreading awareness and supporting cessation efforts during the Great American Smokeout and year-round the American Cancer Society, through its advocacy and public awareness efforts, is leading the charge to pass smoke-free legislation at the community and state levels so that all Americans have the right to work or dine where they choose without compromising their health and quality of life.

For more information on the American Cancer Society's Great American Smokeout, smoking information or smoke-free legislation contact the American Cancer Society at 1-800-ACS-2345 or visit www.cancer.org.

Simple Ways To Get In Shape

(NAPS)—If you've been having trouble working out ways to get in shape, doctors offer this tip: Take baby steps.

Experts say small, incremental steps are the best way to get into a fitness program or to begin changing your lifestyle.

This gradual, simple approach has worked for people across the country and even for world-class athletes. Dr. Michael LeRoux, who has applied an incremental, proactive fitness approach when working with Olympic athletes, offers these tips to help people get in shape and stay in shape. The tips utilize a principle he calls "MELT," or "Minimal Effort, Long Term."

- Step away from your car. When parking your car, try to find a spot that's some distance away from your destination. The extra few minutes of walking to and from your car each day can add up quickly.
- Cart it in a basket. When shopping for groceries, use a hand-basket (rather than a cart) and only fill it with the essentials. This will help you think twice about what you really need, and carrying the basket around the store is a great mini workout.
- Blow it off. Begin by taking a few deep breaths, then forcefully flow a piece of paper from one side of your desk to the other and then off the desk. Repeat two times a day. This diaphragmatic breathing builds up heat in the body and forces you to contract your abdomen.
- Belly in before you begin. Every time you are about to change from a seated position to a standing position, take a moment to inhale and tighten your stomach muscles. It's like doing a sit-up every time you stand up.
- Bunny hunting. Add a little strength training to your house-cleaning routine. Go hunting for dust bunnies by bending down low and dusting under things, or standing on your toes to dust on top of things. Also, move your furniture when you vacuum.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

STABLE DENTURES, IMPROVED NUTRITION

When lower dentures slip and slide with tongue and cheek movements, it can impair the ability of denture wearers to eat hard or rough foods, thereby posing the potential to adversely affect the quality of diet. With this in mind, researchers compared the efficacy of conventional dentures with more stable dentures, in which the lower plate is anchored by clips to two tintanium posts implanted in the lower jaws. After six months, the implant group of denture wearers over age 60 had higher blood levels of vitamin B12, hemoglobin (a protein the carries iron), and albumin (a body protein that is considered a "marker" for good nutritional status). The group with conventional dentures had no such gains.

If you have questions about gum disease, or any other dental concerns, we invite you to call us at 617-479-6220. We provide quality, personal dental care in a comfortable, immaculate, professional environment at 44 Greenleaf Street. From preventive and routine care to elective cosmetic procedures, our staff will make you feel comfortable during your visit. Our emphasis is on prevention. Preventing dental disease is less costly and more rewarding than correcting problems after they occur. Let us help you bring out that natural smile. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. According to the implant study mentioned above, the implant group reported improvement in chewing chicken, fresh fruit, and raw carrots.

A Job Well Done
By LT. DAN MINTON

On Wednesday, Oct. 19, at approximately 4:30 p.m., Officers Lane Watkins and Steve Kelly were dispatched to a Newport Avenue apartment building to investigate a "Past assault with a gun." Officer Watkins interviewed the male victim. He said that he had past problem with the suspect, who lives in the same building, in July over fireworks.

LT. DAN MINTON

The victim said he was in the parking lot when the male suspect approached him and after words were exchanged, a fistfight erupted. He said that the suspect's girlfriend also jumped on his back and punched him. The victim said that he broke free and walked toward the rear entrance of the building, only to be followed by the suspect, who then removed what looked like a 9 M.M. handgun from his waistband.

The victim told the police that the suspect fired one round towards him but into the ground and said that the next one would be at him. The victim fled into his apartment and called the police.

Officer Watkins interviewed the victim, who appeared to be under the influence of alcohol, then spoke with his girlfriend, who claimed she saw the incident from the fire escape. She told Officer Watkins that a female tenant known to her picked up the bullet casing left on the ground. After the officers pieced together the identity of the suspect and his apartment, they met with the landlord for a key.

The officers, joined by Sgt. Robert Bina and Officer Mike Kelly, searched the apartment but the suspect was not there. Officer Watkins located the female who had the casing. She told him that she took it because she did not want the suspect to come back to destroy or hide the evidence. Once the crime scene was cleared, Sgt. Bina contacted Lt. Corliss of the Special Operations Unit and requested that surveillance be conducted on the suspect's apartment.

At approximately 8 p.m., SOU Officer William Plant, in an unmarked car, spotted the suspect's live-in girlfriend drive away from the apartment, so he tailed her. She then picked up two males at separate locations in Quincy and then drove off. The suspect vehicle pulled into a driveway on Stedman Street, where the vehicle was boxed in and numerous officers greeted them at gunpoint. The occupants complied with the order to lay in a prone position as the officers conducted a search for the weapon.

A search of the driver revealed a clear glassine bag filled with smaller bags, appearing to be marijuana. The driver was arrested for "Possession of Class D drugs" and "Operating a Motor Vehicle with a Suspended License." A male passenger, identified by the suspect, was arrested on the charge of "Armed Assault with Intent to Murder."

Lt. Corliss received permission from the suspect's live-in girlfriend to return to the apartment for a search. Once in the apartment, Lt. Corliss was immediately drawn to a wall picture that was tilted. Behind the picture, he found a large hole in the plaster. After reaching around the hole, he pulled out a purse with a handgun in it. The trigger was cocked and there was a round in the chamber.

It was later determined that the gun was stolen in Florida. The shooter was also charged with "Receiving Stolen Property (handgun). Nice work!

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Positive results from recent ventures continue to pump up those self-esteem levels, making you Fabulous Felines feel you can tackle any challenge anyone wants to throw at you.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Family and friends might feel neglected because of your almost total focus on a project. Try to rework your schedule so you can have time for both your loved ones and your work.

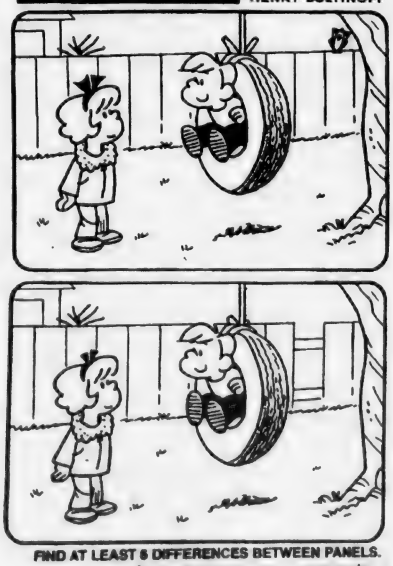
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Don't be surprised if you suddenly hear from someone from your past who wants to contact you about the possibility of renewing a long-dormant (if not dead) relationship.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) This is a good time to check over what went right and what went wrong with recent efforts. This can provide valuable lessons for projects that will be coming up soon.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Dealing with people who feel they're always right about everything might be a problem for some. But the savvy Archer should be able to deflate their oversize egos.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) This week favors a balance between the demands of your work and your need for fun timeouts. Taking breaks helps restore and keep your energy levels high.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) There could be an occasional setback in what you're working on. But look at them as lessons on how to do better as you move along. More supporters turn up to cheer you on.



PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Although a more positive aspect influences this week's course, you still need to be sure that those who will work with you have no reason to work against you. Good luck.

BORN THIS WEEK: You believe in keeping your promises. It's not always easy to do, but somehow you do it.

SCOTT DEWARE

A Thought For The Week

Every Election, whether presidential or local, someone is pleading to people to get out and vote. Newspapers, radio and TV, candidates and many others urge voters to exercise one of their basic freedoms – to vote for the candidates and the issues of their choice. It has been said that two out of every five eligible citizens fail to cast their ballots on Election Day...

The Ballot Box is the best instrument to attack the problems of our time – whether it be in a presidential election or local election. The Ballot Box is the best way to legislate and clarify issues.

The right to vote is the most fundamental of all our rights because the behavior and performance of officeholders, at every level of government, is dictated by the knowledge that periodically they must come before the bar of public opinion in the polling booths. The caliber of men and women in public life is a direct reflection of the wisdom and judgment exercised by the voters.

Let us all get out and vote on Election Day ... We are, indeed, privileged to have the right to vote as we wish...

Phelan Rides To Third Term • Finn And Keenan Re-Elected • 25% Turnout

It's McFarland, McNamee, Mahoney, Mulvey, Timmins

MMM MMM GOOD! Donna Stevenson (center) enjoys a cup of ice cream with her kids, Kate, 7, and Bobby, 5, at the Beechwood Knoll School's eighth annual fall festival. Kate is in the second grade at the school while pre-schooler Bobby hopes to enter the first grade next year.

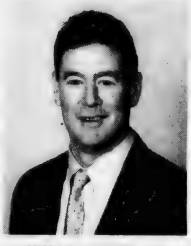
Quincy voters elected two new city councillors and three new school committee members Tuesday.

Mayor William Phelan, 45, rode to an easy third term unopposed on the ballot and swamping sticker candidate Charles Dennehy, 57, of West Quincy.

Phelan received 9,545 votes. Dennehy's campaign fizzled with fewer than 40 votes.

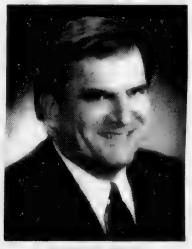
Incumbents Joseph G. Finn, 48, and John F. Keenan, 41, were re-elected to third terms and School Committee Vice Chairman Michael E. McFarland won the seat Council President Frank McCauley is leaving closing out a 32-year political career.

Finn topped the at-large field with a vote of 8,540. Keenan was second with 7,940 and McFarland third with 7,512.



Behind them were Julie Berberan, 46, community activist with 3,238 and Dominic M. Paulo, 40, restaurant owner with 2,387.

Brian F. McNamee, 50, former member of the Zoning Board of Appeals, won the Ward 6 council seat incumbent Alicia Gardner is vacating for family reasons after one term.



McNamee defeated Atty. Mark W. Bracken, 26, 1,599 to 1,215 – a 344-vote margin. Bracken was endorsed by Gardner.

The three open school committee seats went to Anne M. Mahoney, 40, co-owner of a print and web design firm; Kevin W. Mulvey, 33, an attorney and special prosecutor in the Norfolk District Attorney's Office; and James S. Timmins, 48, an attorney and

$5M State Grant For Downtown Revitalization

A $5 million grant to the city of Quincy that can be used to fund downtown revitalization initiatives is included in the State Senate's version of the Economic Stimulus Bill.

The bill provides for local and statewide economic initiatives such as increasing historic tax credits and improving coordination of science and technology initiatives.

"Besides these statewide initiatives, the bill includes some direct assistance for communities that have local economic development plans in place, such as Boston, Fall River and Worcester," said Sen. Michael Morrissey.

"It only made sense due to the potential for new economic development to include Quincy as a community to receive a share of this funding."

The monies could be used to help the city complete construction of the cross town connector or design roads and parking structures or do other infrastructure work.

"The city can use the funds for land takings for the road, utilities or other improvements to assist in the development," said Morrissey.

Quincy's $5 million grant is included in the sum of $473 million the Senate bill would invest in certain areas to stimulate job growth.

A similar bill, containing an appropriation of $387 million, but not including the Quincy grant, has been passed by the House.

Both bills now go to a six-member House-Senate Conference Committee to resolve the differences and return the final version to the House and Senate for passage.

Only after the governor signs the bill in its final form will the money be released to Quincy.

Some $200 million of the $473 million in the Senate bill is in bond authorizations but Quincy's $5 million is a direct appropriation.

This means the monies will not come under the state's bond cap.

"The city will not be subject to the long list of projects waiting bond funding and should guarantee that Quincy will receive the funding sooner," said Morrissey.

"This money will greatly assist in the city's current and future development of Quincy Center."

Residents will find helpful hints and important contact information that could be invaluable to their families."

The Health Department will also conduct a public flue clinic the same y residents are eligible to receive the flu shots provided by the department.

There will be a large number of vehicles and equipment on display including; police boats, motorcycles, a fire truck, emergency communication trailers, a Red Cross disaster truck, and the Norfolk County Sheriff's Mobile Command Center.

In addition to information, participants can receive smoke detectors, carbon monoxide detectors, and personal first aid kits while supplies last.

"We have made great strides in preparing our City for the challenges we face in the 21st century," added Phelan. "We hope to share our accomplishments with the public and inform residents of the steps they can take to ensure proper preparedness during any time of emergency."

For more information on the fair, call the Emergency Management Department at 617-376-1105.

Police Department Receives Thermal Imaging Units

Quincy Police Department received imaging units from Boston Scientific, Monday, Nov. 7.

The units will be used in nighttime searches, robbery investigations and other tactile operations. They will allow the user to notice temperature changes consistent with radiant heat, specifically body heat. The units are most useful at night or in a dark environment when regular visibility is limited.

"I want to thank Boston Scientific for his generous grant," said Mayor William Phelan. "the addition of the thermal imagining units will improve our force's response capabilities and help improve public safety response and the units are an upgrade to our department."

The units have an approximate value of $13,000 each.

"The new thermal imaging units can be used for a variety of important uses," said Chief Robert Crowley. "Our department continues to leverage outside resources in an effort to improve public safety. We need to take advantage of the technological resources available to a department in the 21st century. I want to thank Boston Scientific for this generous grant."

Quincy To Adopt Senior Citizen Safety Zones

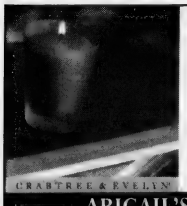
By MIKAELA SLANEY

Gov. Mitt Romney signed a home rule petition allowing Quincy to establish Senior Citizen Safety Zones.

Miles per hour signs will be posted adjacent to areas of senior housing, nursing homes, homes for assisted living, community centers, hospitals as well as areas where senior activities occur on a regular basis.

In a senior citizen safety zone Quincy will reduce speed limits, but to no less than 20 miles per hour. The city will mark these safety zone areas by restriping roadways and by installing flashing signals or appropriate signs. The state traffic engineer will decide the necessary markings.

Laws enforcing these signs shall take effect as soon as the signs are posted. The petition will not affect state highway roads or major arterial roads, and safety zones will be no larger than 500 ft in radius.



Counscillor Kevin Coughlin introduced the bill, and testified on Beacon Hill to get it passed. According to Coughlin, the signs are "not unlike school safety zones," in that flashing lights warn oncoming traffic when to slow down.

Quincy is one of the first cities to adopt this petition, and according to Coughlin, an although he can't speak nationally, "this is unusual."

The Mayor's Thanksgiving Dinner for seniors will be held Thursday, Nov. 24, at 12 noon in the Fore River Clubhouse, 16 Nevada Rd., Quincy Point.

Still Confusion About Quincy Name

Quincy, as a town and then a city, has been around some 213 years.

And yet, many people – some residents and many tourists – still think it was named for President John Quincy Adams.

That honor, of course, went not to him but to his great-grandfather, Col. John Quincy.

Colonel Quincy was the grandfather of Abigail Smith, the wife of second President John Adams and the mother of sixth President John Quincy Adams.

Quincy became Quincy Feb. 22, 1792 when the Massachusetts General Court passed an act incorporating the North Precinct of Old Braintree as a separate town.

The North Precinct residents wanted to break away because the Middle and South Precincts outnumbered them and outvoted them on issues. They felt those two precincts were ganging up of them and wanted to do their own thing in their own town.

But there were some people back then who wanted the new town to be named Hancock after native son John Hancock instead of Boston born Colonel Quincy.

HANCOCK

Hancock, born in the North Precinct and the first signer of the Declaration of Independence, was governor of Massachusetts when the General Court passed the act incorporating the new town as Quincy.

He signed the act the following day – probably with mixed feelings.

But, at the first town meeting of the new town that May, a petition has presented to change the name Quincy to Hancock in honor of the patriot then at the height of his popularity.

The move touched off a stormy, verbal battle on the town meeting floor but it was finally defeated.

Opponents argued that Hancock was still alive and that the honor should go to a distinguished but deceased person.

Colonel Quincy had those credentials. He was both distinguished – and deceased.

He had represented Old Braintree in the General Court from 1717 to 1741 – 12 of those years as Speaker of the House. He died July 11, 1767, at age 77 – two days after John Quincy Adams was born.

But a lot of people still think Quincy was named for his great-grandson.

At the time of its incorporation, the town of Quincy had a population of 900 and fewer than 200 families.

Today, the city of Quincy has a population of 87,755 according to this year's census.

Quincy was incorporated as a city June 11, 1888 and began functioning as a city in January, 1889.

There are something like 18 other Quincy's in the United States. Most of them pronounce it Quin-cee.

We, of course, pronounce it Quin-zee.

Because that's the way Colonel Quincy and the Quincy family pronounced it.

Those other Quincy's, named for John Quincy Adams, apparently thought he pronounced it Quin-cee.

In our Quincy it will always be Quin-zee.

FORMER RESIDENT Joe Fasci with granddaughter, Christina, daughter Kathi and granddaughter, Jessica, and The Quijncy Sun at the first Columbus Day Dinner he organized in Granbury, Tex. where he now lives. Notice the South Quincy Festival and Bocce Club T-Shirts.

YOU MIGHT SAY former Quincy resident Joe Fasci got Christopher Columbus discovered in Granbury, Tex. where Joe now lives and is active in the local American Legion post.

Joe, who keeps tabs on what's going on back here with a mail subscription to The Quincy Sun, writes:

"After many years I finally got our Legion to hold a Columbus Day Italian dinner. Most Texans have a very limited knowledge of Columbus. Many don't know he was Italian.

"The national president of the Sons of Italy sent the post a letter thanking them for their first Columbus Day dinner."

Joe plans to make it an annual event.

Attending the dinner with Joe were his daughter, Kathi, and granddaughters Christina and Jessica – wearing South Quincy Festival and South Quincy Bocce Club T-shirts.

And that gave Joe another chance to remind his Texas friends that it's Quin-zee – not Quin-cee.

SIX GIANT PLASTIC Dunkin' Donuts coffee cups are now part of the concourse scene at Logan Airport.

John Laukkanen of Woodcliff Rd., spotted them the other day and noticed there is a lot of white space at the bottom of the cups.

And got to wondering if Dunkin' Donuts or Discover Quincy might pay for printing the phrase "Born in Quincy, Mass." there.

"I feel it would be pique the curiosity of visitors and some even want to see our fair city," he says.

Don't know how that will fly.

But Quincy is the birthplace of the now world-known Dunkin' Donuts chain.

Founder Bill Rosenberg went into business after World War II with a canteen truck and opened a retail shop on Southern Artery in 1950 called the "Open Kettle." The name didn't catch on so Rosenberg called associates to come up with a better name.

ROSENBERG

"What do you do with a doughnut?" asked Bernard Healy. And answered his own question: "You dunk it!"

And the name "Dunkin' Donuts" was born.

You can still dunk a donut at that first restaurant on Southern Artery.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1950 postcard view of the Northway Service Station on the corner of Hancock and Hunt Streets next to North Quincy High School. The station mailed the postcard to local residents encouraging them to have their cars winterized here. In those days fresh anti-freeze was put into your car's radiator every winter. The Tydol brand name and the "Flying A" logo have been lost in the big-oil company mergers. The power car wash on the left was known as the "Washmobile" and it cost $1.50 for an exterior wash, which was not cheap considering gas was only about 12 cents a gallon 55 years ago. Automated car washes as we know them today were just coming into being. The right part of the gas station was Richard Barry's Insurance office. Today, this is the site of a D'Angelo Sandwich Shop. Opposes High-Rise Office Buildings, Housing And Parking Garages At Hancock Parking Lot

I attended the recent Charrette, which was a meeting designed to find consensus for development of Quincy Square, and would like to note that there are many reasons why the city-owned Hancock Parking Lot should not be developed into high rise office buildings, housing and parking garages.

Quincy Square's safe and tree-shaded Hancock Parking Lot is of vital importance to the thriving restaurant business and open space of Quincy Square. Parking garages are inferior to open parking, since many people, especially women, do not like to park in garages because they perceive them to be dangerous.

Also, the Hancock Lot is over the Town Brook. If it is developed into high rise office buildings and housing, it may cause more flooding on site and in the surrounding area.

It is fine for a developer to build on private property in Quincy Square, but the City of Quincy's well-used, 500-space, taxpayer-owned Hancock Parking Lot should not be for sale.

Segregating Special Education Students Is Unconstitutional

At a recent forum of Quincy School Committee candidates, held at Broad Meadows Middle School on Oct. 27, candidate Kevin Mulvey, in response to a question surrounding Quincy's special education program, stated he had given special education "a lot of thought." His idea was to place all special needs students into one building in order to maximize resources.

As a special education teacher my question is: did he share these thoughts with anybody before exposing them at this public forum? The most widely accepted practice in the sphere of special education today is inclusion, not segregation. Inclusion is at the core of contemporary special ed. theory and critical to decreasing the stigma attached to special education.

If Mulvey, in his thinking, consulted (or even skimmed) the state of federal laws, he would have come across such concepts as least restrictive environment and the right to a free appropriate public education as the foundation of today's educational system. The notion that all learners receiving special education services belong in one building is an idea that was found unconstitutional in 1954 and will again violate the 14th Amendment.

I am afraid candidate Mulvey is out of touch with the most basic aspects of today's educational system. My suggestion is that he update his knowledge on the state and federal laws before claiming he gave something he knows little about "a lot of thought."

McCormack Upsets Burgin In Historic State Senate Race

Nov. 9-15
43 Years Ago

By a margin of 787 votes, City Councillor James McCormack not only handed Sen. Thomas Burgin his first electoral defeat in 38 years, but also seized the Norfolk Senate seat from the Republicans for the first time in history.

The Democrats also gained the Worcester Senate seat with the victory of John Conte.

Meanwhile, ballots across the state were under police protection pending a recount in the John Volpe-Chub Peabody race for governor, the closest in state history. City Clerk John Gillis estimated the cost to the city for the police was $66 a day.

TRANSIT COMMITTEE APPOINTED

Dr. Charles Djerf, president of the Quincy Rotary Club, named a committee to meet with Governor-elect Peabody to push for a comprehensive South Shore transit plan.

The committee included John Herbert, editor of The Patriot Ledger; Heslip Sutherland, chairman of the board of managers of the South Shore Transportation group; George Yarrington, executive director of the Quincy Taxpayers' Association; and George Reardon, chairman of the Quincy-South Shore Chamber of Commerce.

Herbert said, "Governor-elect Peabody is aware of the disenchantment of the South Shore with Gov. Volpe for his reversal from a Budd car plan to rapid transit and has said he definitely wants a program acceptable to the people of the area."

CITY COUNCIL-SCHOOL COMMITTEE CLASH

A member of the School Committee called a proposal by Councillor Charles Shea to combine QHS and Quincy Trade and to construct a new high school "stupid," setting the stage for a councillor-committee clash.

Dr. Paul Gossard, superintendent of schools, notified the council by letter that the committee did not support Shea's proposal.

Shea replied, "If they want to run the schools without help, let them vote a bond issue, which they cannot do. Both the School Committee and the council have to integrate their work."

Bill Arienti Writes In Rhyme

Quincy Firefighter Turns Children's Book Author

By TOM HENSHAW

Quincy firefighter Bill Arienti is leading a double life.

When he isn't fighting fires, he writes children's books.

His first effort, "Scooter the Rabbit," went on sale at selected children's book stores Saturday.

Readings and signings are scheduled for Storybook Cove in Hanover Nov. 19 and Abigail's Crossing in Quincy Dec. 10.

Actually, "Scooter the Rabbit" is the first in a series of books in rhyme called "Tales from Faxon," all of which take place in Faxon Park in Quincy.

In them, woodland creatures explore social values such as tolerance, courage, racial diversity, and themes like bullying and coping with death and dying.

Arienti began writing several years ago around Christmas time when his son, Mark, gave him a list of toys he wanted from Santa.

Aware that the luster of a new toy wears off quickly, he decided to give his son a more lasting gift.

He sat down and wrote a book about a fictional family at Christmas time. Together, he and Mark read the book and Mark enjoyed it so much that he asked his father to write another one.

Arienti also saw the pleasure his son drew from reading "As the Sidewalk Ends," a story in rhyme by Shel Silverstein.

The result was a series of books in rhyme by Arienti dealing directly with social issues aimed at five to ten year olds.

Along the way, Arienti found an illustrator, Sybil Ferror, a graphic artist from San Francisco, to bring his words to life. A partnership was formed for "Scooter the Rabbit."

Ferror is now working on subsequent books in the series.

Bill Arienti can be reached by writing him at "Tales from Faxon," P.O. Box 275, Hanover, MA 02339 or by e-mail at billarienti@aol.com.

St. Mary School Celebrates 75 Years Of Catholic Education

By MARGARET LaFORGIA

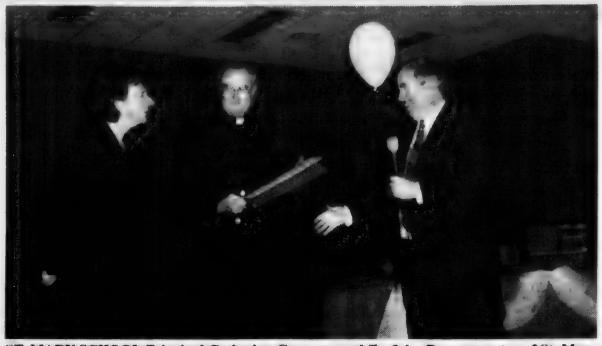
The faculty (both past and present), alumni, current school families and friends of St. Mary School recently celebrated its 75th Anniversary in grand style.

The evening began with a liturgy at St. Mary Church followed by student-guided tours of the school. Guests then dined in Mullarkey Hall on a sumptuous meal provided by Talk of the Town Catering while enjoying music provided DJ Mark Carey.

St. Mary School opened Sept. 9, 1931 to serve students in Grade 1 through 8. Four Sisters of St. Joseph welcomed a class of first grade students.

As is still the philosophy now, they were committed to providing a program of academic excellence and Catholic religious formation to St. Mary's Parish Children. Each year a class was added with the first eighth grade class graduating on June 18, 1939 before a school staff that had grown to include nine full time teaching nuns and a Mother Superior.

Graduating Classes from 1939 through the present were represented by a large number of attending Alumni. All enjoyed themselves as they were brought back in time as they looked at pictures of graduating classes from years past displayed throughout the hall. Alumni, from as far away as California (representing the first graduating class of 1939) and guests had the opportunity to mingle and catch-up with forgotten friends and meet multiple generations of families carrying on the proud tradition of a St. Mary School education.



Greg Pitts, a graduate of the 1979 class, said "It was a wonderful evening filled with reminiscing and seeing old friends. I had a great time".

Two special events took place during the evening. Father John Rowan, pastor of St. Mary's Church and Catherine Cameron, principal of St. Mary's School proudly accepted a Proclamation given to the school by state Sen. Michael Morrissey congratulating St. Mary School on 75 years of Catholic education and that Massachusetts Senate extends their best wishes for continued success.

The other was the drawing for the winner of St. Mary School's Sports Fantasy Raffle. The winning ticket was drawn by Mrs. Dorothy Gerrior Eagles, a member of the 1942 graduating class of St. Mary School.

The lucky winner, Erin Pelten of Quincy, won two tickets each to a Patriots, Red Sox, Celtics, New England Revolution and PawSox game, as well as two tickets to the BU-BC Hockey Game.

"I'd like to thank all the wonderful people of the St. Mary School Community and Church who worked so hard in putting together this wonderful celebration and to those who helped by celebrating with us. We had an overwhelming turnout!" said Principal Cameron.

Mayor's Food Drive Collects 4,000 Pounds Of Food

Mayor William Phelan and the employees of the United States Postal Service collected almost two tons of food Saturday in the Mayor's Annual Holiday Food Drive.

All the food will benefit Quincy's five food pantries.

"I want to thank all for the generous residents that left food items on their doorsteps," said Phelan. "The men and women of the Post Office should be commended for willfully accepting the added burden of collecting all of the food. I sincerely appreciate the charity and compassion that our residents display on a regular basis."

The food will be distributed to the Quincy Crisis Center, Quincy Interfaith Services, Seaside Pantry, Quincy Community Action Programs and the Salvation Army.

"Our food pantries expect an increased demand this winter with costs of basic goods on the rise," added Phelan. "With heating costs, food prices and prescription drugs costs on the increase, more people may need to rely on our food pantries This food drive can make a difference in the lives of the people that depend on these services."

Phelan launched his holiday food drive three years ago after a Project Bread study showed elevated levels of people suffering from hunger in certain parts of Quincy. He has also formed "The Hunger Network" to address the issue of hunger on a year-round basis.

Germantown Center Offers Holiday Assistance To Need

The Germantown Neighborhood Center Holiday Assistance Program will be accepting donations and volunteer assistance to make a brighter holiday season for Quincy families in need.

The Center served over 1000 needy Quincy families during the holiday season last year.

Long-Denied Wartime Sinking Author's Topic At Historical Society

Stephen Puleo, author of the best-selling book on the Boston Molasses Flood, will discuss his latest book, "Due to Enemy Action," Thursday, Nov. 17, at 7:30 p.m. at the Quincy Historical Society.

The book tells the story of the US Navy subchaser Eagles 56 whose sinking off Portland, Me., by a German sub two weeks before the end of World Wear II went unacknowledged for 50 years.

Attorney Paul Lawton, a South Shore native, conducted the investigation that caused the Navy to reverse its finding and three of the four living Eagle crewmen were awarded Purple Hearts.

There will be no admission charge to hear Puleo's talk. Copies of "Due to Enemy Action" will be available for purchase and autographing.

Student-Author To Sign Books At Quincy College

Quincy College will host a book-signing by student Rahman Oladigbolu, author of the recently published "On Holy Pilgrimage," a collection of stories detailing a life of suffering in his native Nigeria.

The signing will take place Thursday, Nov. 17, from 2 to 5 p.m. in Coddington Hall, a highlight of International Education Week (Nov. 14-18) at the college.

Oladigbolu, a 2004 graduate of Quincy College, returned in 2005 to pursue his interest in neuropsychology. He is also studying at Harvard Extension School.

"Rahman is just one example of a large group of Quincy College graduates who enrich the lives and professions of those around them," said Sue Harris, the college president.

"Like Rahman, many students begin here at Quincy College. We are very proud of the role we play in helping to shape their futures — futures that involve important contributions made to their communities."

Oladigbolu is already working on a second book, a response to Susan Sontag's "Illness as Metaphor" and "AIDS as Metaphor." He aspires to earn a PhD in neuropsychology and teach.

"On Holy Pilgrimage" is available through the website www.onholypilgrimage.com.

Christmas Festival Poster Contest Deadline Nov. 14

The deadline for completion and pickup of posters for the annual holiday poster contest sponsored by the Christmas Festival Committee is Monday morning, Nov. 14.

The contest is held in cooperation with the public, parochial and private schools in Quincy with the participants limited to students in grades 1 through 3, 4 and 5.

The contest rules are simple:

The poster contest theme is the theme of the Christmas Parade, "Christmas . . . A Time of Joy and Family," or a theme of the participating student's choice.

The theme must be written in the top right and corner of the poster.

Maximum poster size is 14 by 22 inches; the minimum 8 1/2 by 11 inches.

Since this is a poster contest, three-dimensional and ornate entries are not eligible.

The student's name, phone number, grade, school and teacher's name must be on the poster, either on an ID card attached or clearly printed on the back side of the poster.

Posters must be handed to teachers by Monday, Nov. 14.

The Christmas Festival Committee will collect all of the posters from the main office of the respective schools Monday morning, Nov. 4.

The judging will take place immediately and the winning students will be notified by Nov. 18.

They will be introduced and awards presented during the Christmas Tree Lighting ceremony Friday, Nov. 25, in the President's Place Galleria.

The winning posters will be displayed in the windows of The Quincy Sun during the holiday season; others will be displayed at the Thomas Crane Public Library.

The posters become the property of the Christmas Festival Committee but the prize winning and honorable mention posters will be returned to their respective schools in January.

First prize in the contest is a $100 savings bond, second prize a $75 savings bond and third prize a $50 savings bond.

Two categories of winners will be chosen, one for youngsters in Grades 1 to 3, the other for Grades 4 and 5. There will also be honorable mention winners for whom recognition is the only prize.

Coordinators of the poster contest are Maria Maguire and Louise Downs.

FALL CAR CARE

AAA Says Check The Tires But Don't Forget Boots, Belts, Hoses

Tire care and maintenance are deserving of special attention by motorists because of the tire's role in vehicle stability, braking and traction, yet it is important not to overlook the other rubber components on a car or truck, says AAA Southern New England.

Although tires are easily inspected for air pressure and overall condition, studies show they still are not being checked often enough. But tires aren't the only component on your car or truck that needs to be checked.

"Drive belts, radiator/ heater hoses and even the rubber boots that protect the steering components and today's cars need to be inspected," said John Paul, AAA Southern New England's Car Doctor. "AAA's research shows that many motorists inspect the condition of their vehicle's belts and hoses only once a year."

"This is far too long considering rubber components can degrade and rapidly fail once they begin to crack, glaze or blister. AAA recommends having these components inspected during each oil change service."

Because newer vehicles often use "serpentine" belts that drive several vital engine and electrical functions, the loss of this one belt means a vehicle will need to be towed. Finding a replacement in a hurry can also be difficult depending on the make, model and age of the vehicle.

Ruptured hoses can be another trip buster, Paul noted. "Finding replacement hoses at a moment's notice can be problematic because most are custom-formed for different engine configurations," he said. "It is far more convenient to request a replacement from a repair shop while the existing component is still functioning."

Quincy Awarded $30,000 In Technical Assistance

The city of Quincy has been awarded a $30,000 grant by the State Office of Environmental Affairs to promote Smart Growth Technical Assistance.

The Smart Growth program can be used for a wide range of projects that will protect natural resources and development in densely populated areas.

Examples include open space, residential subdivisions, mixed use municipal zoning districts and agricultural improvements.

"The grant funding would be used for the development of a Quincy Center downtown vision plan and design guidelines," said Rep. Ron Mariano.

"This funding will help provide much-needed technical assistance for the city in planning and designing its vision for Quincy Center," said Sen. Michael Morrissey.

"The state's smart growth initiative encourages development in mixed use districts with access to public transportation and roadways, all elements that Quincy Center has," said Rep. Stephen Tobin.

"The grants are competitive and the 2006 funding round granted a total of 82 communities totaling $1.5 million," said Rep. Bruce Ayers.

Winners Announced In 'Kilroy Was Here' Photo Contest

From the Eiffel Tower in Paris to the Leaning Tower of Pisa, from the sands of Omaha Beach to the sands of Baghdad and Afghanistan and the Great Wall of China, the Quincy-born catchphrase "Kilroy Was Here" traveled the world again this summer just as it did in World War II, thanks to all those who participated in the Kilroy Was Here Photo Contest, the winners of which were announced this week.

"With many excellent photos submitted, selecting one Best Overall Photo was extremely difficult," said Discover Quincy Executive Director Jennifer Logue. who served on the judging panel along with Broad Meadows Middle School teacher Ron Adams, the USS Salem's Michael Condon and Margaret LaForest, and Quincy residents Frank Hogan and Kathy Dullea Hogan.

"But the judges agreed that Carrie Sunde's Great Wall of China photo really captured the spirit of what the contest was all about: taking Kilroy to far-off exotic locales and spreading the world about Kilroy's connection to Quincy."

The contest was sponsored by Discover Quincy, the USS Salem Shipbuilding Museum and The Quincy Sun.

Honorable Mention: Kilroy at the monument marking the Atlantic Charter between the United States and Great Britain — Catherine Leonard.

Special Award

To Quincy's John Laukkenan for submitting 35 photos showing Kilroy in Iceland, Finland, Estonia, the Russian border and more.

First place winners will receive an overnight stay for two with breakfast at the Boston Marriott Quincy, with dinner at the hotel's Kilroy Pub. Second place winners will receive a Kilroy Was Here T-shirt, while Honorable Mention winners will receive a ribbon and certificate. All entrants will receive a certificate of recognition for participating.

To further recognize both contest entrants and winners, the USS Salem will hold an exhibit of all the entered photographs aboard the ship on Sunday, Nov. 20, from 1 to 4 p.m. In addition to the photo display, contest winners will be presented with their awards at the event. Quincy actress and theater company director Diane Purdy will also reprise her performance as "Rosie the Riveter" from last spring's Kilroy Day aboard the USS Salem. Admission for the event will be the USS Salem's regular admission fee of $5.

"This will be a great opportunity for everyone to come down and see just how far Kilroy traveled in the summer of 2005 while celebrating our city's great shipbuilding heritage," said LaForest.

The phrase "Kilroy Was Here" began at the Quincy Shipyard during World War II when inspector James Kilroy began scrawling the phrase on the sides of skips he inspected. With no time to paint over the markings, "Kilroy Was Here" soon traveled the world, becoming a rallying cry and morale booster for Allied troops on land, air and sea. Following the war, the phrase and its accompanying cartoon took on a life of its own, appearing as graffiti on the sides of buildings, bridges and landmarks around the world as well as in movies such as Patton, Kelly's Heroes and even Bugs Bunny cartoons.

"The phrase 'Kilroy Was Here' came to signify the average GI's role in advancing the fight for freedom and liberty around the world," Logue noted. "It's particularly moving to known that as a result of the contest, 'Kilroy' is filling that same role today for our troops in Iraq and Afghanistan."

REAL ESTATE

Even A Fresh Coat Of Paint Can Boost Your Home's Value

(NAPS) — Whether you think the real estate boom has hit a ceiling or there's still plenty of time before the bubble bursts, there are ways to boost your home's worth.

In fact, real estate agents consistently say something as simple as a fresh coat of paint can bring higher selling prices. Even if you don't plan on moving soon, some new paint can still make a difference in the way your home looks and feels.

Just remember to choose your paint wisely. Homebuyers generally like to see spaces that are clean and bright, so consider using a light or neutral-colored latex paint.

Plus, real estate agents say that just like any other improvement, the quality of the paint you use may influence your return on investment. If you tell a potential buyer the family room is painted with a paint that contains built-in Scotchgard Protector, for example, he or she may be impressed by the fact that the walls can resist stains and scuffs. Ace Hardware sells an interior latex paint called Ace Sensations with Scotchgard Protector.

The paint is mildew resistant, has what's known as a "high rate of washability" and comes in a variety of colors. Given that one in five homeowners with children say they repaint as often as once per year to keep walls looking fresh, the stain-resistant paint may be a good investment.

A second way to boost your home's value may be to take a walk outside. Take a look at your house and yard from the street, using an objective eye. The impression you get is what real estate agents describe as "curb appeal."

That initial impression can help determine the final selling price of a home.

If your yard is a little rundown, take steps to clean it up. Plant shrubs to spruce up the appearance. Give the windows a quick washing and pick up debris in your yard. Give the grass a quick mowing. Chances are, the more manicured your yard appears, the more "green" your house will fetch.

Bathroom Ambiance

(NAPS)—When it comes to adding a luxurious touch to your home décor, it pays to tap into your imagination and think sinks, and faucets and hardware.

A growing number of consumers are choosing to add an elegant touch to outdated bathrooms. A renovated bathroom provides a great bathing experience and greater relaxation. In addition, by renovating your bathroom, you could actually increase the resale value of your home.

From faucets to countertops to vanities, the latest designs provide luxury without extravagance and can breathe new life into the bathroom. Kitchen and bath remodels recoup 77 percent of their cost and are the two rooms that return the most on home investment dollars.

When creating a luxury-for-less bathroom, bring the outdoors in, and incorporate natural stone tile into the décor. For example, beauty, quality and value come together in a new line of granite vanity tops with attached under-mount porcelain sinks. These vanity tops from Pegasus add a rich look to the bathroom — and can be installed in a few simple steps.

Let Ideas Flow

A hot trend in bathroom design is the addition of elegant yet functional faucets and hardware. A variety of faucets and accessories are available in finishes such as chrome, brushed nickel and polished brass to provide an artistic touch representing styles to fit individual tastes.

To further update the look of your bathroom, as well as change the flow of the shower, add a stylish new showerhead. Varieties abound, with everything from extension arms to dual showerheads.

Home Ideas

(NAPS) — Could your house harbor a brown recluse spider? Brown recluse spiders hide in warm, dark areas and are sometimes found in stored clothing or shoes. Their bites cause painful sores and disfiguring scars. For more information on spiders and other pests, visit www.terminix.com.

You can give your holiday table a special glow with a centerpiece created of candles and flowers. To find great decorating ideas, check out the flower grower's Flower Possibilities web site at www.flowerpossibilities.com.

One of the best new products today for clearing sink, tub and shower clogs is the Auto-Spin drain-cleaning machine from Ridge Tool Company.

Quincy Property Continues to Soar

Quincy- A recent study by a local real estate professional finds that, the median sales price of residential property in Quincy has increased 21 percent since 2002. Single family homes seem to have had the largest increase, at 29 percent, while multi-families and condos have also proved to be a wise investment, on average appreciating 22 and 20 percent respectively.

Although many are skeptical that home prices will continue to rise, 'recent research conducted by the National Association of REALTORS® suggests that predictions of a severe correction in home prices locally are largely unfounded. The expectation is that home prices will continue to climb, albeit more modestly, than in recent years.'

We've got a question, "Are you ready?"

STAMOS & STAMOS Realtors

747 East Squantum Street
Squantum, MA 02171
phone 617.328.9400
fax 617.328.8616

Ready for what? You ask.

For over a year you've read about "the bubble". The intangible, much written about, bubble that was about to burst and send prices plummeting and values with it. When the bubble was not the headline news and the talk of economic experts, speculation about rising interest rates was.

We all did what anyone would do, when such catastrophic events have been forecast, we wait. We've waited and waited and waited and neither event occurred. The elusive bubble is floating about somewhere and the interest rates are still at historic lows.

In reality, we have been holding in place for far too long waiting for the experts and prognosticators to tell us where we are heading. We think it is time to show them where we are going.

The spring market officially begins in January. Yes, January. From there it builds up to the vibrant market that we usually enjoy in April, May, and June. The word "usually" because the predictions of dire events about to occur started in summer of 2004, and, as you know, had the effect of stifling what should have been an ordinary 2005 market. Prices would have peaked and plateaued, just because that adjustment was necessary and with phenomenally low interest rates, you could have gone on with your life instead of debating whether or not you were selling or buying at the right time. The right time is, after all, dictated by your needs.

With the spring market about to get underway, we suggest that you get on with your life and your dreams. Whether you are buying a home or selling a home, it is time to move forward. If you have goals and a future in mind, today is the right time to buy or sell or, if you will, prepare for the spring 2006 market.

So, are you ready to get on with life while the economic forecasters and the media, neither of which come out with anything but greyspeak about the state of the economy and the future of the housing market, continue with their progress-stalling incarnations of the economy and continue to speculate about your future?

If you are thinking about buying a home or you are thinking about selling home, we ask, as you interview companies to assist you in the purchase or sale of a home, that you consider Stamos & Stamos Realtors; we are a great company to do business with and competitive in every way. We look forward to working with you. The next move is yours.

A Job Well Done

By LT. DAN MINTON

On Thursday, Oct. 27, at approximately 12:50 a.m., Officer Patrick Folan was dispatched to Hodges Avenue in North Quincy after a citizen called to report that a car horn was sounding outside her home. She also stated that she believed that someone was in her car because the interior light was on.

LT. DAN MINTON

With Officer Folan, the victim/caller examined her car and discovered that the interior was in disarray and that her collection of compact discs (CDs) and visor holder were missing. She said that one of the disc holders also contained business cars. The victim said that she left her car unlocked.

Officer Paul Holland arrived and interviewed a neighbor who told him that he just had a confrontation with a man on his property. He said that the suspect left the area, walking through yards on Hodges Court. The neighbor provided a thorough description of this man, which Officer Holland broadcast on the police radio.

Officer John McGovern came upon a male matching the suspect in the alley adjacent to O'Malley's Hardware, walking away from the Vane Street parking lot. Officer McGovern interviewed the suspect and asked the suspect if he had any CD's in his backpack. The suspect said he did and gave the officer permission to search the backpack, where he found a country/western CD.

Officer McGovern radioed Officer Folan, who was in the station filing his report to confirm that country/western CDs were also stolen. The suspect became "antsy" when questioned.

When officer Holland and Sgt. Greg Goyette arrived on the scene and monitored the suspect, Officer McGovern began a thorough search of the backpack and found a black CD carrier – with the business cards the victim has listed.

Officer Holland brought the items back to the victim, who identified them as hers. The suspect was placed under arrest.

Prior to being transported to the station. Sgt. Goyette searched the pockets of the suspect and found two Citizen Bank business debit cards. The cards were listed to a local roofing company, so the officers continued their search for other cars that may have been entered.

Officer McGovern came across a truck with the same roofing company name on the door. This vehicle had also been entered and the suspect charged with the crime. The search of the area for the suspect resulted in a quick apprehension and linked him to the two incidents.

The suspect, a 21-year-old male from Hyde Park, was arrested for one count of "breaking and entering" and two counts of "larceny." In this case, leaving your car unlocked increases the chances of property loss. Breaking into a car often results in unwanted noise by the suspect. Most likely, this suspect went from car to car looking for unlocked doors.

Day or night, valuables should not be left in the passenger area. Even though you know that the contents may not be valuable, a thief's curiosity may increase the temptation to break in and steal the item.

Nice work!

KUDOS GO out to Ward 4 Councillor Jay Davis for notifying the police before an incident happened. On Oct. 24, Davis was dining at the X & O Restaurant in Quincy Square when he observed a male, with his face covered by a mask, acting strangely at the bar. Officers Dan Guarente, Jamie Cochrane and Bill Ward responded and determined that the man was wanted in California for a felony drug offense.

The 48-year-old Plymouth man was taken into custody.

Too often, people are reluctant to call the police. Let us check out the situation before something bad happens. Another 'Nice Work!'

UPDATE: The suspect involved in the bleach incident at Star Market turned out to be a 26-year-old Quincy resident. He is in a psychiatric hospital in Boston, has serious medical problems and pending criminal charges.

Natick Ends North's Year

By CHRIS POISSON

GIRLS' SOCCER

A cold front moved in on the sizzling North Quincy High School girls' soccer team at the most inopportune time.

Unbeaten in their final nine regular season games, the 13th-seeded Red Raiders (10-5-6) suffered a 3-0 shutout to No. 20 Natick (9-8-2) last Friday afternoon at Teal Field in the preliminary round of the Division 1 South sectional tournament.

"You work so hard to get there and, boom, it's over," said head coach Paul Bregoli.

Indeed, midway through the season Bregoli and his coaching staff wondered if the team had enough to make it to the postseason for the ninth straight season.

After a 6-1 drubbing at Sandwich Oct. 5, the Red Raiders sported a 5-4-2 record with six of their remaining nine games away from Teal Field. But they went 5-0-4 the rest of the way thanks to a suffocating defense that allowed just seven goals.

"We had a great year," Bregoli said. "You always remember your last game, but you can't forget the rest of the season. We had a great run in the second half to get into the tournament. The kids pulled together and played well."

North Quincy found itself in a hole before the game even started, as it played without sophomore all-star midfielder Emily Milone and senior captain and midfielder Lindsey Clifford.

"Unfortunately, we weren't at top strength for the game," Bregoli said. "Losing two key players really hurt us."

Without Milone (seven goals, nine assists) the Red Raiders had trouble getting the ball up front to the forwards and the Atlantic Coast League's leading scorer, senior captain Caitlin McCleary (18 goals, six assists).

"No excuses, but it's like taking Larry Bird off those Celtics teams," Bregoli said. "Emily Milone makes everyone better."

Natick controlled the first 20 minutes and struck 8:36 into the game when midfielder Casey Brown beat senior keeper Kelly Barden from 35 yards out. It missed out on a couple of other chances when a ball hit the crossbar and another sailed over the goal.

With about 10 minutes left in the half, North Quincy appeared to have scored. Senior defender Robert Phelan made a throw-in pass, which was redirected to sophomore forward Mary Kate Stille, who pocketed the ball into an open net. But the goal was disallowed when the officials ruled her offside.

"We dominated the last 20 minutes of the first half," Bregoli said. "They didn't really cross midfield. But their goalie did a nice job of cutting balls off. She was really aggressive coming out for the balls."

Nearly five minutes into the second half, Natick extended its lead to 2-0 when Sophie Levinsky tapped a ball past junior keeper Kristin Reamer, who replaced Barden. Brittney Flutie notched the assist. She's the niece of New England Patriots backup quarterback Doug Flutie, who attended the game.

Just over a minute later, Brown converted a nice cross from Flutie for a 3-0 cushion.

"Defensively, except for the five goals against Whitman-Hanson and the six to Sandwich, we hadn't given up more than two goals in a game in the other 18 games," Bregoli said. "For them to score three was a shock, particularly because we were playing so well."

The Red Raiders almost got on the board midway through when senior captain and forward Lauren Milone put the ball in the net off junior midfielder Jillian Benn's corner kick. The goal was taken away when the officials ruled the Red Raiders held the Natick keeper.

Bregoli said junior sweepers Melissa Mendall and Bridget Coleman, senior forward and captain Annmarie Campanale and senior midfielder Katherine Andreosatos played well.

Sports

Quincy Quiets D-Y, 19-17

FOOTBALL

By CHRIS POISSON

The Quincy High School football team's 150-mile round-trip trek to the Cape last Friday turned out to be a joyful journey.

Anchored by a potent running attack and an opportunistic defense, the Presidents pulled out a 19-17 win at Dennis-Yarmouth to remain in the hunt for a possible share of the Atlantic Coast League title.

"It was a good, hard-fought football game," said head coach Bob Noble. "D-Y is a decent ball club. It was a back-and-forth contest and we were able to prevail. Any time you take a 150-mile bus ride round-trip and you come away with a victory, you have to be pleased."

Quincy (5-3 overall) improved to 5-1 in the ACL and trails front-runner Plymouth North, which defeated Sandwich, 30-7, to stay undefeated at 7-0.

"We continue to hang in there as far as the league title picture," Noble said. "We're having success taking it at a one-game-at-a-time approach. Like I've said, let's see where we are come Thanksgiving."

Quincy travels to Sandwich Saturday afternoon at 1:30 and ends the season with the Thanksgiving Day game against North Quincy.

Senior tailback Everton DeCastro once again powered the offense, rushing for 179 yards and a touchdown on 30 carries. He also scored a defensive TD.

In the last three games, the captain has gained 516 yards and scored six TDs. For the season, he's totaled 1,023 yards and nine TDs.

"He's having an outstanding year and it's happening rather quietly," Noble said. "He's as good or better than any back in our league."

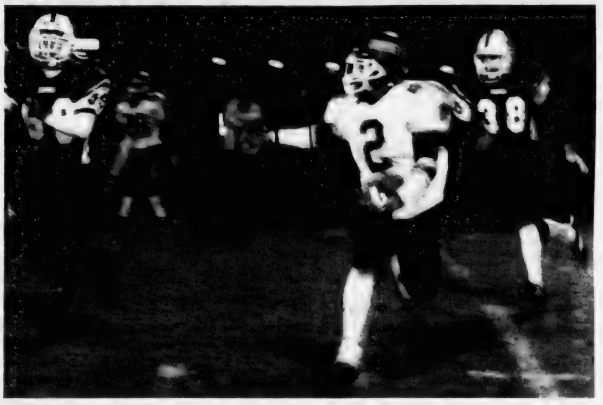
The Presidents got on the board when D-Y turned the ball over on its first drive. They knocked the ball from the quarterback and DeCastro scooped it up and ran 37 yards for a score. They led 6-0 with 9:23 left in the opening quarter after the extra point was blocked.

The Dolphins went ahead, 7-6, at the start of the second quarter on a 4-yard TD run and they extended their lead to 10-7 with a 47-yard field goal with 3:50 remaining in the half.

Quincy's defense came up with another big play when junior linebacker Tom Hazelhurst stripped the ball from the quarterback with about two minutes left. The Presidents capitalized on DeCastro's 15-yard TD scamper with seven ticks left. They led 12-10 after the two-point conversion pass failed.

On the opening series of the second half, junior quarterback Matt Boyle capped a 7:30 drive with a 1-yard TD plunge. DeCastro's extra point made it 19-10.

In the fourth quarter, senior captain Chris Pratt blocked a punt deep in D-Y territory. This time, tough, Quincy failed to take advantage when it was stuffed on a fourth-and-goal play from the 1-yard line.



The Dolphins closed out the scoring with a 20-yard TD pass with 1:10 left in the game. Quincy recovered the ensuing onside kick and took a knee to end the game.

Noble praised his defense, including Pratt, Hazelhurst, senior defensive lineman and captain D.J. Andrews, junior linebacker Camillo Arredondo and junior defensive back Jim Aikens (interception).

"Our defense played extremely well," Noble said. "We were worried about their speed and quickness, but we contained that very well."

QUARTERBACK MATT BOYLE (18) will get a push from senior D.J. Andrews (54) as he plunges into the end zone from 1 yard out in the third quarter.

EVERTON DeCASTRO (2) runs 8 yards for a first down in the second quarter during Quincy's 19-17 win last Friday at Dennis-Yarmouth. The senior tailback rushed for 179 yards and returned a fumble for a touchdown and ran for another. Quincy Sun photos/Robert Noble

Raiders Win Second Straight

The North Quincy High School football team rallied for a 20-12 victory last Friday at Nauset for its second straight win.

"We've played well the past couple of games," said head coach Bill Shaughnessy. "We've had some personal situations and some injuries, but we've pulled together as a team. It's great for the kids. It's nice to see smiles on their faces after the games. We've had some frustrating games this year."

The Red Raiders (2-7 overall, 1-5 Atlantic Coast League) host Plymouth South tomorrow (Friday) at 6:30 p.m. at Veterans Memorial Stadium. The Panthers are coming off a 27-26 loss to Norwell.

North Quincy grabbed an 8-0 lead in the first quarter on junior tailback James Bleiler's 5-yard touchdown run. Junior quarterback Mike O'Mahony hit junior wideout Dave Guerriero for the two-point conversion pass.

Bleiler, who started in place of senior Chris Tufo (hamstring injury), rushed for 77 yards before leaving the game with an ankle injury. Sophomore Danny Jackson took his spot in the backfield and ran for 50 yards.

Nauset got on the board with a 25-yard TD pass in the first quarter and took a 12-8 lead right before halftime with another TD pass.

In the third quarter, the Red Raiders orchestrated a 75-yard drive on their first series, culminating with O'Mahony's 6-yard TD run for a 14-12 lead.

North Quincy extended its lead to 20-12 in the fourth quarter when O'Mahony (159 yards) fired a 4-yard TD strike to Guerriero.

Senior wideouts Anthony Black and Benson Luc came through with clutch, first-down receptions.

Playing well defensively were senior tackle Anthony Walsh, linebackers Terrance Sibley (sophomore), Akil Benjamin (senior) and Rob Connell (senior), and defensive backs Steve Spring (senior) and Sean McBrien (junior), who intercepted a pass on Nauset's final possession of the game.

VISIBLY BETTER

Few factors are as important as good visibility when you are driving your vehicle. Toward this end, car owners should replace their wiper blades every six months. The windshield wiper consists of three basic parts – the lower wiper arm that protrudes up from the cowl, the blade that attaches to the wiper arm, and the rubber refill that wipes the glass. The part that eventually breaks down from extreme weather conditions, dust, and dirt is the thin rubber refill. Most often, it can be replaced relatively easily and inexpensively. It is also possible, however, for the blade to become weak and loose or even bend slightly. If you have problems with a chattering blade, replace the entire unit.

Being able to see the road is one of, if not the, most important part of driving your automobile. At LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO, we are trained experts and we would be happy to take a look at your windshield wiper system. We can change everything for you, from the wiper motor to the blades themselves. Bring your car to 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree today for top notch service that you can trust. If you have any questions please call 781-843-1550 at your leisure. Open: Mon. -Fri. 6am-9pm, Sat. 7am-9pm, Sun. 9am-5pm. Sunoco and most major credit cards honored. We are "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer."

HINT: Clean your windshield every time you fill your tank with gas. At the same time, wipe down the wiper blades with a wet cloth or paper towel.

Body Fat Scales

Q. I recently was told to stop obsessing about my weight and concentrate more on lowering my body fat. I bought a scale that also can measure your body fat. How accurate are these scales, and what is the best way to know exactly your body's fat percentage?

A. Achieving a body fat percentage within a healthy range is essential for maintaining good health. A high percentage of body fat can cause a variety of medical conditions such as cardiovascular disease and diabetes, not to mention making you feel less than your best.

Body fat scales are available in many sporting goods and department stores. They are programmed to determine your body fat through a method called bioelectrical impedance. Bioelectrical impedance sends a safe, low-level electrical signal carried by water and fluid up one leg and down the other when standing on the metal plates of the scale.

It measures the body's resistance to the current as it passes through fat, lean muscle and water. Fat will cause more impedance than lean muscle, and the scale can determine your body fat through the amount of resistance measured.

Its accuracy is largely dependant on you. Be sure to enter the correct information when setting up the scale. You'll be asked your age, activity level and gender. An incorrect input of age or gender will affect your results.

For the most accurate results it is important to be well-hydrated. Since the electrical signal uses water for conduction, being dehydrated may limit the accuracy of your test and probably give you a higher body fat percentage. Also remember to eliminate alcohol consumption 48 hours prior to testing and avoid using a diuretic. Read the manual that accompanied your body fat scale for further instructions and procedures.

When used correctly, body fat scales using bioelectrical impedance have an accuracy of plus or minus 3 percent. It is recommended that you create the same conditions each time you test. This will allow you to see if there is really a change in your body fat percentage, and not just because you may be more hydrated from one time to the next.

Knowing your body fat is a valuable tool to get a sense of your overall fitness. Keep track of your progress, but don't treat body fat measurements like you would your weight on a scale. Your body will adjust to your exercising and eating well, but it may take a few weeks before you see a change in your body fat percentage, and then the number may go down only slightly. Relax, this is normal. Don't forget you're measuring a percentage of your body fat, so decreasing it by 1 percent is a great step in the right direction.

I suggest using a body fat scale along with circumference measurements, cardiovascular and functional assessments. Together, these can give a great picture of your overall health.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program.

Alzheimer's Disease Awareness Month

(NAPS) — In 1983, Ronald Reagan declared the month of November National Alzheimer's Awareness Month. Today, more than 4 million Americans have Alzheimer's disease, and experts predict that number could double in the next 25 years.

Designated both as National Alzheimer's Awareness Month and National Family Caregivers Month, November presents an opportunity to recognize the progress made against the disease and to acknowledge and support the millions of caregivers devoted to looking after their loved ones.

Alzheimer's is a progressive, neurodegenerative disease characterized by memory problems that eventually lead to severe cognitive, functional and behavioral impairment. Nearly half of Alzheimer's patients are first diagnosed in the moderate or severe stages, when signs and symptoms become more pronounced and behavioral problems can occur. According to the National Institute on Aging, signs and symptoms of moderate Alzheimer's disease can include:

- Increased memory loss.
- Difficulty recognizing familiar people.
- Problems with language.
- Restlessness, agitation, anxiety and wandering.
- Repetitive statements or movements.
- Hallucinations, delusions, suspiciousness or paranoia.

Dr. Martin Farlow, professor and vice-chairman for research in the department of neurology at Indiana University School of Medicine, advises patients and their families to learn as much as possible about the disease and what to expect as it progresses. Following are answers to some commonly asked questions:

Q: Can treatments help individuals with Alzheimer's disease?

A: There is no cure for Alzheimer's, but there are treatments available that may help patients maintain their mental capacity and ability to perform basic activities longer than if they were not treated.

Q: When should a patient start treatment?

A: Treatment should start as soon as a patient is diagnosed. If you think a loved one has Alzheimer's, make an appointment to see your doctor right away. The sooner the diagnosis, the sooner the treatment can be started to slow the progression of symptoms.

Q: If someone is already taking one medicine for Alzheimer's is there anything else that can be done?

A: There are multiple medications available to treat Alzheimer's disease which work differently and can be used alone or in combination with one another. For more information, you can visit www.Alzheimersonline.com or ask your physician about all available treatment options.

Q: I feel overwhelmed as a caregiver. Is it common to feel this way?

A: Among all caregivers, those who look after Alzheimer's patients tend to report the highest levels of stress. That's why it is important for caregivers to take time out for themselves, to turn to family and friends for assistance, and to join local support groups.

Namenda (memantine HC1) is the only mediation approved for the moderate to severe stages of Alzheimer's disease and is available by prescription in the U.S. Ask your doctor about Namenda, visit www.Namenda.com or call 1-877-262-6363.

Namenda is contraindicated in patients with known hypersensitivity to memantine HC1 or any excipients used in the formulation. The most common adverse events reported with Namenda vs. placebo were dizziness, confusion, headache and constipation. In patients with severe renal impairment, the dosage should be reduced.

Foods That Pack An Energizing Punch

(NAPS) — Too busy to find something healthy to eat?

Before you make another trip to the vending machine, you might wish to consider a smarter snacking option—one that requires no prep time, but can boost your energy level. That's the advice from nutritionists who recommend we take a closer look at convenient snacks to fuel our bodies with energy.

"Often, when people are busy and on-the-go, they end up eating foods that are not nutritious and portions that are too large. The result is that we then end up feeling sluggish," says Leslie Bonci, M.P.H., R.D. "I recommend buying foods that fuel your body with both carbohydrates and protein. This helps make snacking more healthy by controlling the amount of food you are putting in your body."

Bonci, nutritionist for several athletic teams, including the Pittsburgh Steelers, Cincinnati Reds and Toronto Blue Jays, encourages people looking for a quick and nutritious energy boost to try individually cheese wedges.

"Look for cheese, which provides both calcium and protein, to help fuel your body with energy," she says. "In addition to being an energy source, protein helps build strong muscles, hair and nails. Cheese is a great quick snack and makes a wonderful, healthy platter for a holiday party."

Bonci recommends foil-wrapped Laughing Cow Gourmet Cheese Bites and the Mini Babybel line of all-natural cheeses, which come individually wrapped in red wax. She also has some simple energy-boosting tips that are great for people who have limited time but need maximum energy:

- Get an extra hour of sleep.
- Stick to an eating schedule; take an energy break every three hours.
- Drink regularly: sparkling water, tea, a splash of juice in seltzer, and tomato or vegetable juice.
- Eat smaller amounts more often.
- Don't rely on caffeine for energy; it is a stimulant. A latte with skim milk and a granola bar is more nutritious and energizing.
- Include some protein at every meal and most snacks. Good choices include milk, yogurt, cheese, eggs, beans, poultry, fish or meat.

Bonci's recommendations also include what she calls "Energy Detractors." By avoiding these pitfalls, you can help maintain a higher energy level from your diet.

- Skipping meals;
- Not getting enough sleep;
- Eating large, infrequent meals;
- Overdoing it on alcohol;
- Eating high-sugar/high-fat snacks; and
- Skimping on fluids.

EXERCISING YOUR GUMS

New research shows that engaging in regular exercise and maintaining a healthy diet can benefit your gums as much as your heart. According to a recent study, people who exercise, have healthy eating habits, and maintain a normal weight are 40 percent less likely to develop periodontitis (a gum inflammation that can result in infection and tooth loss). This conclusion, which was based on analysis of over 12,000 individuals, led researchers to believe that exercise reduces inflammation throughout the body. At the same time, healthy eating habits build the body's defenses against disease and reduce the production of plaque. Until now, brushing and flossing were the only healthful behaviors that had been identified as helping to prevent periodontitis.

Gum disease is most likely to affect adults over 30, although anyone is at risk. This column is brought to you in the interest of better dental health. You can expect us to give you gentle, comforting care using the most up-to-date techniques and equipment. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where our trained professional staff works as a team to make your visits pleasant. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We will always discuss your treatment options with you. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. More than thirty percent of the population suffers from periodontitis, which can lead to heart disease, diabetes, and pre-term labor.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Veteran's Day is remembered by the middle aged and older folks as Armistice Day... It commemorates the signing of the armistice in World War I. "The war to end all wars had ended." Sadly, it didn't work out that way.

In the years since, cities, states, nations and people have changed, but the problems remain much the same today as in the yesterdays of the past. With God's help, maybe some day these problems can be solved so that men can live in peace.

On Veteran's Day, let us honor all the thousands of American youth who died in conflict without having the chance to grow old. It should remind all of us that our American way of life was made possible by their total sacrifice. No one knows this better than the men and women who served with them – and survived... On Veterans' Day, we honor them all – the living and the dead.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Your honesty continues to impress everyone who needs reassurance about a project. But be careful you don't lose patience with those who are still not ready to act.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Pushing others too hard to do things your way could cause resentment and raise more doubts. Instead, take more time to explain why your methods will work.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Be more considerate of those close to you before making a decision that could have a serious effect on their lives. Explain your intentions and ask for their advice.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You might have to defend a workplace decision you plan to make. Colleagues might back you up on this, but it's the facts that will ultimately win the day for you. Good luck.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) The Big Cat's co-workers might not be doing enough to help get that project finished. Your roars might stir things up, but gentle purrr-suasion will prove to be more effective.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Someone you care for needs help with a problem. Give it lovingly and without judging the situation. Whatever you feel you should know will be revealed later.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) While you're to be admired for how you handled recent workplace problems, be careful not to react the same way to a new situation until all the facts are in.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Rely on your keen instincts as well as the facts at hand when dealing with a troubling situation. Be patient. Take things one step at a time as you work through it.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Your curiosity leads you to ask questions. However, the answers might not be what you hoped to hear. Don't reject them without checking them out.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Be careful not to tackle a problem without sufficient facts. Even sure-footed Goats need to know where they'll land before leaping off a mountain path.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Appearances can be deceiving. You need to do more investigating before investing your time, let alone your money, in something that might have some hidden flaws.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Your recent stand on an issue could make you the focus of more attention than you would like. But you'll regain your privacy, as well as more time with loved ones by week's end.

BORN THIS WEEK: You're a good friend and a trusted confidante. You would be a wonderful teacher and a respected member of the clergy.

former assistant city solicitor.

Mahoney piled up 6,751 votes to lead the school committee field by a margin of 1,209. The second spot went to Mulvey with 5,542 and third to Timmins with 5,480.

All three were running for the first time.

Timmins took the third seat by 173 votes over Celeste B. McGlone, 43, former executive assistant to Mayor Phelan. Timmins' vote was 5,480 to McGlone's 5,307.

Behind McGlone were Ronald P. Iacobucci, 50, with 4,939 and Joseph Keegan, 35, with 3,412. Iacobucci heads a group planning to build a mini-Fenway Park in Quincy and Keegan is an attorney and former police officer.

Only 25 percent of the city's 54,899 registered voters cast ballots.

Five ward councillors were re-elected unopposed. Their wards and votes:

(1) Leo J. Kelly: 1,872.

(2) Daniel G. Raymondi: 1,503.

(3) Kevin F. Coughlin: 1,771.

(4) James (Jay) H. Davis: 1,239.

(5) Douglas S. Gutro: 2,003.

Two of Tuesday's winners expressed thanks for their campaigns' support after the final numbers were announced at City Hall.

"It didn't matter if I was first, second or third but I'm pretty excited right now," an elated Mahoney said moments after the final tally.

"I really feel that I got my name out there by knocking on doors. I thank the voters who came out and voted and I will do my best for the children in our public schools."

Mulvey said, "I stressed that I really wanted to give back to the system that educated me. I pledge to repay that now.

"I think the key is to seek out dedicated supporters who will go out and represent (a candidate)" he added.

Concerned Over Flooding Conditions

Raymondi Delays Action On Concourse Land Takings

Ward 2 City Councillor Daniel Raymondi blocked action on the proposed Right of Way Acquisition Plan for Phase Two of the Quincy Center Concourse at Monday night's Council meeting.

Raymondi moved to have the order from Mayor William Phelan tabled, automatically delaying acceptance of it until at least the Nov. 21 meeting.

The order includes an authorization for the treasurer to borrow $10 million to pay for the damages, costs, awards, relocation payments and other sums involved in the landtaking.

Raymondi said he wanted to be assured that a $5 million state-funded plan to end flooding in the Quincy Center area be included in the property acquisition plan to complete the concourse.

Raymondi passed photos to his colleagues showing flooding in Quincy Center.

"People still get flooded," he said. "These pictures, that's real. The brook (Town River) runs right through downtown. I'm not happy with what I'm hearing.

"This is the last hope that I feel we have. This is it! It is on the state to do this."

Raymondi said he wanted to Council to know that although he is not against the Right of Way Acquisition, he doesn't "think it should be advertised (or) moved forward" at this point.

"If there is no sensitivity to this problem (the flooding) then I will object (to Acquisition Phase Two) tonight," he said.

Council President Francis McCauley said that they are down to the "nitty gritty" of Phase Two

Contractors Blamed For Delayed Repairs

Firefighters Irked Over Conditions At Fire Stations

By MIKAELA SLANEY

Work on repairs to Quincy fire stations is behind schedule and firefighters are irked at the resulting living and working conditions.

Thomas Bowes, president of Firefighters Local 792, told the City Council Monday night that mold and open asbestos poses a threat of respiratory illness and even cancer.

Mike Ryan, the city's director of building construction, blamed much of the problem on dilatory contractors, adding that "if they don't complete the work by the end of the week I will proceed with legal action."

"These problems are no laughing matter," Bowes said. "Firefighters are getting injured and sick from these working conditions.

"We are not happy and we're sick of being treated like second class workers in this city. All we are looking for are decent working conditions, toilets that work, heat that works, strais that don't fall apart and buildings that don't leak."

The meeting was in response to a resolution by Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi calling for hearings on capital needs of the Police and Fire Departments, particularly their personnel and training needs.

Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly expressed concern for the living conditions of the firemen.

"You know what really bothers me?" he asked. "A fire station is like a home. They live there. It's just not right."

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin agreed.

Nominations Open For Sun 'Citizen Of Year'

Nominations are now open for The Quincy Sun's 21st annual "Citizen of the Year" award.

Established in 1985, the award recognizes an individual for outstanding community service or a special achievement.

Last year, Francis X. McCauley was honored for a distinguished 32-year public service career built on a foundation of honesty, integrity and history.

McCauley – the only resident to serve the city in all four elected municipal offices: school committee, ward councillor, councillor at-large and mayor – was selected for the honor from among 44 nominees submitted by Quincy Sun readers. A panel of judges representing a cross-section of the community made the final decision.

Again this year, Sun readers may nominate the person they feel is the most deserving of the award.

A nomination ballot to help the selection process appears on Page 15 of this week's issue of The Quincy Sun.

After nominations close Saturday, Dec. 31, a judging panel will be selected to make the final choice

'Never Break Faith With Vets' Veterans Day Speaker Urges

By MIKAELA SLANEY

The chief legal officer of the Massachusetts Army National Guard has warned "we must never break faith with our veterans" who have been fighting terror in the Middle East for four years.

Col. Christopher Henes, the staff judge advocate, was the guest speaker at the annual Veterans Day ceremonies Friday at the World War II Doughboy Statue on the Adams Academy grounds.

"Active duty service members along with citizen soldiers of the National Guard and Reserve continue to leave their jobs and families to serve their country," he said.

"Some will not return and we will honor their memory with memorial services and monuments.

"Others will return with injuries physical and mental that will require long term care and which will change their lives forever.

"We must accept the challenge that this poses by ensuring that our veterans hospitals continue to function at the highest levels of care and skills.

GUEST SPEAKER
Col. Christopher Henes.

"I encourage those of you who are employers to hire our returning veterans. These men and women bring focus, dedication, a tireless work ethic and a commitment to mission.

"I ask you to support the families of those who serve. They struggle each day without their loved one hoping as we all do that they will return home safely.

"Let them know that you appreciate their sacrifices and are there for them."

Parade Chairman Thomas Stansbury estimated the crowd gathered around the Doughboy Statue to hear Col. Henes speech at about 300 with many more strung out in the cold along the parade route down Hancock Street.

"It was a very good turnout," he said. "I think the veterans wanted to let the troops that are fighting know they are behind them no matter what their feelings bout the war."

Stansbury said he saw more Boy and Girl Scouts than usual marching in the parade, too.

Col. Henes acknowledged the "tremendous support": the city of Quincy has given to members of the hometown 102nd Field Artillery (ANG), now serving in Iraq.

"We hope to see them return prior to the New Year," he said.

Mayor William Phelan also cited the service of the 102nd Field Artillery as represented by Master Sgt. Heikki Pakkala, who was

Krueger's EXXON
Quincy Shore Drive, Quincy, MA

Welcome to Krueger's Exxon your community gas station.

Why do we say community? As long time residents of Quincy, the Krueger and Lally family would like to give back to the city of Quincy for all they have been to us and our children. This includes the school system, recreation department, art association, YMCA, library, and many other community organizations that have been part of our family activities over the. We are going to do this by donating one cent on every gallon sold to a different Quincy non-profit organization. At present, we are in the process of setting up a schedule that would feature a different place for a given amount of time. I addition to the city of Quincy, Krueger's Exxon, would also like to donate to the American Red Cross for all its relief efforts across the nation.

OUR GRAND OPENING will be November 19th and 20th. Please come by, say hi, get gas, your windshield washed, and your oil checked. By the way, we will make it part of our daily routine to wash your windshield and check your oil. Our business is to serve you and the community.

Thank You,

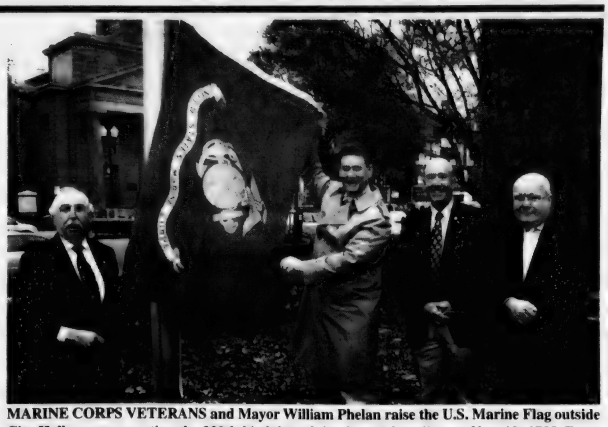
Noise From Idling Trucks Draws Neighbors' Ire

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

At Tuesday's License Board meeting, the owner of Titan Roofing at 115 Old Colony Ave. promised to educate his employees about the noise from idling trucks as early as 4:30 a.m. following continued complaints from neighbors.

After hearing Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro tell the board about the complaints of neighbors, ranging from trucks idling for 15-20 minutes to loud noises in the wee hours of the morning, owner Fred Pazemino said he would "try to be better."

He said he would try to have deliveries made in the afternoon and make special arrangements when Spring arrives when people have their windows open.



Gutro said making noise at 4:30 to 5 a.m. is "unacceptable" and has "heightened the level of discontent in the neighborhood."

He said opening at 7 a.m. is more ap[propriate and the complaints have been a chronic issue for the past six to nine months.

One abutter, Noreen Manning said the noise in the morning is disruptive with radio blaring and loud talking.

Health Commnisisoner Drew Scheele said he visited the site in the early morning hours and said although there was some activity, he did not see any large trucks, but some small pick up trucks.

Chairman Joseph Shea said he would visit the site with Scheele and have new rules put into writing for the neighbors to see.

Library Gives Overdue Fines To Katrina Victims

The Thomas Crane Public Library's plan to forego fines for overdue books during the week of Oct. 24-30 and instead contribute the money to hurricane relief netted just over $1,400 for victims of Hurricane Katrina..

The funds were sent to the Louisiana Library Foundation Disaster Relief Fund and will be used to assist public libraries in Jefferson Parish, where some libraries were totally destroyed and others badly damaged.

Altrusa International, Inc., of Quincy, whose primary focus is literacy, donated $500 to the fundraising effort. Altrusa also plans significant ongoing support for the Library Project to train adults in reading and writing.

During the week-long fundraiser, sponsored by the Massachusetts School Library Media Association, a total of 42 school and public libraries raised more than $30,000 for the relief effort of their choice.

Among the recipients were the American Library Association's Hurricane Relief Fund, the American Red Cross, Habitat for Humanity/ New Orleans, Texas library Association Disaster Fund, Rebuild Mississippi Fund and Reader to Reader.

X & O To Become Mexican Family Restaurant

A popular Mediterranean restaurant, the X & O, on 1384-1388 Hancock St. will now become Acapulco's Mexican Family Restaurant.

The License Board at Tuesday's meeting granted the transfer of the common victualer all alcoholic and entertainment license to Fresh Tomato Enterprises, Inc. doing business as Acapulco's with Edgar Moreno, manager.

While no structural changes will be made, Atty. Nicholas Felici said decor in the restaurant will go from a Mediterranean to a Mexican decor and plans to open for business are from four to six weeks.

Felici said this will be the 12th Acapulco Restaurant with some located in Seattle, Wash. to Eastern Massachusetts and Sudbury.

Chairman Joseph Shea commended the former owners of X & O for the kind of service they provided during their stay in Quincy.

Anne Stole The Show

You could say Anne Mahoney stole the show this election year.

Her political debut was a dazzler.

The attractive 40-year-old mother of three young children piled up an amazing vote in last week's city election as she surged to the top of the school committee field to breeze to one of the three open seats.

MAHONEY

Mahoney had finished first in a 12-candidate field in the September preliminary election. And did even a more impressive encore in last week's final election as she led the six finalists field.

Her vote last week was 6,751 – 1,209 more than second-place winner Kevin Mulvey and 1,271 more than James Timmins who took the third seat.

MULVEY

TIMMINS

There was only a 62-vote difference between Mulvey and Timmins. And only 173 votes separated Timmins from runner-up Celeste McGlone.

So, Mahoney's margin was somewhat of a blockbuster.

"I just did what I did," she replies modestly when someone asks her how she did it.

What she did was work tirelessly through both the preliminary and final election campaigns knocking on more than 3,500 doors throughout the city – and losing 10 pounds doing it.

She listened to what people had to say, what bothered them.

The one thing most of them had on their minds was the proposed new Quincy High School, a thorny issue that has been dragging for more than six years.

"They are tired of reading and hearing about it," she says. "They want it resolved."

She acknowledges "a lot of people have done a lot of work" trying to make the school a reality.

Her personal preference would be to renovate the present school but feels the actual final solution would appear to ride on what qualifies for the 90 percent state reimbursement.

Finishing first the way she did was quite an accomplishment, friends and supporters tell her.

"That's a big deal?" she asks them. "I never thought of it that way. I just wanted to finish in the top three."

When someone asks if she differed from the other candidates, she muses, "I'm the only candidate that was born in Quincy Square."

And she is.

Her father and mother, Joseph and Mary Mulligan, set off for the hospital the night she was ready to arrive. But didn't make it there.

Her father delivered her in the car.

"It was the family's brand new Ford," Mahoney says. "And I christened it."

The car, incidentally, was parked right near City Hall when she arrived. A political omen?

She is the youngest of six children. And her siblings got to choose her name. They voted for Anne. Another political omen?

Well, she became a political candidate and her father became her campaign manager.

Mahoney and her husband, Kevin, live on Ferriter St. and co-own a print and web design firm. They are the parents of three children: Maggie, 10; Liam, 8; and Rory, 3.

Maggie and Liam are in the fifth and third grades at the Beechwood Knoll School. Rory is in pre-school enroute to Beechwood. Mahoney is very active in the Beechwood PTO.

As a school committee member she plans to do what she did while knocking on doors.

Listen to the people.

FORMER CITY COUNCILLOR Richard Koch, Jr., who gave up a promising political career for one in law enforcement, is the new chief of the Brewster Police Department.

KOCH

Koch served three terms as councillor at-large from 1982 to 1987 when he and his wife, Nancy, moved to the Cape. He topped the at-large field in the 1983 election.

Politics were still in his blood for awhile on the Cape where he was elected to two school committee terms.

But a career in law enforcement was his real goal, having a degree in criminal justice. He joined the Brewster police department 15 years ago and last week was named chief.

Koch is the son of the late Richard Koch, Sr., Park Department executive director and Simmy Koch who lives in North Quincy.

He is the brother of Tom Koch, who followed in his father's footsteps as executive director of the Park Department, and Linda Bowes, administrative secretary in the Public Works Department.

GETTING BACK TO last week's election, there were 557 write-in votes for mayor to incumbent William Phelan's 9,545. There were also 3,633 blanks.

Topping the write-ins was former Mayor Jim Sheets with 40. Charles Dennehy, who ran on stickers, was runner-up with 39.

Dan Raymondi got 33, Joe Finn 13, Mike McFarland 7, Frank McCauley 6, John Gillis 5 and Joe Newton 3.

Others who got one or more included Walter Hannon, Ed Keohane, Michelle Lydon, Jimmy Liang, Robert Haley, John Keenan, Drew Scheele and Ron Affsa.

And, of course, there were at least a couple of the inevitable write-ins: Mickey Mouse and John Wayne.

PRECINCT 5 IN Ward 6 took the top voting honors once again in last week's election. While the city-wide turnout was 25 percent, some 49 percent – 1,067 of the 2,175 registered voters – cast ballots at the Squantum School.

Runner-up was Precinct 1, Ward 1 (Merrymount School) with 35 percent. Lowest turnout was Precinct 4, Ward 4 (Lincoln-Hancock School), just under 15 percent.

Ward honors went to Ward 6 (31 percent) followed by Ward 1 (28 percent), Ward 5 (27 percent), Ward 3 (25 percent), Ward 4 (19 percent) and Ward 2 (just under 19 percent.)

The building acrss the park on Sagamore Street is still standing and is pretty much unchanged. Hidden from view to the left of it is the old Atlantic post office building, now the Boilermaker Union's office. Also hidden just behind the treets on the immediate left was the old Atlantic railroad depot. Both the playground and the street alongside it were named for City Councillor Welcome G. Working Together For A 'Greener' Quincy

Over the past few years, representatives of the Squantum and Wollaston Garden Clubs have participated in the Mayor's Planting Pride campaign. Each club and its members have taken it upon themselves to contribute in various centrally located areas to improve and clean our city's streets and walkways.

Last spring our Board approved a proposal to "beautify" our fire stations throughout the city. I approached Ward Councilor Leo Kelly, an avid supporter of our club and we discussed the possibility of working with the Fire Department. Councilor Kelly suggested we work on the Houghs Neck station and we agreed to take it on with cooperation of the chief and the men of the station. We can not thank Councilor Kelly enough for his support and work the chief.

I was pleased when our Civic Beautification chair Jo Costello enlisted the help of one our most creative members, Ruth Griffin. Ruth created a design that incorporated several new plant materials and bringing out features such as the stone monument in the front of the station. She even donated some of her own plants.

Why would the Wollaston Garden Club work on a fire station in Houghs Neck? For any number of reasons including the fact that we are not limited to membership in the Wollaston area, but in fact have members throughout the city and some as far as Maine. We discussed various civic efforts and felt that our fire stations needed a little "green help" and it is also a small way to thank our fire fighters for the dangerous and necessary service they provide.

Also, at the time, Houghs Neck did not have its own garden club. However, with time comes welcome changes and when we finally obtained our plant materials and arranged a time to "dig in" we learned of the existence of our city's newest club, the Houghs Neck Garden Club organized and presided over by Louis Murphy. Members of both clubs braved wet conditions and have created a cleaner front area that we know under the tutelage of the Houghs Neck club will flourish in the future.

This is something that is rare these days, a win-win situation. We were able to support a fledgling club and provide a more pleasing place for our heroes. Our hope is that this is just the beginning of new partnerships to expand upon a greener Quincy. Garden clubs perform a number of services throughout the community including civic beautification/development and education. Please support all of our clubs whenever possible.

Council On Aging Commends Project SAFE

The Quincy Council on Aging extends its deep appreciation to the sponsors of Project SAFE, held recently, for providing state-of-the-art lithium battery operated smoke detectors to the elderly in their homes.

One hundred and sixty teens and adults fanned out across Quincy to install and update more than 1000 smoke detectors in some 200 homes of the elderly.

The base of operation was Beechwood on the Bay where service teams picked up the detectors which were then distributed and installed, at no charge, in the homes of the elderly.

Lithium battery operated smoke detectors are expected to last at least 10 years.

Sharron Beals, executive director of Beechwood, one of the sponsoring organizations for this initiative, points out the success of Project SAFE, now in its 10th year, is made possible through the cooperative efforts of the Quincy Rotary Club, Eastern Bank, Quincy Fire Department, North and Quincy High School students, and the National Fire Protection Association located in Quincy, the company that donated the new lithium battery operated smoke detectors.

This Quincy community initiative has become a bellwether model for other communities in Massachusetts and nationally.

The thrust of this program proves once again, smoke detectors can and do save lives.

Wants U.S. To Use Napalm

The United States is embroiled in a war in Iraq and every day they are suffering casualties. Not all are reported in my opinion but are spread out over a period of time so as not to upset the public. Very little is reported about the other war in Afghanistan with the Talibans in the mountains.

In 1980 the U.N. requested all the members to sign a pledge not to use napalm (jellied gasoline) against an enemy. The only country not to sign was the United States. Why are we not using this weapon of total destruction against an enemy in the mountains? Mountains have holes in them and even one drop of this napalm would burn an enemy to death.

Are we afraid of foreign public opinion if we did? We had great success in past wars and it should be used again unless we have no intestinal fortitude. I'm talking about this administration.

First Church Belfry To Be Grounded

Nov. 17 - 23
42 Years Ago

The cupola and belfry of the United First Parish Church were scheduled to be removed next week as part of the ongoing repairs to the church's tower and belfry.

The W.A. MacLeod Company of Boston made the decision to lower the belfry to the ground as it became apparent that the deterioration of the tower and its pillars had advanced beyond what was originally estimated.

A 140-foot crane would be needed to accomplish the "monumental" removal.

UNITED FUND SURPASSES GOAL

George O'Brien, chairman of the Quincy United Fund, announced that the 1964 drive had surpassed the $278,741 goal by $108.95.

The announcement was made at the Dutch treat luncheon held at Sherry's Restaurant, with former residential chairman Robert Tweedy as master of ceremonies.

Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa stopped by on the way into the State House for a roll call to congratulate O'Brien and John Sullivan, director of the Quincy United Fund.

Mrs. Charles O'Connell of S. Central Ave. was presented the Edward MacEwan cup which was awarded annually to an outstanding worker in the fund and in the community.

POINT-WEBSTER MIDDLE School students (from left) Shayne McPherson, C.J. Hamm and Devon Simmons write down the description of a "bank robber" during a recent bank security discussion given by employees of the Quincy Credit Union. The activity is an example of a business partnership with the Point-Webster School.

KEITH FAILLA, a student at the Point-Webster School, holds a $10 dollar bill aloft after learning how to detect counterfeit money. The lesson was part of a bank security presentation by the Quincy Credit Union.

Educational Activities Foster Learning

Point Webster School's Business Partnerships Enriching Students' Lives

The school year at Point Webster, Quincy's newest renovated middle school, is off to a great start thanks to the help and support of Point Webster's business partners which include the Quincy Credit Union, Roche Brothers Supermarket, Dependable Cleaners and the National Association of Government Employees.

For the past several years, Principal James McGuire and staff members have worked with their business partners to enrich and enlighten the lives of Point Webster students.

Roche Brothers Manager Lawrence Baxter and Quincy Credit Union Human Resource Director Judith Brazil, working with Point's teachers, have mapped out several educational activities where youth and adults will work together to foster learning.

Brazil and another Quincy Credit Union employee, Maura Finn, recently visited the sixth grade at Point to kick off their monthly real life math activities. The sixth grade learned about bank security and the precautions banks must take to protect the identities of their customers.

Future lessons will include: learning how to properly apply for a bank account, write out a check, complete a withdrawal or deposit ticket, and how to calculate interest and monthly payments on a new car.

Sixth graders will also participate in a lesson on fractions using pizzas and estimating how much juice they will need to go with the pizza.

A new project, to be introduced by Brazil, is called "Penny Power."

Point's Chorus will also perform in the main lobby of the Quincy Credit Union during the Christmas holidays.

The Quincy Credit Union, which is also a Gold Partner in the Quincy School Community Partnership, recently donated $500 to Point Webster's activity fund which will benefit Point's students.

JUDITH BRAZIL, Quincy Municipal Credit Union Human Resource Director, explains "phony money die packs" to Point Webster School students Kayla Melanson (left) and Tiara Abbot (right).

Roche Brothers Supermarket, located on Falls Blvd., has also set up several activities for the upcoming school year.

Grade 5 recently toured the supermarket, participating in lessons aligned to the Massachusetts Math, Social Studies, and Language Arts Standards while at the same time learning how a large supermarket runs smoothly.

A Tasting Party will be held in January to kick off Point's Healthy Choice Grant from Blue Cross and Blue Shield.

The PIP Program has scheduled a math fair for grades 6 and 7 on March 28 and March 29. Twenty first Century Grant Coordinators Patricia O'Brien and Barbara Driscoll will also be working with Baxter to develop an after school activity based on healthy eating and cooking.

With the donations and volunteer support from local business partners, in addition to the immeasurable efforts of the Point Webster staff, Point Webster is expanding learning from the classroom into the community.

MAURA FINN of the Quincy Credit Union with Dylan Brodeur, a student at the Point Webster School. Finn, along with Quincy Credit Union Human Resource Director Judith Brazil, recently visited the sixth grade to kick off their monthly real life math activities.

Project S.A.F.E. Serves 200 Seniors With New Detectors

Twenty three teams of firefighters and volunteers roamed the city the other day, replacing old smoke detectors in the homes of senior citizens and replacing them with new, 10-year lithium detectors.

The nine-year-old program is going to well, in fact, that the Quincy-based National Fire Protection Association (NFPA) is promoting it as part of its national and international initiatives.

"The day was an incredible and expanded 'Senior Serve Saturday,'" said Sharron Beals, executive director of the Beechwood Community Life Center and coordinator of Project S.A.F.E., as the detector program is known.

Firefighters from all the city's stations were assisted by more than 100 volunteers from Quincy Rotary, Beechwood, Fallon Ambulance, and employees from the NFPA and the Dan J. Flynn Co.

Assistance was also given Rotary Interact student volunteers from Quincy and North Quincy High Schools. The River Bay Club hosted breakfast for all participants.

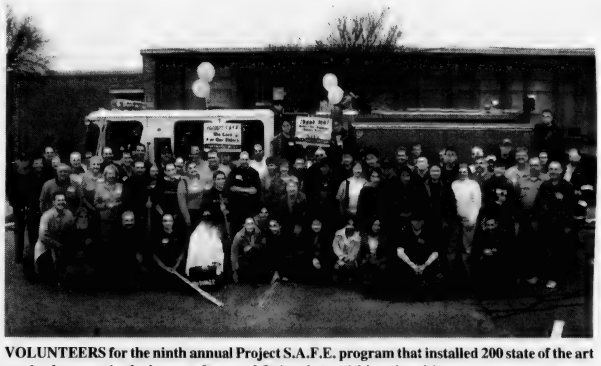
The NFPA, which has partnered in the program for nine years, also donated $20,000 worth of lithium detectors.

Project S.A.F.E. was launched by the Beechwood Community Life Center in 1997 to provide a unique citywide outreach to "at risk" seniors (those over 70 and/or with special needs.

Many of those do not have family members living nearby and should not be climbing step stools to replace detectors themselves.

"The need for improved fire prevention practices was clear nine years ago," said Beals, "Many senior home are under protected. Some do not have any working detectors. At other addresses, detectors were in place but batteries needed replacement."

According to Sharon Gamache, executive director of the NFPA's Center for High Risk Outreach, the Quincy program is being promoted nationally and internationally as the model for NFPA's "Remembering When" program.



"Each year we have been successful in fundraising to assist with this high-cost initiative," said Beals. "The project, which is not funded from taxes, has a zero-based budget each year.

"Every year we start from scratch to fundraise and solicit donations for detectors, batteries and other supplies.

"This year the 10-year lithium detectors were provided by the NFPA. Once again, Curry Hardware provided checksticks and Presidential Press provided dated stickers to affix to each detector."

Public Meeting Tonight On Supreme Pantry Change

Ward 5 City Councillor Doug Gutro has scheduled a neighborhood meeting Thursday, Nov. 17, at 7 p.m. at the Wollaston Child Care Center, 47 Weston Ave., to discuss a variance for the Supreme Pantry building.

The owner of the building at 617 Hancock St. proposes to add a chiropractic office and a yoga studio on the second floor to the structure which now houses a pantry post office processing center.

The variance is scheduled to come before the Zoning Board of Appeals Tuesday, Nov. 29, at 7:15 p.m. in the City Council chamber at City Hall.

Gutro pointed out the residents will be able to ask questions of the owner and his attorney at the Nov. 17 meeting while they will be limited simply to registering approval or disapproval at the ZBA hearing.

Gutro said the concerns of the neighbors is not the quality of the proposed businesses but what is perceived as the lack of parking space.

Firefighters Irked Over Station Conditions

"Going into these places, it made me cringe," he said.

Ryan estimated that $1 million worth of work is needed to repair damage to the stations.

Thus far, $86,484 has been paid to improve exterior conditions at headquarters as well as to replace the roof of the Quincy Point fire station and the North Quincy fire station.

Most of the roof of the Quincy Point firehouse was replaced approximately a month ago but an interior wall continues to leak. They have not yet completed the skylight area of the roof.

Bowes told the Council: "We get frustrated when we see the money for improvements voted on and we don't see the work completed."

Ryan said he blames the incomplete work in other stations on contracted repair companies who, after being hired, do not follow through with repair services.

"We are constantly chasing them to go back and finish their work. It is an ongoing issue," said Ryan.

The North Quincy station roof is still in need of repairs. Contractors delivered the necessary materials for the roof almost two months ago, but they failed to deliver the "manpower" to complete the task, Ryan said.

The weather and wind are "ruining the materials that were paid for with the taxpayers' money," said Bowes.

Ryan said he has made numerous calls, weekly, to the contractors. He has threatened to hold back payments and bonds.

"We do everything we can," he said. "Some contractors are better than others. (Some) haven't been back on the promised dates, so the chase is still on."

A bond package funded masonry work to repair leaks in the Wollaston station, as well as the replacement gutters and the stairwell. However, none have been completed thus far.

According to Bowes, three weeks ago a veteran lieutenant was responding to a call and on the way down the stairs "one of the stairs actually broke in half, sending this lieutenant tumbling down the stairs into a wall and injuring him."

Ryan denied having prior knowledge of the event.

"I don't know how the firefighter fell," he said, "but I did not see any cracked boards. To my knowledge the stairwell did not collapse.

"I looked at it with the chief and I did not see a collapsed stairwell. We had a carpenter look at it."

Ryan said repairs to this stairwell is on the list of purchased materials, though the repairs will be done to the surrounding walls rather than the actual stairs themselves.

Plumbing is in midrepair the West Quincy station. An accumulation of water has built up between the floor and ceiling and, said Ryan, they "have no idea where the water is coming from."

To make repairs, the urinals had to be removed. Ryan promised that they will be back by the end of the week or early next week.

Bowes also expressed the concerns of the firefighters over mold and open asbestos which he claimed are at "multiple stations."

Ryan denied any knowledge of asbestos but when he was shown a photograph of what was described as open asbestos in one of the stations, he responded:

"If someone gave me a picture of this, if they called me, we would address it. This is something that caught me off guard, that I am not familiar with."

Ryan said he had received a call about the mold but "we looked at it. But there was nothing that was brought to my attention that stuck out."

Bowes said firefighter fear that the problems with mold and asbestos, if left untreated, could result in respiratory illness and even certain cancers.

Ryan said he hopes that a collaboration with the firefighters themselves will resolve the issues.

"Firefighters have an idea of what they would like," he said. "If it works, with the chief's blessing, we'll change plans and we'll do that."

Raymondi Delays Action On Concourse Land Takings

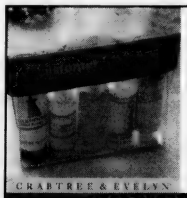
involving the landtaking of nine parcels of property and they are "starting the completion of this phase."

Total value of the land is estimated at $7,986,200, and the tax for Fiscal 2005 will be $178,988.25, McCauley said.

The prospective land and buildings to be taken — fully or partially, include, he said:

- 148 Parkingway, Tanline.
- 150 Parkingway, Superfitness.
- 1586 Hancock St., former Modern Formal Shop.
- 1601 Hancock St., a vacant lot.
- 1593 & 1597 Hancock St., movies.
- 1570 through 1602 Hancock St., Granite City Tattoo.
- 1596 through 1602 Hancock St., City Financial. 1600 Hancock, The Holy Ground.
- 11 Revere Rd., Eugene Thomas Salon & Endless Sun Salon.



"Councillor Raymondi delayed action because it was the first time if was submitted," said McCauley. "Hopefully, we'll get a resolution."

Council Approves $250,000 For Tree Removal

The City Council unanimously appropriated $250,000 to the Park Department to fund tree removal, stump grinding, and planting of new trees.

Tom Koch, the city's Park and Forestry director, expressed concern over removing and replacing a "substantial amount" of 275 Quincy trees. However, "most of the trees coming down are dead anyways."

With the trees that are being removed, according to chapter 87, of Mass. general law, if one person objects to the removal of a tree, it will not be removed.

Ward 5 Councillor Douglas Gutro said he feels like they're "almost at a crisis point" with the trees.

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin said that he has been "almost apologetic" lately with the public, pertaining to the tree removal.

FALL CAR CARE

(NAPS)—When vehicle owners get their cars and trucks ready for cold weather, most pay close attention to batteries, tires, belts and hoses. Many, however, tend to neglect an important feature of safe driving: clear visibility.

According to the Car Care Council, 17 percent of the vehicles passing through check lanes during National Car Care Month required new front windshield wiper blades. An additional 12 percent needed service on their rear wipers and/or washers.

Wiper blades that were installed new in the spring may be ready for replacement by fall. During the course of the summer, wipers tend to build up a thin layer of grime that keeps the rubber blade from contacting the glass, which could result in smeared windshields and poor visibility. A dirty or smeared windshield can also cause eye fatigue.

"Most driving decisions are based on visibility, so a clear view is critical," said Chris Vermette, car care expert. "A smeared windshield is dangerous. Anything that impedes a driver's vision jeopardizes the safety of the driver, the passengers and other motorists and pedestrians."

Vermette recommends vehicle owners who live in cold climates consider switching to a winter wiper blade, but should check their vehicle's owner's manual for specific recommendations.

"The combination of salt, ice and sleet can reduce a driver's ability to see other vehicles or objects on the road," Vermette said. "The ACDelco Winter Blade uses a cover to prevent ice from forming on the sub structure."

In addition to replacing worn wiper blades, a fall maintenance checkup may include:

- Changing oil and replacing oil filter.
- Inspecting or replacing the air and cabin filters.
- Checking and topping off all fluids.
- Inspecting the heating system.
- Checking belts and hoses for splits, cracks and bulges, replacing if necessary.
- Flushing and refilling the radiator.
- Inspecting brake system.
- Aligning and balancing wheels.
- Rotating the tires, checking the tire pressure and inspecting the treads for wear.
- Inspecting the exhaust system.
- Inspecting the battery and cables.
- Examining lights to make sure they work and that headlights are aimed properly.

Ballots can also be dropped off at The Sun office at the above address by Dec. 31.

Those submitting nominations should identify themselves. They can also attach to the ballot a letter detailing the reason for their nomination.

Nominees can be someone in elective office, a member of an appointed board, a clergy member, a teacher or school administrator, a police or firefighter, someone in the business community, a sports figure or an "unsung" neighbor or friend who has given freely of his or her time to a worthy project or cause.

Those nominated in the past are eligible to be nominated again this year. Since this is not a popularity contest, each nominee has an equal chance of being selected regardless of the number of nominations received. Anyone nominated just once has the same chance of being the award recipient.

Again, the deadline for nominations is Saturday, Dec. 31.

The name of the winner will be announced in The Quincy Sun in January.

Congress Appropriates $3.3M To Dredge Fore River Channel

Congress has given final approval to an appropriation of $3.3 million for the dredging of the Fore River Channel, a project championed by Cong. Bill Delahunt.

Sixty per cent of nearly all the petroleum products used in Massachusetts are delivered by marine transportation through the Fore River Channel.

After two decades of neglect, shoaling has reduced the depth of the channel so seriously that commercial vessels experience significant delays.

Some ships can negotiate the channel under the Route 3A bridge only at high tide, which can cause tieups during traffic rush hours.

The funding should be available in early 2006.

Easy Tips For Saving Energy This Winter

Are you a shell-shocked homeowner in receipt of your first heating-utility bill this winter season?

You're not doomed to run over budget all season.

Following these tips from the National Association of the Remodeling Industry (NARI) can help you reduce future bills. NARI President Paul Winans, CR says that energy loss through windows can cause heating bills to unnecessarily high.

"Air leaks in and around the window frame," he said, "cooling the home. At the same time, heat is leaking out." To minimize these leaks, and maximize energy efficiency, Winans and other NARI professionals compiled these tips:

• Decrease drafts in the home. A homeowner can easily test his or her home for air leaks by holding a lit candle next to closed exterior doors and windows, and places where plumbing or electrical wiring penetrates through exterior walls, floors or ceilings.

If the flame flickers or goes out, an air leak is present that could need caulking, sealing, or weather stripping. Gaps around plumbing that connect to the house from the outside can easily be sealed with expanding foam, which comes in convenient aerosol cans.

• Install storm windows. Windows can add character and light to the home but they also can leak a lot of heat. Storm windows can be installed over single-pane windows, or if a homeowner is considering a window replacement, specially coated double-pane windows designed to reflect heat back into the room could be considered.

If a window replacement job is not in the budget, there are other options, such as closing curtains and shades at night to reduce chilly drafts, and opening them during the day to take advantage of the sun's heating power.

For an economical measure, homeowners can also tape clear plastic sheeting to the inside of the window frame to seal off drafts.

• Clean or replace the air filter. Doing this once a month will maximize the efficiency of the heating system. In addition, cleaning out ducts, warm-air registers, baseboard heaters, and radiators will also maximize the system's efficiency.

Homeowners can install a programmable thermostat to change the set point when the house is unoccupied or during the night.

• Seal and insulate ducts. Ducts running through attics, crawl spaces, and garages are often not properly sealed and insulated, which wastes heated air before it even reaches the register.

Duct joints in those areas should be sealed, and for added heat retention, the ducts can be insulated. All ducts in the home should be checked for separation, holes and air leaks.

If a homeowner is considering investing in a new duct system, systems that come with insulation are available and should be considered.

• Seal up the fireplace. Nothing is cozier than curling up next to a roaring fire on a blustery winter day, but homeowners might not realize that a fireplace can send energy dollars up the chimney along with heated air from the home.

Keeping fireplace dampers closed when the fireplace is not in use will prevent the loss of warm air up the chimney all year long. Installing snugly fitting glass doors and closing them can reduce heat loss while the fire burns itself out overnight. The doors also protect the home from flying embers, reducing fire risk.

• Consider solar heating. Solar design techniques can be considered during a remodeling job to maximize solar effects on energy efficiency. Passive solar heating techniques, (the nonuse of a special solar heating system) include placing larger, insulated windows on south-facing walls and placing thermal mass, such as a concrete slab floor or a heat-absorbing wall, close to the windows.

Passive solar heating requires careful design orientation, so if a homeowner is considering it, he or she should consult an architect or design/build firm familiar with the technique.

To help homeowners through the process, NARI's website at www.RemodelToday.com offers many tips under the "Homeowners" section and also offers a search engine to help locate a contractor or chapter in their area. NARI also offers a free brochure, "How to Select a Remodeling Professional," to consumers who call their toll-free hotline at 800-611-NARI.

NARI is a national professional association whose members voluntarily subscribe to a strict code of ethics. Consumers may wish to search www.RemodelToday.com to find a qualified remodeler who is a member of NARI.

Consumers can also call the NARI National hotline at 800-611-NARI and request NARI's brochure, "How to Select a Remodeling Professional," or visit www.RemodelToday.com and click on the homeowner's guide for more information.

Quincy Property Continues to Soar

Quincy- A recent study by a local real estate professional finds that, the median sales price of residential property in Quincy has increased 21 percent since 2002. Single family homes seem to have had the largest increase, at 29 percent, while multi-families and condos have also proved to be a wise investment, on average appreciating 22 and 20 percent respectively. Although many are skeptical that home prices will continue to rise, 'recent research conducted by the National Association of REALTORS® suggests that predictions of a severe correction in home prices locally are largely unfounded. The expectation is that home prices will continue to climb, albeit more modestly, than in recent years.'

7 Tips Toward A Better Relationship With Your Remodeling Contractor

During a typical remodel, a homeowner's temper can flare, withthe addition of the dust, noise and of having a crew working in the home for most of the day.

The National Association of the Remodeling Industry (NARI) offers homeowners some pointers on how maintain a good relationship with their remodeling contractors during a home remodel. A first-rate remodeling contractor will often anticipate many of these points and prepare a homeowner for what's ahead.

NARI President Paul Winans, CR, says "The key to a good homeowner-contractor relationship is open communication," he continues, "start a dialogue over issues you have, no matter how small you think they are. Chances are the problem can be overcome." NARI says, follow these tips and make life during a home remodel a little easier:

• Before work begins, sit down with your contractor and discuss details that will affect your daily routine. For example, ask that the workers do not block the driveway without checking whether the homeowner's car is out of the garage. Also, find out what their schedule will be so you know what to expect, and if the schedule falls behind, be sure to ask why to keep that line of communication open.

• From day one,be honest with your contractor about your expectations. Open communication establishes trust and is the basis of a good working relationship. Discuss problems or irritations as they occur so you and your contractor can devise alternative solutions.

• Be sure to let your contractor know if you are planning a vacation or business trip so they can make their own schedule. If you decide to let them work while you are away, give them a phone numbersothey can reach you in case there is a question.

• Allow plenty of time for your project, keeping in mind that delays due to weather, material shortage or other problems cannot be predicted ahead of time.

• Remove your personal property from the construction areas, and declare all work zones off limits to children and pets.

• Always put changes in writing, especially if the plans are modified while the work is being done. Have both parties agree on the changes and sign a written copy of them before the work begins. And remember, changes will often cause delays, so if you decide a change is in order, be patient with the extended timeline.

• Keep all paperwork related to the job in one place so that if there are any questions on the plans, you have an easy reference for clarification.

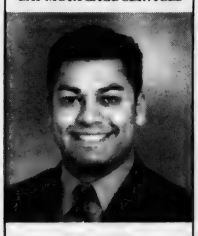
Emergency Roof Repairs in Wintertime

Q. October's stormy weather seems to have done it for my roof: During the last big storm, the roof upstairs started leaking. I climbed into the attic crawlspace but could not locate the source of the leak, although there appears to be some moisture on the bricks of the chimney. Could it be that my chimney is leaking? — Bob S., Lowell, Mass.

A. My first guess would be that the chimney flashing — shaped metal sheets interwoven with the roof shingling — is damaged and that water is leaking in at the damaged point. Flashing covers the gaps at roof joints and outlets (like chimneys and vent stacks) and is the first line of defense against water leakage. The metal — aluminum or copper — is very durable, but damage from debris strikes, or from small critters (like raccoons) tugging away surrounding shingles, can take its toll.

Damage to the chimney itself is possible, if the outside stack hasn't been checked in a few years, or if the stack took a direct hit from a large piece of debris during recent storms. A damaged chimney — especially an active one (venting fireplace or heater gases) — is an emergency that should be addressed by professionals, and quickly.



Hopefully, the former problem is the issue. But you just won't know until you can get onto the roof and take a look, and if it's really windy or snowy, going up top is dangerous. I recommend bringing a partner along to steady the ladder as you climb, and hold the safety rope taut as you make your way to the suspect area. If you can't get a helper or don't have safety equipment, call a professional. It's always better to pay for an inspection than for a hospital visit.

Damaged chimney flashing really should be replaced rather than patched up and nailed back into place. But in winter, you may not have many options. You can make a temporary repair using roofing caulk or weather-resistant sealant, but the next big storm might blow that out again. If the weather report predicts a few sunny, fairly warm days, take advantage of them to replace the flashing (and surrounding shingles if damaged) with matching metal, using pliers and aviation snips to bend and size the metal properly. Copy the other flashing's interwoven pattern, mortar in place, and layer the new shingles over the replacement.

A Job Well Done

By LT. DAN MINTON

On Monday, Oct. 31, at approximately 5:05 p.m., Officers Jamie Green, John McGowan, Daniel Guarente and an ambulance were dispatched to a gas station in Quincy Point on a report of "an assault with possible injuries." Upon arrival, Officer Greene found the attendant with an agitated man who was bleeding from his nose and cheeks from scratch marks.

LT. DAN MINTON

The attendant told Officer Greene that he called the police when the man came into the station. Officer Greene noted that the man was intoxicated, extremely hostile and aggressive towards the officers. The man stated that he was "jumped" by his girlfriend and her brother, who struck him in the face with a billy club.

The man's (suspect) story then changed to being struck with nunchucks (2 pieces of wood linked by a rope or chain, often used in martial arts). The suspect again changed his story – that he had an argument with his girlfriend.

Officer Greene, having reason to be believe that a domestic violence incident occurred, requested the suspect to accompany them to the girlfriend's home. The suspect became agitated and defensive, stating that he knew he would be arrested because his girlfriend had a "small cut" on her lip.

After a pat/frisk of the suspect, he was transported to a Washington St. address, where they were met by the girlfriend and her brother. Officer Greene noted that the girlfriend was upset, breathing heavily, was red-faced, shaking and had a small amount of blood on her face and shirt. The girlfriend said she was reluctant to talk because her boyfriend (suspect) had been arrested in the past on domestic violence charges and that she would be compelled to testify against him. She added that he had "two years hanging over his head if he violates his probation – and I still love him."

Officer Greene interviewed the victim's brother, who, unlike his sister, was very willing to speak. He said that there was an argument between the couple. Numerous threats were made and a violent struggle occurred, when the suspect grabbed the victim's hair and punched her in the face. The brother stated that he separated them and then the suspect left, punching the walls and kicking the car as he exited.

Officer Greene asked if the injuries on the victim's face were from the suspect and the brother stated they were. The suspect, a 21-year-old Dorchester resident, was arrested for "Domestic Assault and Battery." The victim was provided with information about restraining order options, as well as programs that were available to provide safety.

A domestic violence report, separate from the arrest report, was also filed. A copy of this report will go to domestic violence counselors, who will follow up with the victim, offering a myriad of services.

Nice work!

ACCORDING TO Lieutenant Charles Santoro of the Quincy Police Training Unit, domestic violence is one of the most dangerous situations a Police Officer will deal with. When responding to a domestic dispute, officers are impartial and compassionate to the needs of the victims. If you would like more information regarding domestic violence, contact Lt. Santoro at 617-745-5744. In the event of an emergency, dial "911."

While there are no simple solutions to domestic violence, a team approach involving the police, teachers, court advocates and social workers can make the difference between hope and despair.

Stop & Shop Talks Turkey

Put Food Safety On Menu This Thanksgiving

As family chefs everywhere begin to put together their menus for the holidays, Stop & Shop Supermarkets is reminding consumers that every recipe in the kitchen requires food safety.

"Don't let your Thanksgiving turkey bite you back," cautioned Stop & Shop's Consumer Advisor Andrea Astrachan.

To ensure a happy and healthy holiday season, Astrachan suggests a number of safety procedures to follow, courtesy of the United States Department of Agriculture, to be used throughout and beyond the national Thanksgiving holiday.

"Consumers can have a great tasting meal and be safe at the same time," she said.

Getting Ready

"If you're preparing poultry or other perishable foods, make sure everything is clean," Astrachan said. "This includes your hands, the sink and surfaces such as counters and utensils. All of this must be done before food prep starts. This cleaning process should continue through the food preparation and should continue after it has ended."

Getting The Bird

"If you want to shop ahead, you can purchase a frozen turkey," Astrachan said. "But if you want to shop within one to two days of cooking it, you can safely purchase a fresh turkey. Frozen turkeys must be thawed prior to cooking. The refrigerator is the safest place to do this. As thawing commences, bacteria can begin to multiply to levels that cause food borne illnesses. Thawing the turkey in the fridge can minimize the risk.

"Allow 24 hours of thawing time for each 5 pounds of turkey. Otherwise, there is the cold water approach. In this case, allow 30 minutes per pound and change the water every 30 minutes until the turkey is thawed. If you're using a microwave oven, plan to cook the turkey immediately after thawing. Some areas of the turkey may become warm and begin to cook during microwave thawing."

Separate The Food

"Protect your family against cross contamination by separating raw meat and poultry from foods that will not be cooked, such as bread or salad material," Astrachan said. "Raw meat and poultry products may contain harmful bacteria, so it is important that juices from these foods not come into contact with foods that will be eaten without cooking."

Cooking The Bird

"Use a thermometer," Astrachan said. "The pop-up device on the turkey is an approximation, but the thermometer is the only reliable way to verify the turkey has reached a high enough temperature to destroy harmful bacteria.

"First, secure the turkey on the stovetop or in the oven so that nobody gets burned from hot juices. Insert the food thermometer and involve the kids by asking them to give you the readout."

Safe Turkey

"Whole turkey should reach 180 degrees between the breast and the innermost portion of the thigh. Turkey breast should reach 170 degrees in the thickest part of the breast. Turkey thighs and wings should reach 198 degrees. Stuffing, cooked alone or in the bird, should reach 160 degrees.

"If you're stuffing a turkey, use a food thermometer to check the internal temperature of the turkey and the stuffing. The turkey should reach 180 degrees and the stuffing should reach 160 degrees or higher. If the stuffing is cooler than that, put the bird back in the oven."

The Aftermath/Or Leftovers

"Refrigerate leftovers immediately," Astrachan said. "Cut the meat away from the bone, store in shallow containers and refrigerate. Leftover turkey, stuffing and gravy should be used within a few days. Otherwise you should freeze, thaw and reheat the leftovers for later. As a rule, cooked turkey will keep three to four days in the refrigerator, or up to four months if frozen."

For more information, customers should contact their Stop & Shop meat and poultry manager.

Flu Vaccine Still Best Way To Avoid Getting Influenza

Saving yourself from a lot of suffering can be simpler than you may think.

As influenza season approaches, many people think about getting a flu vaccine but never get around to it. For some, not getting a flu shot may result in symptoms that will be an inconvenience, such as high fever, sore throat or runny nose. For others, the consequences are far more severe.

In fact, the flu is a serious disease that on average kills 36,000 people in the United States each year and sends many more to the hospital.

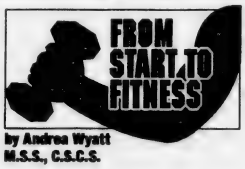
Persons who are most at risk of ending up in the hospital with influenza are nursing home residents and other people 65 or older. People who have chronic conditions such as diabetes, heart disease, asthma, kidney disease, lung problems, cancer and HIV also have an increased risk for severe complications from influenza.

Pregnant women and children younger than age two are at high risk for serious problems arising from the flu.

What many do not realize though, is that if they are infected with the flu virus and are in close contact with someone who falls into one of these categories, they could spread the flu to uninfected people before they even start feeling sick.

Adults can continue to pass the influenza virus to others for three to seven days after symptoms start and children can pass along the virus for longer than seven days. Transmission of the flu is mostly through sneezing or coughing but the virus can also live on objects such as doorknobs, telephone receivers and utensils for as long as a day.

Although some people are ill with influenza for only a few days and have mild symptoms, others become seriously ill and need to be hospitalized.



What can you do to protect yourself and your loved ones from the serious infection? Getting vaccinated every year is the best way to avoid getting the virus and passing it to those you care about.

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) recommends getting an influenza vaccine in October or November (before flu season really gets under way). Flu vaccines are safe and effective and, contrary to misperceptions, cannot cause the flu virus.

Unlike last year, officials expect more than enough flu vaccine this year. Everyone can get a vaccine who wants one.

If you are unsure when or where to get vaccinated, ask your health care provider or call the health department.

To learn more, call the CDC at 1-800-CDC-INFO or visit www.cdc.gov/flu.

Men's Midsections Are Fat Storehouses

Q. My husband has average-size legs and arms, but a very large stomach and chest. Although his stomach protrudes over his pants, when touched, his stomach is hard, not soft. He believes that since his stomach doesn't show rolls of fat that he is in shape and refuses to work out with me.

I have read that excessive fat around the stomach can lead to heart disease, high blood pressure and other conditions such as lower back pain. How can I persuade my husband to exercise, and that his "hard" stomach doesn't mean a healthy stomach?

A. You are exactly right about excessive body fat — especially in the abdominal region — being a sign of things to come. Unfortunately, your husband is not alone in his thinking.

Men tend to carry most of their body fat around the midsection, while women tend to store it around the hips, thighs, glutes and other areas, in addition to the abdomen. This often gives some men the impression that because they are not seeing significant changes to other parts of their bodies such as arms and legs, and because they look muscular or "tight," they must be healthy. Broad shoulders and a wide chest also give some men the illusion of a strong, powerful, football-type physique.

I would begin by trying to educate your husband on the facts and benefits of having a healthy, functional and stable core muscle group.

The tightness of your husband's stomach could be due to visceral pressure against the abdominal wall, affecting the effectiveness of his core muscles and internal organs. Corrective exercise specialist Paul Chek describes the core as the body's foundation for movement. If the core does not function properly, someone will most likely experience extremity and spinal pain, as well as increased chances of injury.

Although your husband may feel OK now, he is placing himself at a higher risk of future medical conditions and injury by not lowering his body fat. Without stable and functional core muscles, he cannot effectively use his extremities, placing himself at risk of injury. Chek compares this to "firing a cannon from a canoe." Your husband must strengthen his body's natural girdle (core muscles).

I would begin by asking him to see his physician, who can check his blood pressure, heart rate, respiratory function, joint stability (including spine), body fat percentage and other functions. If your husband has been carrying around that type of body composition for a while, I'm sure his physician has recommended exercise and proper eating habits, so this may be a good way to kick- start him.

Once he gets clearance from his doctor, I would recommend starting slowly with a fun activity such as walking, swimming or cycling. Encourage healthy nutritional choices and promote an environment that fosters positive lifestyle habits. With time, your husband should begin to see changes to his body composition that will hopefully encourage him to continue living a fit and healthy lifestyle.

BRUSH OFF

Toothpaste may make your mouth feel cleaner, and its fluoride may help prevent decay, but it is the mechanical action of the brush that effectively removes plaque. With this in mind, a recent review of 42 studies by English researchers found that many electric toothbrushes are not more effective than manual brushes. However, there is one type of electric toothbrush that proves to be the exception. Models with rotation oscillation action were found to reduce plaque by 11% over manual toothbrushes. In addition, this type of electric toothbrush reduced the symptoms of gingivitis (gum disease) by 17%. Because the circular head rotates in alternate directions, the bristles work into all the nooks and crannies between teeth and next to gums.

If you have concerns or questions ab out the well being of your teeth and gums, call us at 617-479-6220. Please don't let unwarranted fears keep you from maintaining your dental health. Your chances of needing expensive treatment in the future because of neglect today are a far greater concern. The key to dental health is routine preventive care. Most insurance companies allow two cleanings per year. Have you had yours? We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we are currently accepting new patients. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

Defeats Newton North, Boston Latin

North Quincy Advances To State Semi-Finals

GIRLS' VOLLEYBALL

By CHRIS POISSON

With its lack of tournament experience, the North Quincy High School girls' volleyball team showed great poise in last week's Division 1 Central East sectional tournament.

The Red Raiders overcame first-game losses in both the semifinal and final en route to their fourth sectional championship in five years. They lost to cross-town rival Quincy in last year's final.

North Quincy (21-4) faced defending state champion Barnstable (22-0) Tuesday at Mansfield in a state semifinal match. Earlier in the season, it fell at Barnstable, 3-1.

"It was a great week, winning the sectionals," said head coach Jim Rendle. "We always set that goal and I'm pleased that we did it. I'm real proud of the kids. We're not the most talented team. It took a lot of hard work to get here. We're playing our best volleyball of the year right now."

In the championship against No. 6 Boston Latin last Saturday at Milton, No. 4 North Quincy dropped the first game, 24-26, but regrouped to win the next three, 25-20, 25-22 and 25-18.

Boston Latin had improved since its 3-0 loss to the Red Raiders earlier in the season, thanks to the return of its regular setter.

"They didn't have their setter the first time so we knew they would be a better team," Rendle said. "They played extremely well over the second half of the season."

Senior captain and middle hitter Erin Connolly dominated at the net, igniting the offense with 22 kills while also adding seven blocks.

Sophomore middle hitter Virginia Wong tallied nine kills and two blocks and junior setter Maria Della Croce had five aces. Senior libero Yvonne Tam led the way defensively with 16 digs.

"We're a very good ball-control team," Rendle said. "After losing a close game to them, we made adjustments in attacking them and they couldn't counter those adjustments. I was pleased with our ability to execute them."

Last Thursday, North Quincy upset top seed Newton North, 3-1, in the semifinals on the road. It lost the first game, 24-26, before reeling off three straight wins, 25-20, 25-22 and 25-18.

"That was a real hard-fought match," Rendle said. "They're a very big team. They were 19-1 going into the game and we were at their place."

Connolly totaled 18 kills and seven blocks and Della Croce added 22 assists and 10 digs. Senior outside hitter Allison Aupperlee played a great defensive game with 20 digs and five aces and senior outside hitter Lauren Aikens added three kills and six blocks.

"We were very focused in both games," Rendle said. "Both those teams were very hot coming in and we played well against them."

After receiving a first-round bye, North Quincy opened the sectional tournament at home last Tuesday against No. 5 Boston English, winning 3-0 (25-15, 25-9, 25-17).

"They're a city team and not particularly strong," Rendle said. "It was good because we were able to play some freshmen and some other seniors."

Senior libero Tricia Wong had five service points and senior Hallie Acton had three kills in the first game. Freshmen Julie Lynch (two kills) and Kathleen Lynch (two assists) also played well.

YOUNGSTERS FROM THE South Shore YMCA in Quincy attended a recent Boston Celtics home game as part of "McDonald's RMHC Community Section," and were invited to have their photo taken on the parquet floor of the TD Banknorth Garden. As guests in "McDonald's RMHC Community Section," the children also had the opportunity to see both teams in the pre-game shoot-around prior to the Boston Celtics home opener against New York Knicks. Each participating youngster received a complimentary ticket to the game and a Celtics/McDonald's T-shirt. With the local youngsters is Boston Celtics rookie Ryan Gomes.

Quincy, North Represented On Volleyball All-Star Team

Eight local girls were named to the Atlantic Coast League all-star volleyball team for their play this season.

North Quincy High School all-stars were senior captain and middle hitter Erin Connolly, junior setter Marie Della Croce, sophomore middle hitter Virginia Wong and senior libero Yvonne Tam.

Senior outside hitter Allison Aupperlee was an honorable mention. Senior libero Winnie Wiwatyukhan received the sportsmanship award.

Representing Quincy High School were senior tri-captain and middle hitter Ashlee Scott, sophomore middle hitter Liz Bock, and senior tri-captains and setters Leanna Lam and Kim LeBel. Joanne Wall earned the sportsmanship award.

Connolly and Scott were also named to the Massachusetts Volleyball Coaches Association Division 1 all-state team.

Quincy's Season Over

Returning only two players from last year's state championship runners-up squad, the Quincy High School girls' volleyball team had a better season than most anticipated.

The Presidents (11-7 overall) finished second in the Atlantic Coast League North Division behind champion North Quincy and won a game in the state tournament.

Their season ended last Tuesday with a 3-0 loss at top seed Newton North in the quarterfinals of the Division Central East sectional tournament.

"We exceeded expectations this season with only two returnees," said head coach Christine Barrett. "We finished second in the ACL and made it to the second round of the state tournament."

Quincy fell behind 8-0 in the first game before rallying to even the score at 8. It went back and forth before Newton North pulled away to win, 25-19. Quincy dropped the next two games, 25-17 and 25-15.

Senior tri-captain and middle hitter Ashlee Scott tallied eight kills, three aces and 22 digs.

"That was the best defensive game I've ever seen her play in her career," Barrett said.

Sophomore middle hitter Liz Bock led the offense with 15 kills and added five digs. Senior libero Nicole Kasanoff had 12 digs and sophomore Marybeth Torpey had eight kills.

Senior tri-captains and setters Leanna Lam (12 assists, 10 digs) and Kim LeBel (11 assists, nine digs, two kills) also played well. LeBel had missed the previous two weeks with an ankle injury.

The Presidents graduate six seniors — Scott, Lam, LeBel, Kasanoff, Megan Brennan and Joanne Wall — but are optimistic about next season with a lot of sophomores in the program, including Bock, Torpey and Danielle Woodberry who started against Newton North.

"It's going to be tough losing those seniors," Barrett said. "But we have a ton of sophomores coming back. They know what they need to do in the offseason and what they need to do to get to the next level."

ENGINE OIL BY DESIGN

If you own a new or relatively new vehicle, you may want to consider the advantages of using synthetic engine oil. These "designer" oils have base stocks of man-made organic esters and other synthesized hydrocarbons. These contrast with traditional mineral oils that are produced from crude petroleum and contain impurities such as resin, asphalt, wax, carbon, sulfur, and aromatic residues. While refining removes most of these impurities, some remain to cause problems under high stress and temperatures. For instance, while the best mineral-based oils break down or oxidize at temperatures of 200-300° F., synthetic oil can easily tolerate temperatures of 450° F. or more. Synthetics also flow more freely at low temperatures and provide longer intervals between oil changes.

At LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO, we'd be happy to advise you on what oil would be proper for your automobile. Located at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (Phone 781-843-1550), we can provide you with excellent automotive services, including oil changes. Ask us about our oil change packages (including filters and fluid checks). You can trust our certified mechanics with your car needs. We are "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer."

HINT: Synthetic oils are more slippery than conventional mineral based oils, which translates into reduced friction between the engine's moving internal parts.

Raiders Shut Down By Plymouth South, 28-0

By CHRIS POISSON

The North Quincy High School football team snapped its two-game winning streak last Friday night to lose momentum heading into next week's 73rd annual Thanksgiving Day game against city foe Quincy.

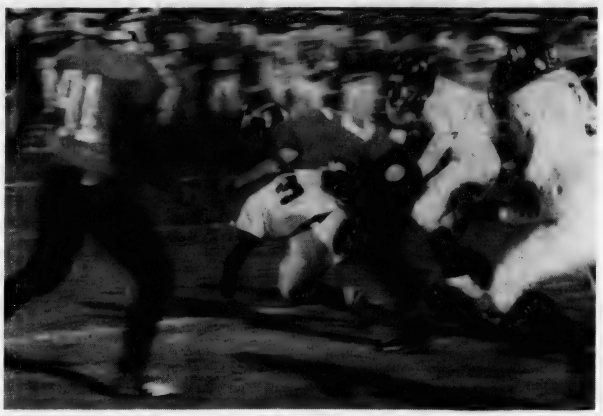
The Red Raiders (2-8 overall, 1-6 Atlantic Coast League) turned the ball over four times in a 28-0 loss to Plymouth South (7-2 overall, 6-1 ACL) at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

"We had some momentum coming in but today was a different story," said head coach Bill Shaughnessy. "We turned the ball over four times and had a couple of big penalties. We didn't executive. We didn't make blocks. We didn't tackle. We just didn't play a good game at all."

North Quincy turned the ball over on its second play of the game when defensive back Brandon Coolidge made the first of three inceptions.

The Panthers capitalized with solid field position at the NQ 34 when tailback Erich Sunberg scored on a 6-yard touchdown run up the middle. Anthony Tognacci kicked the first of four extra points for a 7-0 with 7:34 left in the quarter.

The Red Raiders dug themselves into an even deeper hole when Plymouth South intercepted another pass on their next series and cashed it in for points.



Starting at the NQ 34 again, the Panthers scored in seven plays when Sunberg found the end zone from 1 yard out with 3:17 left in the first.

North Quincy sustained a long drive on its next series, but stalled at the PS 42 after 12 plays and nearly six minutes. Senior Anthony Black boomed a great punt that senior Akil Benjamin chased down to pin the Panthers at their 1-yard line.

Backed up near its end zone, Plymouth South didn't seem phased and two plays later Connor Brandon blasted though the middle of North Quincy's defense for a 98-yard TD run and a 21-0 lead with 7:51 left in the half.

The Panthers closed out the scoring on the opening possession of the second half when Brandon knifed his way through the middle of the defense again for a 59-yard score with 7:23 left in the third.

"Overall we didn't come to play as a team," Shaughnessy said. "You can't to that against a team like that. You can't make mistakes, You can't turn the ball over four times. You have to be sound on defense. You can't have them stuck on the 2-yard line and then all of a sudden they're going to run off a 98-yard touchdown because we missed an assignment. Like I said, we just didn't come to play at all. Our heads weren't in the game."

Sandwich Blanks Presidents, 14-0

When there were no officials for the start of last Saturday's game at Sandwich, the Quincy High School football team should've known it was in for a long afternoon.

After an hour and a half delay, the Presidents' day seemed even longer with its worst performance of the season, a 14-0 setback to the Blue Knights.

"We just had a bad day from the time we got off the bus and it never got better," said head coach Bob Noble. "All that other stuff aside, we just didn't play very well. Sandwich did and deserved the victory.

"We just came out flat. We just picked that day to play our worst game of the year. They beat us in every phase of the game. We've been pretty good all year. Hopefully this was an anomaly, just a hiccup."

The loss dropped Quincy's record to 5-2 in the Atlantic Coast League (5-4 overall) and eliminated its chance for a piece of the league championship. The title will be up for grabs when Plymouth North battles Plymouth South on Thanksgiving.

"It's disappointing because any chance of a piece of the league title is off the board," Noble said. "If Plymouth North wins, we'll finish in second place but that's not where we wanted to be. Now we're looking forward to Thanksgiving and everything that goes with that."

The Presidents were shut down offensively as Sandwich contained their running game. Senior tailback Everton DeCastro, who rushed for over 500 yards in the previous three games, was held to just 50.

"We were ineffective offensively and it cost us," Noble said. "They did a good job of controlling the football and maintaining field position."

The teams played a scoreless first half before Sandwich (5-5) took a 7-0 lead in the third quarter.

Quincy's best offensive play was junior quarterback Matt Boyle's 50-yard pass to junior wideout Tom Hazelhurst to the Sandwich 35-yard line.

On the next play, though, Sandwich intercepted a pass and it capitalized on the turnover with a long scoring drive for a 14-0 lead to seal the game.

Noble said Hazelhurst played well both offensively and defensively and junior Jim Aikens turned in a strong game at defensive back.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Any time a lie comes forth from our lips, we have dishonored ourselves, eroded our integrity and cast mud in our own character and name... There was a time not so long ago when our name was extremely important and our honor above price. Either our word is dependable or it is not. We are either honest or we are not. It doesn't matter if you are a preacher, politician or parent. No one will place more value on your name than you do... Whatever occupation or service our lot in life may be, we need to bring to it integrity and honor. If it is a job that cannot be approached honorably, than we should not have any part of it. The price is too high.

Maintaining honor has always been a battle. George Washington said, "Few men have virtue to withstand the highest bidder." Macauley said, "The measure of a man's real character is what he would do, if he knew he would never be found out."

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Your ruling planet, Mars, allows you to assume a sense of command that can help you turn a chaotic workplace situation into one that's orderly, productive and, yes, even friendly.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Getting a relationship that's been stuck in a rut up and running again depends on how far you want to run with it. Be honest with yourself as you consider which decision to make.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Be wary of rumors that seem to be coming from everywhere this week. Waiting for the facts before you act means never having to say you're sorry you followed the wrong lead.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A difficult personal matter might prompt you to turn to a trusted friend to help you sort through a maze of emotional conflicts. The weekend should bring some welcome news.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Some of the new people coming into the Lion's life could play pivotal roles in future personal and professional matters. Meanwhile, an old friend might have an important message.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A delay in getting things moving on schedule can be a blessing in disguise. Use this extra time to do more research so you can buttress any of the weaker points with solid facts.

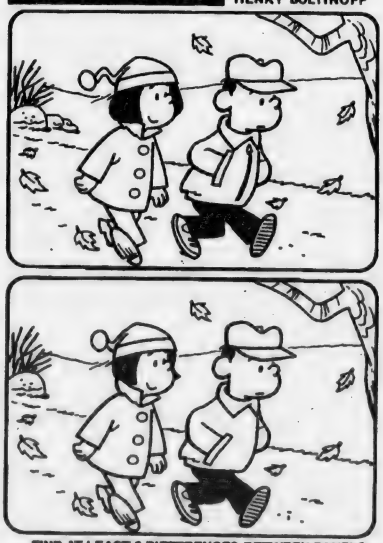
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You might need to get involved in a personal matter before it becomes a serious problem. Also be wary of someone offering to mediate unless you can be sure of his or her motives.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Taking sides in a workplace or domestic dispute could prolong the problem. Stay out and stay cool. Then you can be friends with both parties when things settle down.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A friendship has the potential to become something more, and with this week's aspects favoring romance, you might feel that this possibility is worth exploring.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) The new job you want might require you to relocate. If so, keep an open mind and weigh all the positives and negatives before making your decision.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A new relationship seems to be everything you could have hoped for. Congratulations. Meanwhile, it's not too early to get some feedback on that new project you're working on.



PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You might have decided to get out of the fast-moving current and just float around hither and yon for a while. But you might find that the new opportunity is too tempting to turn down.

BORN THIS WEEK: You believe in bringing out the best in people with kind deeds, loving words and recognition of their "special" selves.

PRAYER TO THE BLESSED VIRGIN

"Oh, most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, Fruitful vine, splendor of heaven, Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, assist me in my necessity. Oh, Star of the Sea, help me and show me, herin you are my Mother. Oh, Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth! I humbly beseech you from the bottom of my heart to succor me in this necessity. There are none that can withstand your power. Oh, show me herin that you are my Mother. Oh, Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (3X). Holy Mother, I place this cause in your hands (3X). Holy Spirit, you who solve all problems, light roads so that I can attain my goal. You gave me divine gift to forgive and forget all evil against me and that in all instances in my life you are with me. I want in this short prayer to thank you for all the things as you confirm once again that I never want to be separated from you in eternal glory. Thank you for your mercy toward me and mine." The person must say this prayer 3 consecutive days. After 3 days, the request will be granted. This prayer must be published after the favor is granted. Thank you. K.M.D. 11-17

Board Grants Permit To Store 5,000 Gallons Gasoline For Boats

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The License Board Tuesday granted the Quincy Maritime Park, LLC, 30 Nash Ave. a permit to store 5000 gallons of gasoline, diesel and propane in the tanks of boats.

Atty. James Timmins told the board that Paul Griffith, manager and Michael Scalisi own a portion of land at the old Fore River Shipyard called Marina Park which they plan to haul and store boats in the off season and plan development at a later date.

Timmins said that boat storage is in demand and the area is a "unique valuable site" to do so.

The motion was made by Jay Duca, director of inspectional services who listed the following conditions:

•The applicant shall comply with the Quincy Zoning ordinance, with respect to screening of the site.

•There shall be no rack storage or outdoor repairs.

•A site/safety plan shall be submitted and approved by the fire chief prior to storage. The plan should provide the number of boats, size and number of propane tanks as well as emergency access within the site.

•Also that the site be routinely raked to prevent the accumulation of combustible material.

•The applicant shall undergo a site plan review and receive approval for final development plans from the planning board.

•Site construction and final development of the site shall begin prior to Sept. 1, 2006, or this license shall expire.

present at the ceremony home on leave. He is returning to Iraq soon.

Col. Henes stressed the importance of honoring all veterans, past, present and future, those who served and those who still serve.

"Since the Revolutionary War, citizens both male and female have risen to the occasion at times of need," he said. "Many have made the ultimate sacrifice.

"I am proud to say that today's service members continue to uphold the values of their ancestors, loyalty, duty, respect, selfless service, honor, integrity and personal courage.

"We honor their service. The success of a community, state and nation is based upon the willingness of its citizens to serve (as Sen. John McCain has said) in a cause greater than themselves.

"Where do we find such men and women? They are amongst us all. Neighbors, friends, co-workers, mothers, fathers, sons and daughters."

Delahunt In Key Role

First Venezuelan Discount Oil Goes To North Quincy Family

By TOM HENSHAW

The ambassador from Venezuela and the president of CITGO were scheduled to visit North Quincy Tuesday to deliver personally 200 gallons of heavily discounted home heating oil to a low-income Massachusetts family.

The family of Paul A. Kelly, 11 Wilson Court, was the recipient of the first of 12 million gallons of Venezuelan oil in a deal set in motion by Congressman Bill Delahunt and Venezuelan President Hugo Chavez.

"With temperatures dropping and oil prices soaring, we're all worried sick about people without the means to heat their homes," said Delahunt.

"It is gratifying that at least one major oil company is willing to step up to help — voluntarily and at its own expense."

Delahunt was joined at the Kelly home by Venezuelan Ambassador Bernardo Alvarez, CITGO President Felix Rodriguez, Joseph Kennedy II of Citizens Energy Corp. and Larry Chretien, executive director of Massachusetts Energy Consumers Alliance.

The CITGO oil will be delivered to its terminal in East Braintree and distributed statewide by the non-profits Citizens Energy and the Energy Consumers Alliance.

Three fourths of the oil will go to low income families selected by Citizens Energy with help from local organizations and the rest will go to homeless shelters and low income housing groups served by the Energy Consumers Alliance.

For details, families should contact Citizens Energy toll-free at 877-563-4645 and Energy Consumers Alliance toll-free at 800-287-3950.

The oil will be discounted at 40 per cent over the next four months, leaving the families receiving 200 gallons oil with a bill of $275, a savings of some $185.

"Our objective is simple: to help people of limited means through the winter," said Rodrigeuz, the CEO of CITGO. a wholly owned subsidiary Petroleos de Venezuela SA, the Venezuelan national oil company.

"No one should have to choose between heat and medicine or food."

Delahunt spokesman Steve Schwadron said the congressman did not discuss details of the agreement with Chavez but got his help in putting the non-profits in touch with Petroleos de Venezuela.

Delahunt is a member of the Western Hemisphere Subcommittee of the House Committee on International Relations and, as such, has long been active in Latin American affairs.

He has worked extensively to defuse the often contentious relations between Chavez and the Bush Administration. The United States imports 15 per cent of its oil from Venezuela.

Three years ago, Delahunt helped found "Grupo Boston" (Boston Group), an exchange between Congress and the Venezuelan National Assembly in an attempt to help build bridges between the two countries.

One of the Boston Group's chief topics of discussion has been the relationship between New England's energy needs and the petroleum resources of Venezuela.

Dwyer Has Vice Chairman Votes

Elaine Dwyer appears to have the vice chairmanship of next year's school committee wrapped up.

But she isn't making any confirmation announcement.

"I won't count the votes until they are cast in January," she says. (At the organizational meeting.)

DWYER

But she reportedly has already lined up five votes — one more than needed and looks like a unanimous choice before January.

Dwyer is completing her fourth year on the school committee.

She was first elected in February, 2002 at a joint convention of the city council and school committee to fill the remaining two years of William Phelan's term after he was elected mayor.

Dwyer won the seat in a field of 15 candidates at the convention and went on in 2003 to win a four-year term on her own. She has two years to go on that term.

Dwyer has been a conscientious, hard-working member of the school committee, looking out for what is best for students and taxpayers.

She got the city to purchase mini-buses for special education students instead of contracting the service, saving considerable money for the city.

She also worked with Linda Stice and other members of the board to change the kindergarten starting age from 4 to 5.

And like the other members of the board has put in long hours trying to resolve the thorny issue of where to build the new Quincy High School.

FRANK McCAULEY will be honored by the Quincy Jewish War Veterans Post as its 55th annual "Citizen of the Year."

McCAULEY

The award will be presented at a 9:30 a.m. breakfast Sunday, Dec. 4 at Beth Israel Synagogue.

McCauley, former four-term mayor and now city council president, is retiring at the end of the year, closing out a 32-year distinguished political career.

And going into Quincy's political history as the only person to be elected to all four municipal offices: mayor, ward councillor, school committee and councillor at-large.

McCauley was honored as The Quincy Sun's Citizen of the Year in March.

MARIANO

BRAGG

THREE MEMBERS OF the School Committee will bid farewell at the Dec. 14, 6 p.m. meeting at North Quincy High School.

Vice Chairman Mike McFarland, Ron Mariano and Jo-Ann Bragg will be attending their last meeting as board members.

McFarland is giving up his seat to take one on the city council. Mariano and Bragg are stepping down.

Mariano served 16 years, Bragg 12 and McFarland eight. All have been vice-chairmen of the board.

Mariano, of course, is still a state representative. Bragg, watching the school committee results coming in at City Hall election night, acknowledged she has mixed feelings not being on the ballot but hinted she might be back as a future candidate.

ONE OF THE North Quincy High School girls volleyball team's most loyal fans is Rep. Bruce Ayers, a NQHS graduate.

AYERS

And, Rep. Demetrius Atsalis, a graduate of Barnstable High School, is just as big a booster of that school's team.

The two outstanding teams met last week in the state tournament semifinals.

Ayers and Atsalis put a friendly wager on the game: the loser would have to take the winner and the team's captains to his favorite district restaurant.

Barnstable won the game.

Atsalis says that in addition to the two Barnstable captains, he "promised to bring my appetite."

Ayers says he is proud of the North Quincy team's performance all season and "I am confident we will win next year."

LONGTIME QUINCY residents who move out of state really cherish their Quincy roots.

Like Mary Valorz, now living in Earlsyville, Va., and keeping up on what's going back here as a Quincy Sun mail subscriber. She writes:

"I am an 84 year Senior Golden Girl. I lived in Quincy 79 years and moved here near my son due to illness. I want to express how The Quincy Sun keeps my spirits up."

Her special memory of Quincy is the house she lived in for 55 years at 337 Center St.

"My husband was born there and passed away there — 71 years in the same house. I came there as a bride. I love that old house, its memories, the friends."

Mary says she wonders if Tom Galvin, whose "Scenes From Yesterday" is a popular weekly Sun feature, just might happen to have in his collection an old postcard of Center St. showing the house as it "looked many years ago."

"I know the house is over 100 years old. I would love having this memory on my wall."

Mary, we checked with Tom but he does not have an old view of that section of Center St. But he is always looking for old postcards and will keep an eye out for one showing 337 Center St.

If there's one around, he'll find it.

Charitable Gift Annuities Seminar At Marina Place

Quincy Medical Center, will hold a seminar on charitable gift annuities Tuesday, Dec. 13 from 2 to 3 p.m. at Marina Place, 4 Seaport Dr., North Quincy.

A Charitable Gift Annuity (CGA) is a financial contract enabling the donor to make a charitable gift now and receive a guaranteed fixed annual income for life, as well as the potential for charitable tax deductions and reduced probate and estate costs. After the donor's death, the gift continues and the remainder of the gift goes to support the charitable organization.

Quincy Atty. Thomas F. Williams, Esq., a Quincy attorney specializing in real estate conveyance and estate planning, will host the seminar.

The free seminar is open to the public, but pre-registration is requested.

For more information and to register, call 617-376-5495. All attendees will be entered into a raffle to win a $25 Dunkin' Donuts® gift card.

Quincy Medical Center (www.quincymc.org) is a 232-bed acute care community-teaching hospital providing South Shore residents with comprehensive medical and surgical services.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1910 postcard view of Washington Street in Quincy Point looking south towards the Fore River Bridge. Before this street became commercialized it was fairly quiet and serene and it was home to many estates of wealthy Quincy businessmen and civic leaders. At the time of this picture, the shipyard was only a few years old, there were still very few automobiles and the Southern Artery had not yet been built to intersect with this street. The trolley tracks on the right were originally built as the East Weymouth Line of the Quincy and Boston Street Railway Co., though in later years they primarily served the shipyard. The growth of the shipyard and other businesses along the water here led to the street's commercialization. And today it continues to change as it serves as a man commuter route for those living in towns on the South Shore. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Defends Mulvey On Letter

I felt the letter to the editor from K. Sullivan, Special Education teacher, was a tad harsh.

While Sullivan questions whether Kevin Mulvey shared his opinion of special ed with others before presenting them at a candidates' night, I wonder why didn't the letter writer communicate directly with Mulvey rather than through a blistering letter?

I spoke to others who attended the very same candidates' night and they heard what Mulvey said and it wasn't nearly as bad as presented in the letter.

There are about 1500 students identified as special needs in Quincy's public schools. Most of these students take one or two special classes and the rest of the school day, they are mainstreamed into regular classes.

However, there are about 200 students with severe disabilities that mainstreaming them is a bad education policy for the entire classroom.

Perhaps, Kevin Mulvey was talking about this student population which is a difficult issue to deal with.

I have been a substitute teacher in Quincy since 2000. I have subbed in both special ed and regular classes. I think Atlantic Middle does the best when it comes to special education. Atlantic ensures every student gets the least restrictive classroom environment, which is why many students take only one special class a day.

The other middle schools should follow where Atlantic leads.

I'll be talking to School Committeeman-elect Kevin Mulvey in person not through the Sun. He's a good guy and he listens.

23 Residents Die In Coconut Grove Fire

Nov. 24 - Dec. 1
63 Years Ago

At least 23 persons from Quincy were killed and three others were reported missing as a Saturday night fire swept the crowded Coconut Grove nightclub in Boston with a known death toll of 478 merrymakers.

An ambulance detail of three Quincy firefighters – Lt. Alex McEachern, Waldo Lagerquist and Joseph Maguire – was the first outside unit to arrive on the fire scene and they removed 40 bodies from the charred main lounge of the nightclub.

Ten nurses were dispatched from Quincy City Hospital to Boston City Hospital to assist in treating fire victims. Hospital Supt. Dr. Joseph P. Leone was prepared to ship 84 units of frozen blood plasma from its Civil Defense blood bank to Boston.

Quincy Police Chief John J. Avery, Lt. David L. Farrell and Special Officer Ernest Hodge formed a volunteer team and spent three hours removing the dead from the building and carrying the injured to hospitals on stretchers.

Quincy Red Cross workers under Capt. Eleanor Gould and Lt. Lillian Schwab mustered at the Adams Academy and dispatched two mobile canteens to the fire scene to serve coffee to rescue workers who were working in sub-freezing cold.

In the wake of the tragedy, Mayor William W. Jenness called a meeting of Chief Avery, Fire Chief William J. Sands and Building Inspector Alrick A. Weidman and promised that a survey will be made of all places where the public gathers in Quincy.

"We must be sure that such a tragedy will not happen in this city," Jenness said.

NEW RATIONING RULES

The Quincy Ware Price and Rationing Board announced that people who, for whatever reason, do not have War Ration Book One in their possession must register before Dec. 15 in order to receive War Ration Book Two.

The board also warned that Book One "will be used to ration coffee. It will also be used to issue War Ration Book Two and may be used to ration other commodities" such as sugar.

Turkey Stuffing

It doesn't have to be Thanksgiving Day at our house to enjoy a turkey dinner. And so it was two weeks ago when I decided to have a trial run for our turkey dinner and invite half the family to this one. The other half will all meet on Thanksgiving Day.

The stuffing can be made in so many ways, with or without the giblet. At our house I usually make two different ones. One with the giblet and one with meat. And at times just plain bread stuffing. Today's recipe is for the giblet stuffing and any ground meat can be used instead. With this traditional mixture, so many other things can be added such as mushrooms, chestnuts.

Turkey Stuffing
2 stalks celery (cut up)
1 small cut onion
giblet (cut in small pieces) or sausage or any ground meat
1/2 bag stuffing mix (soaked)
2 tablespoons Bell's seasoning
1 cup seasoned bread crumbs
1/4 cup white wine (optional)
1 cup chicken stock (or soup)
salt and pepper to taste
2 tablespoons vegetable oil or butter

In the hot oil or butter (or both), sauté the celery and onion. Add the desired meats, salt, pepper,. Bell's seasoning. Mix well and add the chicken stock and the wine. Add the soaked stiffing mix and the seasoned bread crumbs and blend well.

When cooled, place stuffing in the turkey or if preferred, place in a slightly greased casserole dish. When placed in the turkey, place aluminum foil over the cavity instead of stitching...much easier.

Happy Thanksgiving and happy cooking! Enjoy!

Stepping Down Jan. 1

Logue Praised For Her Achievements As Discover Quincy Director

Jennifer Logue will step down as executive director of Discover Quincy, effective Jan. 1.

Logue will return to WGBH, where she worked for eight years prior to joining Discover Quincy. In addition to assuming the position of Senior Publicist in WGBH's Media Relations department, Logue will also oversee the development of WGBH's new company intranet working with WGBH's Editorial Resources department.

Logue said her decision was made primarily for family reasons.

"From the beginning, this was a labor of love that I threw my heart and soul into," she said. "But as the mother of three children, it's become increasingly difficult to balance the challenge of running Discover Quincy with the needs of my family, particularly as things have really taken off for Quincy tourism."

"Jennifer has been an asset to Discover Quincy and has worked tirelessly to promote the City of Quincy during her tenure," said Ed Fleming, president of the Discover Quincy board of directors. "Through Jennifer's efforts, Discover Quincy has achieved great success in attracting tourists and other visitors to Quincy and in making Quincy better known as a tourist destination."

JENNIFER LOGUE

"Although the organization is disappointed to lose Jennifer's leadership, she leaves Discover Quincy in a position to have continued success in promoting the city for years to come," he said. s Fleming said that the board's executive search committee will begin the process of finding a new director immediately.

Fleming noted the many accomplishments achieved by Discover Quincy under Logue's tenure, including:

- Production and distribution of more than 130,000 Quincy brochures, including the city's first comprehensive Visitor Guide.
- Development and launch of the city's first tourism web site, www.discoverquincy.com
- Placement of numerous advertisements in travel publications promoting Quincy as a tourist destination.
- Receipt of state grants to fund tourism initiatives as well as a $30,000 grant from the Mass. Cultural Council to launch the Quincy Arts Alive! event series.
- Creating of joint marketing materials through the Cultural Coast that promotes the city of Quincy along with Plymouth, New Bedford, the Cape and Islands.
- Organization of special events and promotions, including the city's first ever Patriot's Day Celebration and the "Kilroy Was Here" promotion.

Discover Quincy was also instrumental, Fleming added, in facilitating this summer's launch of two new trolley routes connecting the city's hotels with downtown Quincy, Marina Bay and the Harbor Express ferry service.

Logue expressed her appreciation for the support she has received both from the Discover Quincy board of directors and the city as well as the numerous organizations with which Discover Quincy has collaborated, including the Adams National Historical Park, Quincy Art Association and Quincy Historical Society.

"It's been a privilege to serve as director of Discover Quincy and I am extremely grateful for all the assistance and support I've received," she said. "It was my intention from the start to get Discover Quincy up and running and to prove that Quincy's numerous historic sites and attractions could attract tourists and I believe we've done that. I'm now looking forward to working with the new director to ensure a smooth transition."

Last Day Of Yardwaste Pickup At Curbside Dec. 2

The week of Nov. 28 to Dec. 2 will be the last week of yardwaste pickup at curbside.

After Dec. 2, Quincy residents can continue to drop off yardwaste at the Department of Public Works, 55 Sea St., Monday through Friday from 7 a.m. to 3 p.m. and Saturday from 9 a.m. to noon through mid-December.

Residents should place their yardwaste curbside by 6:30 a.m. on their regularly scheduled trash collection day. They should place their leaves, grass clippings and small twigs in brown paper yardwaste bags (no plastic bags), open boxes or open barrels.

Any yardwaste placed in plastic bags or covered barrels will not be collected. Yardwaste should be set apart from regular trash.

Tree branches should be cut into three-foot lengths and tied with string or rope. Larger brush and tree limbs can be dropped off at the city's Public Works Recycling Center, 55 Sea St.

All yardwaste materials that are collected are taken to the DPW yard where they are composted over a nine-month period. The brush is processed through a tub grinder to create a product for re-use. The compost from Quincy residents' leaves and grass clippings is processed and used on many city-owned properties.

For missed pickups, call BFI at 617-471-7900. For more information, visit www.ci.quincy.ma.us.

World War II Statue Going To Merrymount Park For Re-dedication Dec. 7

The World War II statue will be moved from outside City Hall to Merrymount Park for re-dedication on Pearl Harbor Day, Wednesday, Dec. 7, Mayor William Phelan announces.

Some 450 of a total 4,000 commemorative bricks and a number of granite pavers have been engraved and will be installed in time for the 1 p.m. re-dedication ceremony. The other bricks and pavers will be installed later.

Robert Rizzi, president of the South Shore Labor Trades Council, has volunteered brick layer members to set the bricks and pavers in place at no cost to the city.

Originally, Phelan had hoped to have the statue moved and re-dedicated on Veterans' Day but plans were shifted to Dec. 7 as a more appropriate date because that date marks the attack on Pearl Harbor and this country's entry into World War II.

The 11-ton granite ball, which had been at the Fore River traffic rotary, will replace the statue on Constitution Common.

The ball is in Barre, Vt., for repairs and re-polishing.

No firm date has been set as yet for its re-dedication. It will require a new foundation and work on that will depend on the weather.

Fallon Ambulance Opens $6 Million Headquarters

Fallon Ambulance Service, the region's largest independent, family-owned ambulance service provider, recently opened the doors to their new expanded state of the art facility located at 111 Brook Rd. in West Quincy.

Quincy Mayor William J. Phelan attended the ribbon cutting ceremony along with officials from Weymouth, Milton, Braintree, Brookline and Dedham, all communities served by Fallon Ambulance's 911 emergency services. More than 100 people attended the ceremony and toured the facility.

The new Fallon Ambulance facility represents the first Tax Increment Financing (TIF) in Quincy since 1995. With the tax break, Fallon will conservatively pay $1.7 million in property taxes and $661,000 in vehicle excise taxes to the City of Quincy over the next 20 years. The facility was the former New England Steel Tank Co. factory.

The new facility triples the operating space for the 68-year old, third-generation business, allowing them to expand their service area.

Peter Racicot, Fallon's Senior Vice President of Business Development said, "We are delighted to showcase our new facility. This move and our investment reaffirm our commitment to providing the highest quality of care and service to the people we serve

"This state-of-the-art facility enables us to have an on-site training facility, expanded dispatch capabilities, and greater opportunities for expansion."

The revitalized structure consists of 43,000 square feet of space on a 70,000 square foot lot. The first floor will serve as garage space, occupying 30,000 square feet to house the vehicles in the Fallon fleet. The second floor includes 13,000 square feet of office space; the building features a two-story lobby with a glass entrance.

Sheskey Architects in Quincy provided design services for the building's retrofit; Bayview Development served as General Contractor.

Fallon Ambulance is one of the region's larger employers, whose personnel include paramedics, EMTs, and chair car drivers. In the last decade, the company has grown significantly, in both personnel and scope of the 9-1-1 coverage provided. The company has added Quincy, Braintree, Brookline, Dedham and Weymouth to the list of communities for which it provides primary 9-1-1 service, in addition to the town of Milton. Additionally, the company provides paramedic intercept services for a growing number of communities.

In addition to its present headquarters at 111 Brook Rd., West Quincy, the company operates satellite offices throughout its coverage area. For additional information about Fallon Ambulance Services or programs that the company offers, contact Peter Racicot, Senior Vice President, at (617) 745-2117 or visit www.fallonambulance.com.

Residents and visitors can see how far the Quincy-born catchphrase "Kilroy Was Here" traveled in 2005 as an exhibit of all of the photo entries in the recent "Kilroy Was Here" Photo Contest opened Sunday aboard the USS Salem.

More than 320 photos submitted to the contest are on display through the spring aboard the Salem, located at 739 Washington St.

The photos depict Kilroy in a variety of exotic locales - from the Great Wall of China to Siberia to Antarctica - as well as in many cities and towns across America.

Admission to the exhibit will be the USS Salem's regular $5 admission fee and includes a tour of the ship.

For more information, contact the USS Salem at 617-479-7900.

The phrase "Kilroy Was Here" began at the Quincy Shipyard during World War II, when inspector James Kilroy began scrawling the phrase on the sides of ships that he inspected. With no time to paint over the markings, "Kilroy Was Here" soon traveled the world, becoming a rallying cry and moral booster for Allied troops on land, air and sea.

Following the war, the phrase and its accompanying cartoon took on a life of its own, appearing as graffiti on the sides of buildings, bridges and landmarks around the world as well as in movies such as Patton, Kelly's Heroes and even Bugs Bunny cartoons.

$20 Million Heating Bill Passed By Legislature

MICHAEL MORRISSEY

The so-called Heat Bill, which will provide tax credits and $20 million in state funding, $5 million of it immediately, has passed the State Legislature.

"The Heat Bill is a comprehensive program of tax credits and incentives to help Massachusetts consumers and energy users deal with rising energy costs this winter," said Sen. Michael Morrissey.

The package includes tax credits of up to $600 toward purchases of residential energy efficient heating items that help households use less gas and oil.

The $20 million in state funding, almost triple the commitment of the previous year, goes toward the Federal Low Income Home Energy Assistance Program (LIHEAP).

Morrissey, chairman of the Joint Committee on Telecommunications, Utilities and Energy, said hearings on the bill received estimates that home heating costs are expected to rise between 25-30 per cent this winter.

"We can't have people making a choice between heating their homes of feeding their families," said Rep. Bruce Ayers, a member of Morrissey's committee.

Red Cross Blood Drive Nov. 28

The American Red Cross will hold a blood drive Monday, Nov. 28, from 1 to 7 p.m. at the Quincy Point Congregational Church, 444 Washington St.

Donors must be at least 17 years of age and weigh at least 110 pounds to be eligible.

Call 1-800-448-3543 or visit www.givelife.org to make an appointment.

Fire Hydrants Testing Continues Throughout City

The Fire Department will continue testing and flushing of fire hydrants throughout the city until Nov. 30, daily, between the hours of 9:30 a.m. and 10:30 a.m, and 1 p.m. through 3 p.m..

The flushing may temporarily cause the water in the surrounding area to appear rusty or discolored. Residents are advised to limit water use during the time of nearby flushing and should avoid doing laundry while flushing occurs in their neighborhood, as clothes may be susceptible to stains from the discolored water.

Hydrant testing and flushing is a maintenance management tool. The testing is designed to ensure proper pressure and flow and identify any problem locations.

"I appreciate the cooperation of residents as we perform this routine maintenance inspection," said Fire Chief Tim Pettinelli. "The inspections are performed to ensure the safety of the public and our firefighters."

N.Q. Catholic Women's Arts, Crafts Fair Dec. 3

Bake tables and refreshments will be available. Proceeds will benefit school funds.

FIRE SAFETY

by Captain Tom Lyons
Fire Prevention Bureau
Quincy Fire Department

Gasoline Demands Respect

Gasoline is so commonly used and is such an integral part of our daily lives, I wonder if most of us are aware of it as a potential hazard if used haphazardly?

For instance, according to statistics acquired by the Office of the State Fire Marshal, Massachusetts hospitals have treated 85 people for gasoline-related burns over the last five years.

Gasoline vapors ignite at a very low temperature. Fumes are heavier than air and can travel some distance to potential ignition sources. Therefore, keep anything that could provide heat to ignite gasoline vapors well away from the fumes. A spark, a lit cigarette or a pilot light are enough for the fumes to flash. A static spark created when gasoline is improperly used to clean a paintbrush can ignite with devastating consequences. Gasoline is a tool, one frequently used, and it demands respect!

When at a self-service gasoline station make certain your engine is turned off before fueling. Obviously, do not smoke while fueling your vehicle as well. Remember to replace the nozzle back onto the pump when you're through fueling and before you drive away. It happens! Fueling hose lines come with a breakaway feature for that very reason. If a car drives away with a nozzle in the fill pipe, there is a breakaway feature which is there to minimize spillage to the environment.

Keep gasoline away from children. Statistics indicate that children between 10 and 14 were almost three and a half times as likely to get in trouble with gasoline. I recall an incident when a gasoline safety can was used to mark a child's bicycle obstacle course within a garage under a house. The contents accidentally spilt onto the garage floor while the vapors migrated to the basement furnace and ignited. There were devastating consequences to this incident.

If you need to carry or store gasoline, use an approved container. Within a vehicle, make certain it is secured in an upright position away from the passenger area. Anyone who has ever spilt gasoline within a vehicle trunk knows how difficult it is to rid the car of the odor.

Particularly if you're driving a short distance with a safety can, make certain that the fill and vent openings are tightly closed. I hesitate to mention this where gasoline expands as it warms in atmospheric air temperatures. The vent then reduces the internal pressure within the container, however, to reduce spillage, the State Fire Marshal encourages tightening the vent. I therefore suggest keeping a container within a trunk for the shortest time possible. For me, it's typically a ride from the gas station back home for that very reason.

When filling an approved gas container, always place it on the ground, insert the pump nozzle and bring it in contact with the inside of the container. This will reduce the risk of static electricity igniting the vapors.

Lastly, do not store gasoline within a building used for habitation. I've focused on this issue in a prior article because of the importance to occupants and responding firefighters as well. I hope that you find this information helpful!

Quincy UPS Store Teams With Toys For Tots This Holiday Season

The Quincy UPS Store, 550 Adams St., has teamed up with the Marine Toys for Tots Foundation this holiday season.

Now through Dec 23, the Quincy UPS Store will offer customers the opportunity to purchase Toys for Tots donation cards for $1 each, with all proceeds supporting local Toys for Tots efforts.

The UPS Store is able to raise money for Toys for Tots by purchasing discounted toys through partner companies nationwide. UPS Store locations are collecting new, unwrapped toys in an effort to help the community to help local children this holiday season.

"It is rewarding to know our efforts brought a smile to a local child's face through the gift of a toy," said Tom Bagley, owner of the Quincy UPS Store. "With many of our Marines deployed overseas we felt it was more important than ever to support this 58-year-holiday tradition."

The UPS Store Network expects to raise more than $1 million nationwide for Toys for Tots.

For more information call Tom Bagley at the Quincy UPS Store at: 617-479-8771.

A Job Well Done

By LT. DAN MINTON

On Sunday, Nov. 13, at approximately 1:30 a.m., Officer Matthew Tobin was dispatched to the entrance of Stop and Shop on Southern Artery to investigate a call of "a man with his pants down around his ankles." Officers Stephen O'Donoghue and Brian Mahoney also responded and began searching the general area after an update from the dispatcher that the suspect was last seen walking towards Roxie's Market.

As Officer Tobin approached a male walking away from Roxie's, another male (the caller) in a vehicle was pointing to the suspect, yelling, "That's him right there." The suspect highly agitated and yelling, "They attacked me," would not calm down.

LT. DAN MINTON

Officer O'Donoghue interviewed the victim and caller, who stated that they pulled into the parking lot to shop. The victim, unaware that the store is not open after midnight on Sunday mornings, left the car and entered the first of the store's doors and into the corridor, when she came across the suspect with his pants down and his buttocks exposed.

She stopped in her tracks and was confronted by the suspect screaming that he would kill her. The victim fled back to her car and told the male driver. As he called the police, the suspect approached the car, made additional threats to kill the victim, then walked away towards McGrath Highway.

The suspect continued to claim he was attacked by the male and female, but failed to provide any specifics when questioned by the officers. The suspect, told many times to remain up against the cruiser, kept moving about, then began a tirade of verbal abuse directed at the offices. The suspect then told the officers that they would be sorry once they found out "who they were dealing with."

After all the information was gathered, Officer Tobin placed the 56-year-old Quincy resident under arrest for "disorderly conduct," "lewdness – open and gross" and "threatening to commit a crime (to kill.)"

Nice work!

This case shows how unobservant people can be, especially at an hour when an individual can be most vulnerable. As drivers, we are taught to scan the road, looking ahead for potential problems, yet, as walkers, people often have their head down or are inattentive to their surroundings.

Taking a moment to check the area prior to stepping from the vehicle and looking ahead would have eliminated the confrontation. Fortunately, the worst case scenario did not occur – the automated first door did not shut down behind the victim, which would have trapped her in with the suspect.

AS A SIDE story, last Thursday afternoon, while off-duty, my wife and I were exiting the Panera Bread Restaurant in North Quincy when I observed a man in the parking lot approaching people, who then opened their purse or wallet and gave him money. I watched this man solicit money from three people within a minute.

We walked out to my vehicle and he came to me asking for money because he ran out of gas, had no money and couldn't get home. I told him that he had plenty of money by now and he responded with some foul language. I called the police and Officer Mark Millane responded immediately. He determined that the man didn't have car keys or a car, but he did have a criminal record and over $20 in his hand.

The man, a homeless person from Malden, told Officer Millane that he was going to eat lunch at McDonald's and then take the train home. Officer Paul Foley told me afterward that he came across this man a few weeks ago using the same scam. He said that the man told him that he takes the train from Malden and likes the Panera customers because "they have money."

My main concern in this case is not the suspect's ability to steal from well-intended citizens, but more that each person that gave him money exposed their purse and wallet contents to him. This could have easily escalated to a robbery.

My secondary concern is that no one else called the police. Please – if you see something that does not seem right, call your local police department and let us check it out.

Conway Marks 49th Year In Business

Hundreds of well wishers helped Jack Conway & Co. mark its 49th year in business at a recent reception at the firm's Norwell headquarters.

Conway, which has 45 offices in Southeastern Massachusetts and Cape Cod, is the largest independently owned realty firm in the Bay State. Founder and Chairman Jack Conway started the company in Hingham Square in October 1956 with, as he joked with the crowd, "one man, one pencil, one notebook, and one rent bill that had to be paid."

Conway made the rent that month, and has since surrounded that "one man" with more than 1,000 sales associates, managers and full-time employees. His singular vision of leading a locally owned, community-based company is the key to its longevity, he said.

"Forty-nine years is a long time to be in business," Conway said. "And I want you to know that this company is not winding down. It is winding up, and we have great things in store for our future!"

That future includes two new sales offices, Conway announced, both of which will be opened in renovated, company-owned buildings by the end of this year. Plans are well under way for new sales centers in Hyannis and Taunton.

"The addition of Taunton and Hyannis will help us serve these communities even better than we do now," Conway said. "We're thrilled to increase our sales force in these areas of growth and prosperity."

Conway also repeated his commitment to remaining an independent, locally owned firm.

"I simply don't know of a better way to do business," he said.

COMPANY FOUNDER and Chairman Jack Conway and his wife, Pat, cut the cake marking the real estate company's 49th year in business.

Making New Homes More Affordable

(NAPS) – Private mortgage insurance (PrivateMI) programs have helped open a window of opportunity for a number of homebuyers – and analysts expect that window to open even wider.

PrivateMI helps make the housing market more accessible to buyers by letting them make down payments of just three percent or less, as opposed to the 20 percent usually required without the insurance. A new bill in Congress may make PrivateMI even more affordable and possibly open the market further. It's expected to save soon-to-be and current homeowners hundreds each year.

Called the Mortgage Insurance Fairness Act of 2005, the bill calls for private and government mortgage insurance payments to be tax deductible for individuals and families making less than $100,000 a year. Currently, PrivateMI payments are not tax deductible.

The insurance has been used by millions of first-time, middle-and low-income buyers, many of whom would get a tax deduction on their payments if this widely lauded, bipartisan bill passes.

Proponents of the act, authored and sponsored by both Democrats and Republicans, say the deduction could save families $300 to $350 a year. In addition, families with Department of Veterans Affairs and Rural Housing Service programs would receive a one-time benefit estimated at $700 for VA families and $200 for RHS families.

Over the last five years, mortgage insurance and guaranty programs covered 47 percent of all home purchase loans made to African-American and Hispanic borrowers and 47 percent of loans to borrowers with incomes below the median income of their area – and those numbers may soon grow.

The federal government recently set a goal of increasing the number of homeowners in the U.S. by 5.5 million as of 2010. Housing advocates say that making mortgage insurance payments tax deductible will help the U.S. reach that goal.

Bay State Home Sales Cool From Record Pace Of '04

Sales of detached single-family homes in Massachusetts eased in the third quarter from last year's record sales pace, but remained at a historically high level, while condominium sales continued to climb sharply this summer to a new all-time quarterly high, according to recent data issued by the Massachusetts Association of Realtors, (the MAR.)

Median selling prices also rose steadily in the detached home and condo markets in the third quarter, albeit more modestly than in recent periods, an indication demand is still healthy but buyers are acting with less urgency due to increased inventory levels.

The MAR report shows that sales of detached single-family homes declined 2.4 percent across the Bay State in the three months from July through September. The second consecutive quarter condo sales set a record, eclipsing the prior mark of 6,832 condos sold in the '05 second quarter.

Among the factors helping to keep buyer's confidence high are modest job and income growth, a wider selection of homes for sale and attractive mortgage rates, which averaged less than 6 percent in the third quarter at 5.95 percent for a 30 year fixed loan in Massachusetts.

Regionally, sales of detached single-family homes softened in all areas of the state except western Massachusetts where activity improved 8.3 percent over year ago levels. Home sales were essentially flat in central Mass., (Worcester County) during the third year, slipping just 0.5 percent, however both greater Boston and the Northeast region saw a modest two percent decline in sales, with an even larger decrease of 6-13 percent from the South Shore to Cape Cod

Conversely, condominium sales rose in all seven regions of the state during the third quarter. On the South Shore and Cape Cod, the condo market experienced modest gains of 1-3 percent, but elsewhere sales were up sharply from greater Boston to Berkshire County. The largest sales gains occurred in greater Boston, western Mass., and the Greater New Bedford-Fall River areas, where sales improved 18.4 percent, 25.6 percent and 38.6 percent respectively over year ago levels.

Illustrative of the more relaxed sales pace is the sharp increase in the inventory of homes for sale across the Bay State. Since last summer, the number of single-family properties (detached homes and condos) on the market has grown 31 percent, from a monthly average of 40,957 listings in the third quarter of '04 to 53,690 in the comparable quarter this year. At the current sales pace, this represents 7.2 months of supply, up from 5.6 months of supply in the third quarter last year.

Regionally, in the third quarter, median selling prices for detached single-family homes rose in all seven market areas of the state from year ago levels.

Median prices increased 4-5 percent on Cape Cod and in greater Boston and Southeastern Mass., 6-6 1/2 percent in the Central, Northeast and South Shore regions, and 13 percent in western Mass. Additionally, in the condominium market, price increases occurred in every region except the Greater New Bedford-Fall River area. Third quarter price gains ranged from one percent in greater Boston to 16 percent in western Mass.

Sales and price data from the MAR report reflect transactions occurring through Realtor-affiliated multiple listing services in commonwealth, and account for approximately 80 percent of all real estate sales in Massachusetts.

When Sealing Your Home Makes Money Sense

(NAPS) — There's no place like home when it comes to reducing energy costs.

As crude oil and natural gas prices rise, many homeowners look for ways to reduce energy costs at home. One simple step — sealing — can have a huge impact on an energy bill.

According to the Environmental Protection Agency, air leakage through tiny holes and cracks accounts for 25 to 40 percent of the energy used for heating and cooling a typical home. By sealing doors and windows, the average family that spends $2,500 a year on energy costs could save $500 per year.

Although many homeowners know that sealing can easily be a do-it-yourself job, surprisingly few homeowners actually undertake such projects.

Here's what they have to do to save $500:

• The most beneficial sealing project is windows. For effective sealing, place weather stripping around windows and apply caulk around windows, both inside and out, where needed.

• Ill-fitting doors are another source of leaks and should also be sealed. Anywhere you can see light, air can come in.

• You may be surprised to learn that the biggest air leaks in a home can be hidden in an attic or basement. The sum of these small openings can equal as much airflow as an open window. Be sure to seal both holes and small cracks. Pay particular attention to areas around joints, vents and chimneys.

Many experts prefer silicone caulk, such as GE Silicone II, because it is the best seal against water and the elements. Silicone doesn't shrink or crack, and moves as the home expands and contracts with the temperature.

For less than $20, the cost of enough silicone to seal the average size home, you could save up to $500 a year on heating costs.

Now there is even a paintable silicone on the market, GE's Silicone II XST, combining the superior performance of silicone and the paintability of an acrylic.

Do Plastics Taint Microwave Food?

Q: I just read your "Microwave Myths" article and have something I need to clarify. Is it true that only glass products should be used in the microwave to heat up and/or cover food? I've read that using plastic wraps, wax paper, etc. emits chemicals into food when it is heated. — Trish, Daytona Beach, Fla.

A: I also have heard that using plastic in microwaves is bad, but only through conversations with acquaintances. So I decided to check it out, and find out where this information came from.

It turns out that the "plastic in the microwave" danger is just another Microwave Myth. On the Internet, the Web sites www.snopes.com and www.truthorfiction.com — both dedicated to debunking rumors and urban myths — put this information squarely in the "rumor" category.

The original rumor that plastic in microwaves is dangerous was apparently started after a doctor — not affiliated with any U.S. research organization — claimed on a local TV station that dioxin would leach out of plastic and into food in the microwave. This statement took on a life of its own as it was passed by word of mouth and from e-mail to e-mail. Few people bothered to ask where this sensational information came from. Even fewer people took the time to find out that food-grade plastics — including plastic wrap — do not contain dioxin.

Plastics do contain other chemicals that might leach into foods during microwaving, but according to the Food and Drug Administration, the amounts are minimal and well within its safety requirements.

So, don't worry too much about the Great Plastic Debate. Reusable food-grade plastics (like storage containers) are just fine. Here's more information, from the FDA:

• Plastic wrap, wax paper, parchment and paper towels are safe to use. They should be placed loosely over the food; a 1-inch space is recommended to allow steam to escape.

• Don't use carryout containers or plastic margarine tubs to reheat food; these can warp or melt.

• Containers from microwaveable meals should be discarded after use. They aren't designed for repeated heating.

• Never use aluminum foil, grocery bags, newspapers or plastic storage bags in the microwave.

I hope this eases your mind about using plastic in the microwave.

Quincy Property Up 22% Since 2002

Quincy- A recent study by a local real estate professional finds that, the median sales price of residential property in Quincy has increased 21 percent since 2002. Single family homes seem to have had the largest increase, at 29 percent, while multi-families and condos have also proved to be a wise investment, on average appreciating 22 and 20 percent respectively. Although many are skeptical that home prices will continue to rise, 'recent research conducted by the National Association of REALTORS® suggests that predictions of a severe correction in home prices locally are largely unfounded. The expectation is that home prices will continue to climb, albeit more modestly, than in recent years.'

Quincy Presidents vs. North Quincy Red Raiders

Presidents Can Still Finish Second In League With Seventh Straight Win In Holiday Game

Quincy's Only Focus: North Quincy Raiders

By CHRIS POISSON

The Quincy High School football team had aspirations of returning to the top echelon of the Atlantic Coast League and capturing the championship this season.

Although they strayed with an early season loss to Plymouth North, the Presidents got back on track with huge victories at Plymouth South and Dennis-Yarmouth to remain in the hunt for a possible piece of the hardware.

But they were derailed with a miserable and deflating 14-0 loss at Sandwich that knocked them out of contention.

Can Quincy put its league title shortcoming in the past and shift its attention to tomorrow's 73rd annual Thanksgiving Day game against North Quincy?

"They already have put it behind them," said head coach Bob Noble. "We talked about it at the time. At this point it doesn't matter. There's nothing you can do about it so you just forget it and concentrate on what needs to get done for Thanksgiving.

"We can still end up finishing second in the league. If we're fortunate to win on Thanksgiving and Plymouth North beats Plymouth South, we end up 6-2 and second in the league. It's better than finishing last."

The Presidents (5-4 overall) are heavy favorites again this year and carry impressive holiday credentials. They've feasted on the Red Raiders (2-8), having won a series record six straight and 10 of the past 11 Turkey games.

"I want to win again and keep improving on the record," Noble said. "Our attitude is to go out and win the game like we always have. Our approach going into the seventh straight is the same as it was going into the first game. Our intention is to win the game."

Quincy should be in a position to win if it can get senior captain Everton DeCastro and its running game clicking again. The tailback, held in check by an improved Sandwich squad, has rushed for close to 1,100 yards and eight touchdowns to become an all-star and the top vote-getter at his position.

"We have a pretty good running back this year and I think we're going to take advantage of him as well," Noble said.

Much of DeCastro's success can be attributed to a big, strong, experienced offensive line, which features an all-star, four captains and three multiple-year starters.

The men up front are senior all-star captain and two-year starter Chris Pratt (6-0, 215) at left tackle, senior captain and three-year starter D.J. Andrews (5-11, 235) at left guard, senior captain and three-year starter Pat Stroud (6-0, 315) at center, senior captain Dan Neenan (5-10, 190) at right guard and junior Mark Cugini (5-11, 250) at right tackle.

Junior quarterback Matt Boyle, last year's Thanksgiving hero with two rushing TDs and a passing TD, has had a strong season in his first full year as a starter. He's thrown five TD passes and rushed for two more.

Boyle has a solid stable of starting receivers in senior first-year player Matt Giordani (three TD receptions), senior captain Chris Ryan-MacDonald, junior Tom Hazelhurst and junior Camillo Arredondo.

Defensively, the Presidents will center their attention on North Quincy senior all-star tailback Chris Tufo,

Quincy, North Football Represented On Atlantic Coast All-Star Team

Five local high school boys were named to the Atlantic Coast League all-star football team for their play this season.

Quincy had four representatives, the most since it joined the league in 2001. Senior tailback Everton DeCastro and senior defensive end D.J. Andrews racked up the most votes at their positions.

They were joined by senior left tackle Chris Pratt and senior nose tackle Pat Stroud, who has also been nominated by the league for the Shriner's all-star game.

Representing North Quincy was senior tailback Chris Tufo, giving the city of Quincy two of the top three running backs in the league.

Quincy junior Tom Hazelhurst and North Quincy senior Benson Luc were honorable mentions.

Quincy Presidents vs. North Quincy Red Raiders

Raiders Seek First Holiday Victory In 7 Years

A Win Would Make North Quincy's Season

By CHRIS POISSON

Like every team in the beginning of September, the North Quincy High School football team viewed this season with excitement.

The Red Raiders, although still rebuilding, were hopeful of engineering a winning campaign in 2005.

But a disheartening loss in the season opener to a beatable Boston Latin squad snowballed to seven frustrating losses to begin the season.

Along the way, two players left the team and, off the field, two players had to deal with personal tragedy with the death of their fathers.

North Quincy endured those circumstances, winning back-to-back games on the road against Somerville and Nauset to lift its spirits.

Now it turns the page to tomorrow morning's 73rd annual Thanksgiving Day game to try to finish the season the way it envisioned from the start.

"Things didn't go our way at the beginning of the season," said second-year head coach Bill Shaughnessy. "The loss against Boston Latin was a tough one and then we lost the next game and the next. And then the kids were like we put all this effort into it, what's going on.

"It was frustrating. A couple kids quit. A lot of personal things have happened. Kudos to the players and seniors who've been hanging in there since day one. It would be a great thing for them, especially the seniors, to go out with a victory and feel good about themselves."

The Red Raiders are coming off their poorest performance of the season, a 28-0 home loss to Plymouth South. They turned the ball over three times on their first four possessions, resulting in two easy touchdowns.

Turnovers and mental breakdowns have haunted the them all season and those are things they'll need to hide in the closet to have a shot at upsetting a very strong Quincy club.

"I told the kids if we play like we did against Plymouth South, we're going to be in big trouble," Shaughnessy said. "It was our worst game this year. In the other games they left everything out on the field and seemed to be more focused. Plymouth South was a different story. They seemed to be elsewhere. Hopefully, we got that out of our system."

Offensively, the Red Raiders will have their hands full against Quincy's strong defensive unit, which along the front line boasts two all-stars in seniors D.J. Andrews and Pat Stroud and an honorable mention in junior linebacker Tom Hazelhurst.

North Quincy is powered by its running game, anchored by senior bruising tailback Chris Tufo. The Atlantic Coast League all-star has rushed for more than 600 yards and four touchdowns, despite missing two games.

The Red Raiders can also strike through the air. Senior quarterback Mike O'Mahony, who lost his father in the middle of the season, is a capable passer with a strong arm. He has an explosive wideout in senior Benson Luc, an honorable mention to the ACL all-star team with four TD receptions. His other target is junior Dave Guerriero (two TDs).

The men in the trenches are junior tackles Ben Johnson and Phil Kelly, senior guard and captain Carlos Ochoa, junior guard John Benoit and senior center Mike Regan.

"We're scoring some touchdowns," Shaughnessy said. "We're putting some points on the board compared to last year. We need to control their two big defensive guys, Pat Stroud and D.J.

North Quincy's Luc, Tufo Quincy's DeCastro Top Scorers

A familiar face and two newcomers occupy the top spots for each school in the scoring leaders' department in 2005.

Quincy captain Everton DeCastro, the team's leading scorer last year, heads the list for both schools heading into tomorrow's 72nd annual Thanksgiving Day game.

The senior tailback has totaled 69 points, rushing for eight touchdowns and a pair of two-point conversions, returning a fumble for another score while also booting 11 extra points.

Senior first-year wideout Matt Giordani follows with three TD receptions for 18 points and junior quarterback Matt Boyle has rushed for two scores for 12 points.

Senior captain Chris Ryan-MacDonald and junior Tom Hazelhurst each have a TD reception and captain Dan Neenan has a blocked punt for a TD to round out the scoring with six points apiece.

For North Quincy, senior wideout Benson Luc has four TD receptions and senior tailback Chris Tufo has four rushing TDs to lead the team with 24 points apiece.

Junior wideout Dave Guerriero has two TD receptions and a two-point conversion for 14 points and junior tailback James Bleiler has two TD runs for 12 points.

Senior quarterback Mike O'Mahony has rushed for a TD and senior Kyle Costa kicked six extra points to close out the scoring.

Winning Record For Quincy Against Common Opponents

The Quincy and North Quincy high school football teams had seven common opponents this season as both squads played in the Atlantic Coast League.

The Presidents posted a 5-2 mark in those contests while the Red Raiders totaled a 1-6 record.

They both beat winless Nauset and they both lost to undefeated Plymouth North and Sandwich.

Fans may look at the remaining four opponents to see who has an edge in tomorrow's showdown.

Quincy pulled out close wins over Plymouth South (15-14), Whitman-Hanson (14-10) and Dennis-Yarmouth (19-17) and rolled to a victory over Falmouth (21-8).

North Quincy, on the other hand, lost to all four of those teams by a combined score of 113-33.

who's fully recovered from a hamstring injury that kept him out of the lineup for two games.

Quincy's heralded defensive line will be given that task. Playing up front are all-star tackles Stroud and Andrews and ends Pratt and senior Mike Neenan. Linebackers are Hazelhurst, an honorable mention to the all-star team, Arredondo and Dan Neenan.

"Tufo is a pretty tough runner," Noble said. "You have to get to him early before he gets going. Once he gets into the secondary he becomes even more effective. We have some pretty big bruising guys. I would like to think he won't wear us down. I'd like to think we can wear him down. We'll see. He's definitely a player we have to watch. If we stop Chris Tufo we'll do a pretty good job of containing them."

The defensive backfield needs to be on its heels, too, as the Red Raiders have a capable quarterback in senior Mike O'Mahony and two skilled receivers in junior Dave Guerriero and senior Benson Luc, an honorable mention all-star.

"O'Mahony has thrown the ball pretty good, particularly over the second half of the season," Noble said. "You have to pay attention to him throwing the ball either to Guerriero or Luc. Luc's pretty fast. You have to pay attention to him. You can't ignore him. He's definitely their play-maker, both as a pass receiver and kick returner."

Although it has already set the series record for consecutive victories, Quincy is plenty motivated to extend its dominance another year. And it won't be overlooking North Quincy as it learned from the Sandwich game that it's not good enough to just show up and win.

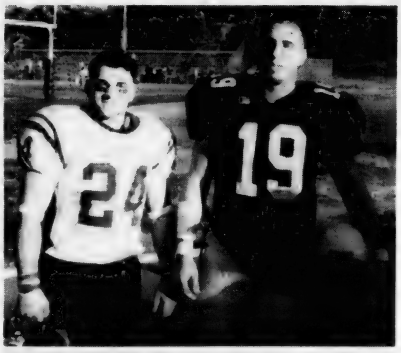
"We can't go out like we did against Sandwich," Noble said. "We didn't come to play. That's the first time all year I can say that. We just didn't have it and unfortunately it cost us. I find it very hard to believe we wouldn't be ready to play on Thanksgiving. North has won two out of their last three games and you certainly can't underestimate them, not that we ever would.

"If we're fortunate enough to prolong our good fortune as far as Thanksgiving, so be it. I'm not going to lie, it's nice. It does matter. It matters to all of us. Just like I'm sure it matters deeply to them that they want to change that."

Curry's Kris Kamborian And Westfield State's Mike Lorenzano

Best Friends, Former QHS Stars Battle It Out One Last Time

Best friends Kris Kamborian and Mike Lorenzano, former Quincy High School football players and 2002 graduates, played against each other for the last time as their colleges finished off the regular season.



In their senior season, Kamborian and Curry College overcame Lorenzano and Westfield State College in a 31-21 victory on Nov. 5. Lorenzano led the Owls at quarterback while Kamborian played across from him at outside linebacker.

During the game, Lorenzano set a school record with a 90-yard touchdown pass to wide receiver B.J. Holleran. This season, Lorenzano threw for 1,169 yards and six touchdowns.

On a side note, Holleran is a North Quincy High graduate and his brother, Kevin, is the Curry quarterback and also a North Quincy graduate.

Kamborian had two solo tackles and a fumble recovery in the victory. This season, he totaled 17 tackles, one caused fumble, two fumble recoveries, one pass breakup, one blocked extra point, one blocked field goal and one interception.

A week later, Curry captured its third straight New England Football Conference championship with a 17-14 double overtime win over Fitchburg State College.

Both Kamborian and Lorenzano capped off their football careers on a high note.

Kamborian will graduate in May with a degree in criminal justice and a minor in psychology. He was on the Dean's List five out of his six semesters to this point and became a member of the Alexander Graham Bell Honor Society which requires a grade-point average of 3.5 or higher.

He has also been a member of the NEFC All Academic Team since his sophomore year and has been nominated this year by head coach Steve Nelson to receive All Academic for the conference. He plans to attend graduate school to obtain a master's degree in criminal justice and hopes to pursue a career in law enforcement as his uncles William and Michael Draicchio have. He also hopes to coach at some point.

Lorenzano will graduate in May with a degree in movement science with a concentration in physical education. He hopes to teach and coach football at the high school level.

The two have been best friends since kindergarten and teammates on the field for eight years before becoming college opponents in 2002.

They both attended St. Joseph's Middle School in Quincy Point and began their long football run in fifth grade playing for the Quincy Point Panthers. After playing four years under the green and gold, the two moved on to play at Quincy High School where both captained their freshman team in 1998.

Kamborian and Lorenzano, three-year varsity starters for Quincy, became two of a kind with Lorenzano leading the team at quarterback and Kamborian taking his hand-offs and receiving skills at halfback.

In 2001, Lorenzano captained the Presidents his senior year and earned Thanksgiving Day Offensive MVP honors while Kamborian was named second team Atlantic Coast League All-Star and Offensive MVP of the Year. He was also a standout on the defensive side of the ball as a three-year starting outside linebacker.

Neither Kamborian nor Lorenzano lost on Thanksgiving to North Quincy and played in all the games from 1999-2001. During their senior season, they accounted for the Presidents' first winning record since 1997. Under head coach Bob Noble, they finished with a 5-4-1 record and beat North Quincy, 12-7, in their final game.

Although their football careers have ended, their friendship will remain forever as will their tradition of cheering on Quincy's blue and white with former teammates and friends each Thanksgiving game.

Britney Papile Participates In 'Best' Basketball Tourney

North Quincy High School junior Britney Papile participated in the recent "Best of the Best" basketball tournament at UMass-Boston.

The tournament featured 50 of the top seniors and 30 of the top juniors in the states of Massachusetts, Rhode Island and New Hampshire.

Papile was the only Quincy girl selected. Players were invited by recommendations from local area high school, AAU and college coaches.

She is the daughter of Leo M. Papile, director of basketball operations for the Boston Celtics and 1971 North Quincy graduate.

She is also the granddaughter of the late Leo Q. Papile, longtime police detective and 1942 Quincy graduate and member of the football hall of fame, and the great-granddaughter of the late Raffael and Lucia Papile who immigrated to Quincy from Italy around 1900.

Andrews. If we play mistake-free football, I think we'll be OK.

"We have Chris Tufo, who is a great runner, a league all-star, and Benson Luc is an honorable mention. Those are two first-year players that we didn't have and they've done some good things for us. Mike O'Mahony has done a great job for us on the football field. He's been through a tough time and I appreciate and respect what he has done."

Defensively, the Red Raiders have given up over 20 points per game and will need to find a way to contain Quincy's 1,000-yard rusher, senior captain Everton DeCastro. They'll also have to watch out for junior quarterback Matt Boyle, who burnt them last year by running for two scores and passing for another.

"It's a similar team to last year," Shaughnessy said. "They have an exciting offense. Their running back, DeCastro, and their quarterback, Boyle, are very good players. I'm sure they'll throw a couple of wrinkles in there. They're going to throw a curve ball at us and see if we're prepared for it. And we'll do the same to them."

North Quincy's base defense is a 5-2. Up front are seniors Rob Connell and Anthony Walsh and junior Terrance Sibley. Linebackers are seniors Chris Tufo, Akil Benjamin, Anthony Black and Jade Pina. In the backfield are seniors Steve Spring and Kevin Adams and juniors Shaun McBrien, James Bleiler and Guerriero.

"They have decent football players and some good-sized kids and they're going to come right at us," he added. "We just have to be ready to play and play them tough and see what happens. We're still playing aggressive defense. We need to be prepared mentally."

The Red Raiders have had their share of adversity this season and a win tomorrow would do wonders. They won't be remembered as the 2-8 team of the first two months, but as the team that finally snatched the Turkey trophy away from the Presidents after their record six-year run.

"You can't change anything that happened in the past," Shaughnessy said. "The tradition here between Quincy and North is tremendous. I told the seniors, 'This is the game you're going to remember. Quincy has the momentum so what a way to go out. This is your last game and you can shut a lot of people up by winning this football game. It's something you guys have been working for.'"

By CHRIS POISSON

One way head coach Jim Rendle measures a successful season for his North Quincy High School girls' volleyball team is if it reaches the 20-win plateau.

The 2005 Red Raiders, not overly talented and expected to be a rebuilding group, surpassed that mark by one game (21-5 overall record) when it captured the Division 1 Central East sectional championship.

That accomplishment earned them a ticket to last Tuesday's state semifinals at Mansfield, where they were knocked out, 3-0, by Barnstable, their rivals the past decade and the premier program in the state.

"We have a very difficult schedule," Rendle said. "Any time a team gets 20 wins, with our schedule, it's a special year for us. Those are the teams that have excelled. I go by that more than anything else."

"I can't say I'm surprised about our season, but I'm pleased," he added. "We always have high expectations. We don't always reach those expectations, but we did this year. We're not overpowering or the most talented; we're just hard-working, blue collar kids."

Last Saturday, Barnstable won its 74th straight match and its third straight state championship. The last time it lost came in 2002 when the Red Raiders ousted them in the state semifinals on their way to their second state title in a row.

Barnstable handed North Quincy with ease in the first playoff meeting between them since '02, winning 25-15, 25-13 and 25-15.

"They have a phenomenal program down there," Rendle said. "We were overmatched. They had the height and experience. They had five girls that were as big or bigger than us. They were skilled enough to put the ball where they wanted to. We had some stretches where we were competitive, but they consistently had stretches where they dominated and we never recovered."

Senior captain and middle hitter Erin Connolly paced the offense with 15 kills and five blocks and sophomore middle hitter Virginia Wong added six kills and three blocks. Junior setter Marie Della Croce had five aces and 13 assists.

Senior outside hitter Matrida Neli provided a spark off the bench in the final game with two kills and several great digs.

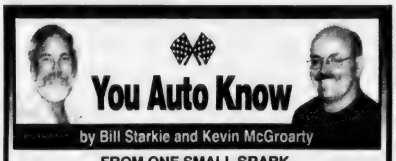
"It was a tough match," Rendle said. "It should've been the state finals, but we drew them in the semis. We came a long way this year. Erin Connolly played at an extremely high level. The lead came from her and the others tried to keep pace. Every one contributed at times. We had a total team effort and that's what you need in this sport."

The Series Record:

Quincy 39, North 28
5 Ties In 72 Games

Entering tomorrow's 73rd annual Thanksgiving Day game, Quincy High School holds the edge with a 39-28-5 series record.

The contests in 1934, 1937, 1940 and 1983 were scoreless affairs, while the 55th meeting in 1987 ended in a 14-14 stalemate.



The series was last deadlocked at 7-7-3 going into the 1950 game.

The Presidents have won a record six straight Turkey Day games and 10 of the last 11.

The Red Raiders will be trying to rebound after last year's 27-0 loss.

FROM ONE SMALL SPARK

Few, if any, engine components provide more bang for the buck than the spark plug. It provides an ignition source for the highly compressed air/fuel mixture at the top of the compression stroke inside the combustion chamber. The spark plug accomplishes its task by providing a carefully defined air gap between a center electrode and a ground electrode. When electrical energy from the coil is discharged into the spark plug, an electrical spark fills the gap. This spark ignites a small area of the air/fuel mixture near the spark plug, and the resultant flame spreads throughout the combustion chamber, creating enormous pressure that forces the piston downward. This force is transmitted through the crankshaft to the wheels, propelling the vehicle.

If you are noticing sluggish performance in acceleration, or poor starting tendencies for your automobile if could be your spark plugs. At LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO, not only can we look at the spark plugs you currently have installed, but we can change them if necessary. SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS by Andrea Wyatt M.S.S., C.S.C.S.

FROM START TO FITNESS

Exercising With Osteoarthritis

Q. My friends and I have decided to start exercising together. There are two of us in the group who have osteoarthritis. Is it safe for us to exercise with arthritis? If so, are there certain exercises we should avoid?

A. Research suggests that approximately 20 million people are dealing with osteoarthritis. The pain, stiffness and loss of range of motion that happens over time is caused by the deterioration of cartilage, the material that lines the joints.

This breakdown in cartilage causes the joints to rub together, possibly causing mild to severe pain. Most often found in weight-bearing joints, the hands and spine, symptoms of osteoarthritis can disrupt everyday activities.

Genetics, time and body weight all play a role in the development of osteoarthritis. Although you cannot change your genetics, maintaining the proper body weight can help prevent repeated, unwanted wear and tear on joint cartilage, such as in the knees.

Dr. John Mamana, founder of Health Sciences, Inc., states that: "Running and weight-bearing exercises are most likely to put the participant at a higher risk. That's because highly repetitive, stressful exercising like running tends to wear down the protective cartilage in the joint more quickly than normal wear and tear. Some studies suggest that certain people who already have slight abnormalities in their joints and their joint alignment make up the large majority of individuals susceptible to this process.

"However, the vast number of middle-aged and older individuals with primary osteoarthritis need to exercise to reduce the impact of osteoarthritis on their lives. Regular exercise is essential to this group to maintain their ideal body weights. Moderate exercise is also essential to build strong muscles to support the joints and increase both endurance and flexibility."

With this in mind, let your body be your guide. Listen to the responses your body is having to exercise, such as inflammation, pain and stiffness. Do not push through discomfort in order to keep up with your friends. Understand that you may need to modify certain exercises to fit your individual fitness needs.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program. American Cancer Society Helps Area Cancer Patients

'Look Good, Feel Better' Program Dec. 5

The American Cancer Society will hold a "Look Good . . . Feel Better" session Monday, Dec. 5 from 6 to 8 p.m. at the South Suburban Oncology Center, 700 Congress St., Quincy.

The program is designed to help patients maintain their personal appearance while undergoing treatment for cancer.

The free program features cosmetologists leading group sessions, providing tips and practical techniques for coping with hair loss and changes in the skin that often result from chemotherapy or radiation therapy.

To pre-register, call Colleen Whitehouse at 617-376-6435. For additional information, call 1-800-ACS-2345

Look Good...Feel Better offers free, one-time beauty consultations with a licensed cosmetologist or aesthetician to women who are currently undergoing cancer treatment.

"Look Good...Feel Better is as much about improving and maintaining self-image and confidence as it is about appearance " said Gayle Bagley, American Cancer Society Area Director for Cancer Control.

"Patients enjoy the opportunity to spend time in a relaxed, non-medical setting with others in the same situation. And the free make-up and instruction from professionals helps them look and feel better."

The American Cancer Society estimates that approximately 662,870 American women will develop some form of cancer this year. The good news is that, thanks to advances in medicine, the five-year relative survival rate of all cancers is 65 percent. A variety of patient services, support programs and comprehensive cancer information are available through the Society's toll free 1-800-ACS-2345 number, which operates 24 hours a day, seven days a week, and its Web site at www.cancer.org.

Dispelling Common Cold And Flu Myths

By LISA CHAVIS

(NAPS) - According to the U.S. Food & Drug Administration, Americans suffer from approximately one billion colds annually, making it the most common ailment in the country.

As many as half of all Americans are diagnosed with the flu each year.

Consumers may hear many common myths about colds and influenza. However, those myths can result in misdiagnosis, miscommunication and mistreatment. Armed with the proper information about the differences between the two illnesses and the appropriate treatments for each, many people would stand a better chance of winning the common cold war.

Here are some of the myths and truths about colds and the flu:

Myth: The flu shot causes the flu. The flu shot vaccine is made from inactive virus, which means you cannot catch the flu from the vaccine.

Myth: Antibiotics should be used to treat the flu. The over-prescribing of antibiotics has the potential to be a global health care crisis. Disease-causing bacteria are quickly becoming resistant to many of these drugs. In addition, influenza is a viral infection and does not respond to antibiotics.

Myth: Chicken soup and herbal remedies are great treatments for cold and flu. While chicken soup may make you feel better psychologically, it has never been clinically proven to be effective in treating a cold or the flu. Appropriate treatments include plenty of fluids – including soup – and lots of rest. A variety of over-the-counter medications such as decongestants, expectorants and antihistamines are available to relieve cold and flu symptoms.

Myth: You can catch a cold from going outside in cold weather. With apologies to grandmothers across the country, you cannot catch a cold from going outside without a jacket during the colder months. However, you can catch a cold from other people who are infect through touching common surfaces or face-to-face contact.

For more information about cold and flu season, visit www.medco.com.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

DO YOUR TEETH NEED SHAPING UP?

Even slight to moderate overlapping, rotation, or unevenness of the front teeth can detract from your smile. Fortunately, in certain select cases, the appearance of your top and bottom teeth can be improved by recontouring the enamel. The top and bottom incisors and canine teeth can be routinely altered in this manner. This usually painless procedure involves removing, recontouring, and repolishing the enamel to produce a more uniform and natural appearance. Many times, recontouring in this manner is all that is required to significantly improve your smile. If, on the other hand, the poor alignment is more pronounced, it might be done in conjunction with bonding, the cosmetic technique by which tooth-colored resin is added to the tooth surface.

The importance of an attractive smile should not be underestimated. Your personal satisfaction with your oral health and appearance is important. We are a highly qualified and experienced team of professionals – and we're here to help you make the most of your smile. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we are proud of our staff – a staff dedicated to helping you look and feel better. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Enamel recontouring and/or bonding may eliminate the need for orthodontic treatment in some cases.

'Tis The Season' Christmas CD To Benefit Homeless Kids

Quincy Point Congregational Church has produced a Christmas CD, 'Tis the Season, a Quincy Christmas to raise awareness and funding for the Quincy Public Schools' Project Access. Project Access provides special services to homeless children to help them succeed in school.

Bethany Congregational Church, Houghs Neck Congregational Church, Quincy Point Congregational Church and St. Joseph's Catholic Church all contributed volunteers to create a 52-voice choir that sang three religious Christmas songs.

Paul A. Thistle, director of Music and organist at Quincy Point Congregational Church, performed playing the new Rodgers 950B three manual digital organ.

Virginia Vickery directed the St. Joseph's Youth Choir with Fr. Vincent Doolan accompanying them on guitar.

Kristin Huberdeau and Bulent Guneralp, local vocalists, provided several solo pieces.

John Robie, the Quincy Point Congregational Church director of Education and Youth, and Susan Dolan, both Marshfield residents, sang and played guitar.

Peter Kolson, former Ward 1 city councillor, sang "A Marshmallow World." Matthew McArthur and Dr.

Curtis W. Penney performed two pieces on the Great Highland Bagpipes. Tom Clasby, Jr. from Quincy's Council on Aging and Co-owner of the Cottage Tavern, performed two Irish tunes accompanied by Mark J. Carey on guitar. Paul Huberdeau of Weymouth accompanied several soloists on piano.

Nancy A. Santry, a well-known Quincy Photographer generously donated the cover photo: "Marina Bay Boardwalk in Winter." CD graphics and design were generously provided by Kimberly Allison of Wilmer Cutler Pickering Hale and Dorr.

David Messier and Andre Cantave provided sound engineering for Same Sky Productions of Bridgewater. Dana J. White provided specialized mastering.

ADA, affiliated with MMIMBIT of Framingham produced the CD.

The CD project to raise awareness and funding for Project Access was the brainchild of Rev. Ann G. Suzedell, pastor, and Lynne Penney, Chair of the Music Committee, both at Quincy Point Congregational Church.

The CD costs $15 and can be purchased from Quincy Point Congregational Church, 444 Washington St. Quincy, MA 02169 Tel: 617/773-6424; Roseann's Floral and Gift Shop, 1091 Hancock St., Quincy; The Perm Solution at 1732 Ocean St., Marshfield; The Bookstore at Eastern Nazarene College, 23 E. Elm Ave., Quincy; BodyFit 37 Billings Rd.

Sales begin at the social hour after the ecumenical Thanksgiving service at 7:30 p.m. on Tuesday.

Also at the service, all present from Bethany Congregational Church, Houghs Neck Congregational Church, St. Joseph's Church and Quincy Point Congregational Church who sang music recorded for the new CD 'Tis the Season, a Quincy Christmas will be thanked and recognized.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

It is not too early to begin thinking about the things for which we are thankful... the things we will include in our blessings on Thanksgiving Day. A lot of people include the big things ... things like peace, freedom, sufficient food, clothing and shelter, good health for friends and loved ones.

Yet, we think it important that we also include some of the smaller gifts we receive during the year ... the friendly greetings from both acquaintances and stranger ... visits we've had from relatives, friends and new neighbors ... thanks to those who have taught our children... The list is endless ...

On Thanksgiving Day, most of us will sit down before a food-laden table and we will express our gratitude for the bounties and blessings we enjoy BUT ...

Let us not forget that there are some out there who do not share in these blessings and bounties... If there is a way you can improve their situation, then your own Thanksgiving Day will be more complete... HAPPY THANKSGIVING .. .

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) This year, instead of jumping into the whole holiday prep scene, move in a little at a time. You'll appreciate the sense of control you're more likely to enjoy.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) The separation between the Bovine's head and heart is never as far apart as it seems. Both senses work best when they come out of logic and honesty.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) The best way to keep those pre-holiday pressures under control is to just say no to taking on new tasks while you're still trying to work with a heap of others.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) News means a change might be on its way, but what does it hold? Don't just ask questions; make sure you get answers you can trust.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Old friends and new have one thing in common: Both your longtime and newly minted pals have much wisdom to impart.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) With time running out, this is a good time for you to show 'em all what those Virgo super-organizational skills can do.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Librans and holidays are made for each other, especially if children and animals are going to be part of your joyous season.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Time is getting too short to allow a spat to taint the holiday season. Restart your relationship and reschedule holiday fun times.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Seeking advice is laudable. You might learn far more than you thought you could. Stay with it.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Continuing to assess changes works toward your getting your new project up and ready. Trusted colleagues remain ready to help.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) That new situation needs a lot of attention, but it's worth it. This is a very good time for you to involve the arts in what you do.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) It might be a good idea to slow your hectic holiday pace so that you don't rush past what — or who — you're hoping to rush toward.

BORN THIS WEEK: Others pick up on your confidence in yourself, which inspires others to believe in you and your special gifts.

Two Rooming Houses New Affordable Housing

By MIKAELA SLANEY

Quincy has two new affordable housing units, accommodating 22 people, with the renovation of two Spear St. rooming houses.

A ribbon cutting was held at the site at 50 Spear St. last Thursday.

Rent for these rooms averages $115 per week. There are five or six single capacity rooms per floor. Each room includes furniture and a private refrigerator. There are two communal bathrooms per floor, and one communal kitchen. Both rooming houses are wheelchair accessible. Participating in the ceremony was Mayor William Phelan, Mark Winkeller, Executive Director of Caritas Communities, Inc., Jane Gumbel, Director of Massachusetts Department of Housing and Community Development, Joseph Flatley, President of Massachusetts Housing Investment Corporation, Brad Day, Manager of Supported Housing Programs and Community Economic Development Assistance Corporation, Julie Connelly, SVP and Director of Community Relations of Citizens Bank of Massachusetts, and Peter Macero, VP of Commercial Real Estate of Citizens Bank of Massachusetts.

The opening was part of a collaboration between Caritas Communities, Inc., of Braintree, the state of MA with the Planning Department of the City of Quincy, and the assistance of local and private industries.

The completion of the Quincy unit was attributed to Caritas' "strength, capacity and ability to follow through," said Joe Flatly, President of the Massachusetts Housing Investment Corporation.

According to "Out of Reach 2003," a national study conducted by the national low-income housing coalition, Massachusetts, Connecticut and New Hampshire were ranked the top ten "least affordable states" based on housing costs.

Providing a "safe atmosphere, a clean atmosphere, an opportunity for somebody to get a leg up," said Phelan, "is probably the number one issue facing our state today."

Funding for the project was part of the Citizens Housing Bank Loan Program, a below-market construction loan of $200 million that provides nonprofit developers with the funding to create new affordable housing units.

Up to 1,200 units of housing are expected to be created from this program in Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Hampshire, and Rhode Island.

The opening was described as part of one of the "fastest openings ever done," said Mark Wingkeller, Executive Director of Caritas Communities, Inc.

"We've had a lot of help with the state. We're pretty thrilled about how it's working out," said Phelan.

Affordable Housing For Seniors

Council Approves Tax Break For Squantum Gardens

By MIKAELA SLANEY

The Ordinance Committee of the City Council Monday unanimously approved a Tax Incentive Financing, (TIF) agreement, for the construction of an affordable housing complex for seniors in Squantum Gardens, North Quincy.

The City Council will vote to approve the TIF on the Dec. 5th meeting.

The TIF allows the developers a 5 year tax break, whereas building taxes will remain at the current value of the land, after the value of the land increases.

The TIF is a result of negotiation by Mayor William J. Phelan and Thomas Largy, Executive Secretary to the mayor.

The 15 1/2 acre site will include two, four-story wood frame structures, totaling 223 rentable apartments, with 28 units per floor. 75 percent of the apartments will be single room, while the remainders will be two bedroom.

The complex will adhere to the needs of seniors, as well as extremely disabled adults, including those with mental retardation.

"I'd like to thank you personally... this has been a dream of my husband and I," said Julie McCarthy, a Quincy resident and mother to a disabled son.

"For many of you it's been a labor of love," said Ward 6 Councillor Alicia Gardner. The complex is "desperately needed, especially in the North end of our city. I truly hope that when the time comes, my fellow councillors agree," she said.

Construction above ground has not yet taken place.

The architects are on the verge of receiving their building permit, and approval for the TIF expected in the next couple weeks, according to Vin Norton, architect for John M. Sheskey and Associates.

At Merrymount Park

World War II Statue Dedication Dec. 7

The city's World War II statue and memorial will be dedicated in its permanent location Wednesday, Dec. 7, at 1 p.m. in Merrymount Park.

The memorial will feature the statue and the more than 500 bricks and granite-pavers that were purchased over the past six years. The bricks and granite-pavers are engraved with the names of World War II veterans.

The memorial will be dedicated in the newly-renovated portion of Upper Merrymount Park, near the intersection of Hancock Street and Merrymount Parkway. The state recently finished a major overhaul of the intersection, clearing the way for the creation of the memorial site.

"This will be a proud day for the City of Quincy," said Mayor William Phelan. "We owe a tremendous debt of gratitude to our veterans and we hope to perpetuate their memory with this beautiful park. Our World War II veterans and their families have waited patiently for the completion of this project and I hope we create a place that captures our appreciation and recognizes their tremendous service and sacrifice."

All of the bricks and granite-pavers purchased before Oct. 1 will be engraved and included in the memorial at the time of the dedication. Memorial bricks and pavers are still available for purchase for installation in the spring.

The installation of the bricks is being performed gratis by the South Shore Building Trades Council.

"I want to thank the South Shore Building Trades Council for their work in making this possible," Phelan said. "Their donation of labor is a credit to the quality of their organization and its leadership."

'Everyone Helping Everyone'

First Discounted Venezuelan Oil Delivered To N. Quincy

By MIKAELA SLANEY

Linda Kelly, of 11 Wilson Court, Quincy, humbly welcomed a media frenzy on her lawn, as she became the first recipient in a first-in-the-nation CITGO commitment to deliver the first 200 gallons, of 12 million gallons of discounted Venezuelan fuel, to needy Massachusetts families.

Congressman Bill Delahunt personally carried the oil hose from the truck to the Kelly home with the help of Venezuelan Ambassador Bernardo Alvarez, CITGO President Felix Rodrigues, Joseph Kennedy II of Citizens Energy Corp. and former Quincy City Councillor Larry Chretien, executive director of the Massachusetts Energy Consumers Alliance.

The commitment was realized in part through the collaboration of Congressman Delahunt and the Venezuelan national oil company, Petroleos de Venezuela SA, which was referred to Delahunt by Venezuelan President, Hugo Chavez.

The plan for discounted oil was hatched in a meeting between with Chavez and Delahunt in reaction to rising fuel costs that leapt 50 percent over last year, and the lowest government funding for LIHEAP, a fuel assistance program, since 1998.

With some sacrifice in profits by the Venezuelan government, and CITGO, it's American oil distributer, oil for needy Massachusetts families will be discounted at 40 percent.

For low-income households, this reduction could alleviate the concerns of families who would otherwise have to make the "unacceptable choice" between heating their homes this winter, or paying for food, healthcare or rent, said Delehunt.

According to Joe Kennedy, "Federal Government made billions of dollars on royalty payments" due to increases in oil prices this year, but when asked to help low-income families with heating, government responded to the needs of families like the Kelly's with "sorry, there's no money in the till." Ironically, families with big homes in other parts of the country, "get it in tax breaks," said Kennedy.

Kennedy referred to Venezuela as our "greatest ally," for being the only country to break from OPEC, and in their native tongue, Kennedy thanked Venezuela represented at the event by Ambassador Bernardo Alvarez.

Kennedy wrote to every oil company asking for "a break" for needy Massachusetts families, but "didn't hear back from any of them," he said. Any of them, that is, except for CITGO.

Delahunt recognized CITGO as a company that embodies "what good corporate citizenship is all about," and hopes that these actions "serve as a model" for other oil companies, and that in suit, other companies may "step up."

The CITGO oil is delivered and distributed statewide by nonprofit organizations Citizens Energy and the Energy Consumers Alliance. Delahunt described the collaboration as a "truly remarkable, a coalition on many levels."

In reaction to a criticism about working with Chavez despite strained relations with the Bush administration, Delahunt said, " this is about people, not about politics. Let's put aside the politics,"

A media representative asked "if it were not for politics do you think this would be happening?"

"Absolutely," he responded.

Linda Kelly, home owner and first recipient of the oil agreed. "Everyone helping everybody. That's what it's all about... I'm thrilled to host," she said.

Mrs. Kelly suffers from multiple sclerosis, and her oldest of three teenage children, an 18 year old daughter, is a Type 1 diabetic. Her husband, Paul, is a food service director for Derby Academy in Hingham.

After thanking CITGO in their efforts, Mrs. Kelly hopes this event will cause a chain reaction from other oil companies. "Spread the word," she told the media.

Phelan noted the Salvation Army's Quincy Temple Corps, founded in 1895, "continues the compassionate tradition of helping wherever there is hunger, disease, destitution and spiritual need and . . . is dedicated to the citizens of Quincy in raising much needed funds this holiday season."

The volunteers ask friends, colleagues and others to stop by and "help fill the kettle" to make the holiday season brighter for local needy families.

Major Doug Jones and Major Linda Jones, co-commanders of the Quincy Temple Corps, expressed their gratitude to the community leaders and to other volunteers manning kettles in other locations.

"We are extremely grateful and blessed by the tremendous support we receive from so many volunteers," they said.

Any group or individuals who would like to volunteer at a kettle are asked to contact the Quincy Temple Corps at 6 Baxter St., Quincy, or by calling 617-472-2345.

Leo's Special Tribute

Many people receive deserving awards and citations for their good civic deeds and public service.

But, you might say none can match the recent tribute given Leo Kelly.

Kelly, the Ward 1 city councillor, also wears another hat as chairman of the Quincy Beach and Coastal Commission.

KELLY

He has been chairman of the commission seven years which this summer published its sixth Quincy Beach Guide. Some 7,000 free copies were printed and quickly grabbed by beachgoers.

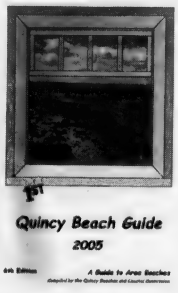
The guide contains the names and locations of the city's beaches, tide charts, information about water quality, monitoring and bacteria testing, fishing, clam digging, recreation areas, and sun safety.

And, on the lighter side such topics as "The History of the Fashionable Bathing Suite" and "Cool Sunglasses – What Looks Best on You."

Joanne Haug traces the bathing suit from the 18th century to the 1920s.

"Although sea bathing was fashionable in the 18th century, it was considered proper to keep the skin white and untouched by the sun. . .

"Ladies were known to sew weights into the hem of their smock-like bathing gowns to prevent the garment from floating up and showing her legs. Modesty ruled over fashion."



In the 1920s, she writes:

"Though matching stockings were still worn, swimwear began to shrink and more and more flesh was exposed. . .

"Vogue magazine was telling its readers that 'the newest thing for the sea is a jersey bathing suit as near a mailot as the unwritten law will permit."

Still pretty tame, though, compared to today when a couple of handkerchiefs could do the trick.

Kelly shares credit for the success of the guide with commission members: Vice Chairman Doug Gutro, Margaret Milne, Chickie Abdalallah, Kristen Awed-Ladas, Monica Ferriaro, P.J. Foley, Robert Galligan, John Haley, Joseph Joy, Michael Morad, David Murphy, Jack Nigro, Sheila O'Sullivan, Rob Stevens and Brion Wynn.

And with Mayor William Phelan and city departments such as Data Processing, Health and Park for their contributions.

But, what about that special tribute to Kelly?

It didn't come in a frame. It came in a letter from Robert W. Varney, Regional Administrator of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency who saw the guide.

"The guide has lots of good information about coastal recreation, including accurate information about water quality, monitoring and bacteria testing," Varney wrote.

He noted the improvement of the water quality at Edgewater Beach in Houghs Neck over the past three years. And attributed it partly to Quincy spending $20 million to upgrade its sewer system.

Varney suggested that next year's guide include information about improvements at Wollaston Beach, "one of EPA's Flagship Beaches."

"Protecting New England's beaches from erosion and poor water quality is important and challenging," he continued. "Beach guides such as yours not only provide information but serve to keep beaches a priority for the public and for all levels of government.

"We will be sending copies of the 2005 Quincy Beach Guide to other cities in New England with multiple beaches."

Now, about that special tribute to Kelly.

"Again, thank you for your outstanding leadership over many years to make our beaches healthy, safe and enjoyable," Varney praised Kelly.

And, now for that special tribute. Are you ready?

"We wish we could clone you!"

Two Leo Kellys!

Wow!!

Plans For New Sacred Heart Church Unveiled

This Week
57 Years Ago

Plans for the new Sacred Heart Church in North Quincy called for an English Gothic design. Weymouth granite and Indiana limestone would be used for construction stone. Donations for the building fund and for memorials were being accepted by the Rev. Irving Gifford, pastor.

The church was destroyed by fire last January.

BARGAIN CENTER EXPANSION FORCES BESTON OUT

Expansion of the Bargain Center, one of the South Shore's largest retail stores, meant the closing of Beston's gym, for years a landmark in Quincy Square.

Due to the tremendous growth of its business, the Bargain Center was forced to use the gymnasium's quarters on the third floor of the Shaw Building.

Joe Beston, the proprietor, did not know if he could find new quarters in Quincy.

Beston said, "This is not a gymnasium, it's an institution. Hundreds of thousands of boys have been trained here. I take pride in the work I've done with the boys. I'd rather send a boy off on the right foot with a healthy body and decent mind than to turn out a champion."

Among the champs that visited Beston's were Jack Dempsey, Ernie Shaaf, Jack Dowal and Jim Maloney.

NEW BUS STOPS FOR HOUGHS NECK PATRONS

As a result of new bus stops created by the city council, Houghs Neck passengers would be able to get on and off buses in front of the main bus terminal on Hancock Street.

Councillors Edna Austin and Frank Orcutt sought the corrective measure to save thousands of residents from Houghs Neck, Germantown, Adams Shore and Merrymount from having to cross Hancock and Washington streets twice a day to get East-bound buses.

MAYOR ROSS TO CLEAN UP LIQUOR AND COMIC BOOK PROBLEMS

Mayor Ross sent the city council a series of ordinances intended to clean up liquor and comic book conditions in the city.

Four ordinance amendments would give the health commissioner, building inspector, plumbing inspector and wire inspector additional powers which would enable them to make liquor establishments tow the mark in living up to regulations.

Another ordinance would provide for the establishment of a local board of censorship, composed of three citizens to assist city officials and police in handling the horror comic books and salacious literature sold in the city.

Atlantic Middle School Kicks Off Jump & Go

Scott Wahle and Paula Ebben, the morning anchor folks for CBS4, visited the Atlantic Middle School the other day to kick off the Jump Up & Go program for the 2005-06 school year.

This is the second year that Atlantic Middle has been part of the program through a Healthy Choices grant from Blue Cross/Blue Shield of Massachusetts.

More than 180 grade six students and their teachers learned the 5-2-1 message — eating at least five servings of fruit and vegetables a day, limiting daily TV time to no more than two hours, and getting a minimum of one hour of physical activity daily.

Five lucky students were selected to take part in an on stage taste testing of a variety of healthy snack foods.

Atlantic students will take part in the 5-2-1 challenge and other activities throughout the year that are made possible through the Healthy Choices grant.

FR. BILL McCARTHY

A 79th birthday celebration for Father William McCarthy will take place Tuesday, Dec. 6 from 5:30 to 8:30 p.m. at the Common Market restaurant, 97 Willard St., West Quincy.

Tickets are $25 with proceeds benefiting the Friends of the Unborn, a donation-funded Christian organization that shelters homeless pregnant women, and new mothers.

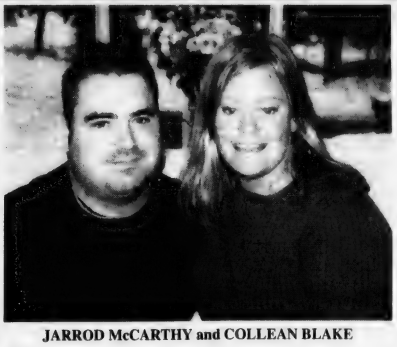
Common Market restaurant is hosting the event free-of-charge, as a "gift" that they hold annually for Father Bill. "They love him," said Marilyn Birnie, founder and director of Friends of the Unborn.

The fund-raiser was Father William's idea, and according to John Yazwinski, executive director of Father Bill's, he "always steps in and helps anyone in the community. He's a great leader in bringing people together."

Friends of the Unborn, sponsored by the Bethany Congregational Church, 18 Spear St., teaches classes in birthing, parenting, nutrition and life skills. Sister Miriam Patrice SC teaches bible study and prayer. There are also violence prevention courses which are taught with the collaboration of Dove, a Quincy shelter for abused women.

Young mothers at the center are educated at the Bethany School for Pregnant and Parenting Teens where they may take high school courses and earn their GEDs.

Women are referred to the shelters through social services, service centers and hospitals.



Tickets are available by calling 617-786-7903. Checks should be made payable to Friends of the Unborn and sent to PO Box 692246, Quincy, MA 02269.

Silver-Haired Senator Seeks Diabetic Meals

Food served at senior centers and Meals on Wheels does not consider diets needed by elderly diabetics and Sabina Stenberg is out to change all that.

"I am one of these diabetics that had it before the age of 60," said Stenberg, who is the State Senator from the Norfolk District in the silver-Haired Legislature.

"I would like to point out today how diet affects diabetics; even children who receive school meals and don't know they have it."

Stenberg said she was chairperson of the Quincy Council on Aging when the Meals on Wheels program started in 1970 "when people were not living as long."

"Today," she said, "people will be living up to 115 years of age, senior centers do not have diets for diabetics; they are served white bread, canned fruit, potatoes, spaghetti, rice and chicken with skin.

"They do not have special meals, especially for low-income people that depend on this meal and the handicapped whose meals are delivered to their homes.

"I am asking today for more money in the state and federal budgets for diabetic meals."

Package Stores Closed Monday After Christmas

Because there has been a "lot of confusion" regarding opening laws for retail stores in Massachusetts, of the day after Christmas (Monday, Dec. 26,) License Board Chairman Joseph Shea issued the following rules from the office of the attorney general.

Shea noted that on Veteran's Day, Nov. 11 some supermarkets opened, while others did not.

The law states that when Christmas Day is on a Sunday, the day after is considered a legal holiday. This year the day after Christmas is Monday, Dec. 26, and considered a legal holiday.

On that day, all package stores will be closed. Bars and restaurants can open.

Convenience stores, drug stores, gift shops, all supermarkets, auto dealerships and gas stations may open, but if they have a beer and wine license, they cannot sell any alcohol.

Special Events And Performances

Downtown Holiday Stroll To Be Held Dec. 10

Strolling Victorian carolers, special free holiday presentations at historic sites, and sales and promotions at participating businesses are among the highlights of Quincy's Downtown Holiday Stroll, Dec. 10, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Events and performances are scheduled at the Adams National Historical Park's Carriage House, the Dorothy Quincy Historical Society and at several downtown businesses, making the Holiday Stroll promises a fun and festive event for the entire family, said Jennifer Logue, executive director of Discover Quincy.

"We all hope everyone will come out and get into the holiday spirit while taking advantage of the special sales and promotions to do their holiday shopping," said Logue, who noted that the National Park Service trolley would provide free shuttle service between the Visitor Center in Presidents Place and the event locations. "

"From presentations on colonial yuletide traditions and 18th century shadow theater to holiday musical concerts and cookies and cocoa at participating businesses, there will be something for everyone to enjoy."

To help shoppers get in the spirit of the season, the Figgy Puddin' troupe of Victorian carolers will stroll up and down Hancock Street from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. During those same hours, the Quincy Art Association will host a holiday open house at its headquarters, 26 High School Ave. In addition to holiday refreshments and artist demonstrations, the association will hold a holiday art sale featuring hand-painted porcelain holiday ornaments as well as original works of art priced under $100. A drawing will also be held for a free art class of the winner's choice.

Quilter's Compass, 27B Cottage Ave., meanwhile, invites shoppers and visitors to stop by from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. for cider, cookies and to decorate their very own square to add to the "Quincy Quilt." All decorated squares will be sewn together to make a quilt representative of life in Quincy in 2005.

"This is a great way for both individuals and organizations, like churches or non-profits, to be represented on the Quincy Quilt while participating in a fun and creative project," Logue said.

Deadline For Nominations Dec. 31

Nominations Coming In For Sun 'Citizen Of Year'

Nominations are coming in for The Quincy Sun's 21st annual "Citizen of the Year" award.

Established in 1985, the award recognizes an individual for outstanding community service or a special achievement.

Last year, Francis X. McCauley was honored for a distinguished 32-year public service career built on a foundation of honesty, integrity and history.

McCauley – the only resident to serve the city in all four elected municipal offices: school committee, ward councillor, councillor at-large and mayor – was selected for the honor from among 44 nominees submitted by Quincy Sun readers. A panel of judges representing a cross-section of the community made the final decision.

Again this year, Sun readers may nominate the person they feel is the most deserving of the award.

A nomination ballot to help the selection process appears on Page ?? of this week's issue of The Quincy Sun.

After nominations close Saturday, Dec. 31, a judging panel will be selected to make the final choice from nominations submitted.

If you know someone you would like to see recognized with the 2005 award, fill out the ballot and mail it to:

The Quincy Sun
Attn: Citizen of the Year
1372 Hancock St.
Quincy, MA 02169

Nominations should be postmarked no later than Dec. 31.

Ballots can also be dropped off at The Sun office at the above address by Dec. 31.

Those submitting nominations should identify themselves. They can also attach to the ballot a letter detailing the reason for their nomination.

Nominees can be someone in elective office, a member of an appointed board, a clergy member, a teacher or school administrator, a police or firefighter, someone in the business community, a sports figure or an "unsung" neighbor or friend who has given freely of his or her time to a worthy project or cause.

Those nominated in the past are eligible to be nominated again this year. Since this is not a popularity contest, each nominee has an equal chance of being selected regardless of the number of nominations received. Anyone nominated just once has the same chance of being the award recipient.

Again, the deadline for nominations is Saturday, Dec. 31.

The name of the winner will be announced in The Quincy Sun in January.

'Cops In Shops' Aimed At Minors' Liquor Purchases

Minors will find it tougher than ever to illegally buy liquor in Quincy.

Mayor William Phelan and Chief Robert Crowley announce the Police Department has launched the Cops in Shop program as part of a community effort to fight underage purchasing of alcohol and underage drinking in the city.

The program, developed by The Century Council places undercover police officers in liquor stores and is being headed up here by Lt. Peter Turowski with the support of a $20,000 grant from the Governor's Highway Safety Bureau.

It began last week at Presidential Liquors.

"Cops in Shops is a proven program aimed at deterring and preventing minors from attempting to purchase alcohol," said Crowley. "The Quincy Police Department remains committed to continuing to work with The Century Council to create awareness and education on alcohol abuse and to support a healthy living and learning environment for our young people."

Working in collaboration with local licensees, under cover officers will be assigned to select retail locations. One officer will work inside the store while the second officer will be positioned outside the site and will also work to identify adults who attempt to procure alcohol for youth.

"What young people will not know is when. It could be any time, at any place," added Lieutenant Turowski. "Our advice is: Don't risk it. We have pretty tough laws in Massachusetts and in Quincy, and we enforce them."

The Century Council, a national not-for-profit organization funded by the nations leading distillers to fight drunk driving and underage drinking, created Cops in Shops as a unique partnership between retailers and law enforcement designed to deter youth under 21 from attempting to purchase alcohol and adults who purchase alcohol for minors.

The program places undercover officers in participating retail locations. Cops in Shops places the focus on the perpetrators- minors who try to purchase alcohol illegally. The Community Outreach project involves intensive outreach to all establishments that serve and sell alcohol. It includes training, one-on-one meetings, materials, information and evaluation.

"Restaurant, bar owners, and retailers want to live and work in safe communities, and we believe the Cops in Shops program will help us accomplish that goal," said Chris Draicchio. "It is Presidential Liquor's goal to keep alcohol out of the hands of any person under the age of 21, and to view identification of anyone who looks younger than 30 years of age."

"With students back to school in full swing and the holiday season just around the corner, there could not be a more opportune time to remind young people that underage drinking is illegal. We are thankful that the Quincy community joined us in our efforts to launch Cops in Shops today," said Pam Beer on behalf of The Century Council.

Participating retail establishments will display signs in their establishments with the message, "Under 21? Police Officers May Be Posing As Store Employees." Cops in Shops display materials are provided free-of-charge by The Century Council. In addition to the point-of-sale materials, The Century Council provides "how-to" manuals and organizational assistance.

Now students, parents and staff members are encouraged to purchase a new book to be given to a child in elementary school for the holidays.

The council is also seeking winter coats in all sizes in wearable condition to be cleaned free of charge by Anton's Cleaners and donated to those who need them.

The community service projects of the Broad Meadows Middle School are directed by Maureen McKenna and Donna Miller.

Home Decorating

(NU) - When it's time to decorate the home for family celebrations, clean windows and patio doors add to the enjoyment of the occasion.

"When it comes to window care, it's true that a little extra effort goes a long way," said Joyce Richter, Jeld-Wen windows expert. "Properly cleaning and maintaining the class in windows and doors will add to their durability – and your enjoyment – for all seasons."

For Many, Interest Rate Hikes Will Mean Higher Monthly Mortgage Payments

Home buying has exploded in the U.S. over the past few years, leading to the highest homeownership levels in American history. Despite the many benefits of homeownership, however, a troubling trend has emerged that may put many of these homeowners at risk.

The surge in creative mortgage products, called "exotics" by former Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan, have attracted thousands with low, introductory (or teaser) interest rates and corresponding low monthly payments that may skyrocket in the near future.

These "exotics," including Adjustable Rate Mortgages (ARMs), Interest-Only Loans (IOs), Option ARMs, and other often require little to no down payment with low introductory rates for a period of three or five years.

After this teaser period, the loans convert and adjust to whatever the interest rate might be at that time. In the second half 2004, 63 percent of all new mortgages were of this "exotic" category, 23 percent of which were Interest-Only mortgages.

This is up from just 2 percent in 2001. With the growing popularity of these loans, some economists and housing experts fear that literally thousands of homeowners will face skyrocketing monthly mortgage payments in the coming years because today's low interest rates are not expected to last forever.

What are the risks?

Greenspan cautioned this fall that "these products could be cause for some concern both because they expose borrowers to more interest-rate and house-price risk than the standard 30-year fixed-rate mortgage."

And, in the event of a cooling house market, he warned that individuals who are over-extended in the amount they are borrowing "could be exposed to significant losses." These losses might mean more money to pay each month, or a home that is no longer worth as much.

For example, consider a scenario based on a $200,000 mortgage with a 10 percent down payment. On one hand, if the borrower decides to go with a secure 30-year fixed-rate mortgage, the monthly principal and interest (P&I) payment at 5.75 percent holds steady for the life of a loan. To secure this steady mortgage, the borrower would get mortgage insurance (MI), which would bring the monthly payment to $1,254. Since the MI is canceled when more than 20 percent equity is reached in the home, usually after only three years, the monthly payment drops down to $1,167.

On the other hand, some borrowers might take a five-year interest-only combo loan at a 5.25 teaser rate because the monthly P&I payment would be only $875. However, at the end of the teaser period, the payment jumps to $1.350 if rates rise only to 6.5 percent. Assuming interest rates reach 8 percent, as they were only five years ago, the monthly payment will jump to a staggering $1,544 — almost double their original monthly payments.

"Interest-Only adjustable rate mortgages are dangerous," said financial expert and television host Suze Orman. "If the only way you can afford to buy is with one of these loans, you can't afford to own just yet."

How can homebuyers avoid the risk?

Fixed-rate mortgages allow borrowers to get around the hurdles of fluctuating interest rates and pressure to rely on home price appreciation. And, it's not always necessary to opt for a "piggyback" or "combo" loan to lock-in a fixed-rate mortgage with a low down payment less than the traditional 20 percent. In this case, mortgage insurance is a solution. Today, a fixed-rate insured mortgage offers affordable monthly payments that compete with the high risk mortgages.

With interest rates and home appreciation less than certain, homebuyers should consider all of the many financing options that are available. Mortgage insurance is a way to lock-in a steady, longer-term fixed-rate mortgage. More can be learned by visiting www.privatemi.com.

Did You Know? . . .

(NAPS) - With an interest-only mortgage, you pay only the interest on the mortgage in monthly payments for a fixed term, freeing up the amount that would normally go toward paying off the principal for other purposes.

The financial experts at Opteum Financial Services, one of the nation's fastest growing mortgage lenders, explain that at the end of the interest-only period (typically two to 10 years), your loan reverts back into a more typical mortgage, with the monthly payments adjusted upward (as much as 50 percent or more) to include interest and principal for the remaining years of the loan.

Quincy Property Up 22% Since 2002

Quincy- A recent study by a local real estate professional finds that, the median sales price of residential property in Quincy has increased 21 percent since 2002. Single family homes seem to have had the largest increase, at 29 percent, while multi-families and condos have also proved to be a wise investment, on average appreciating 22 and 20 percent respectively. Although many are skeptical that home prices will continue to rise, 'recent research conducted by the National Association of REALTORS® suggests that predictions of a severe correction in home prices locally are largely unfounded. The expectation is that home prices will continue to climb, albeit more modestly, than in recent years.'

Granite Is Tough: Taking Care Of It Isn't

Gleaming granite countertops and spa-like bathrooms made of natural stone are popular choices in home interiors, but they won't be worth their weight in gold for long if not properly maintained.

Until now, everyday multipurpose cleaners were often considered the only granite cleaning option outside of soap and water, despite the fact that many of them actually damage natural stone surfaces.

Natural stone is durable but still needs proper care to maintain its inherent beauty according to executives from European Natural Stone, a company that imports fabricates and installs natural stone. When treated properly, it is a low-maintenance surface that will hold its luster longer than any other surface on earth and can increase the value of your home, they said.

Many products claim to be "safe" on natural and synthetic stone, but few are specifically designed to clean, treat and protect the surfaces. Granite Gold, a new stone care product line, safely cleans and conditions countertops, floors and wall surrounds made of granite, marble, travertine and other natural stone.

"Everyday household cleaners break down the seal of natural stone, allowing stains to set more easily," said Lenny Sciarrino, CEO of Granite Gold. "The damage caused by these products increases the likelihood that stone will have to be refurbished or replaced which is a costly venture."

The Granite Gold Stone Care System features a Daily Cleaner, Daily Cleaner Wipes, a Polish/Protector, a Stone and Tile floor Cleaner and a Penetrating Sealer. The line protects and extends the life of stone countertops and gives consumers high-quality cleaning power. The line is nontoxic, safe on all food preparation surfaces, features a streak-free formula and is easy to use.

"We've used our 75 years of experience in the stone industry to develop a simple set of do's and don'ts, available at granitegold.com, that will help consumers properly care for their natural and synthetic stone," said Sciarrino.

For more information or to purchase the products, visit www.granitegold.com or call 800-475-7866.

Do's and Don'ts of Stone Care:

Do keep floors swept or vacuumed regularly.

Do use a coaster or gliders under chairs and other furniture.

Do keep granite and natural stone clean and dry around cooking surfaces and sinks.

Do make sure caulking, epoxy and grout joints are clean and mildew-free.

Don't use everyday household cleaners on granite or natural stone.

Don't use a vacuum that can cause scratching.

Don't drag heavy objects across stone floors.

Don't allow water to stand around sinks, which causes deterioration of the stone over time.

Wood-Pellet Stove Won't Stay Lit

Q. I installed a wood-pellet stove last fall. It has worked brilliantly and saved me a lot of money, but this fall when I tested it, the pellets would not stay lit. What is wrong? — Will T., Lawrence, Mass.

A. Pellet-burning stoves are an increasingly popular way to heat homes, providing an affordable alternative to today's sky-high oil and natural gas prices. These appliances use compressed wood pellets that burn very efficiently. The heat generated by burning the pellets is distributed through the house via a forced-air system; automated circuitry controls the number of pellets fed into the burn chamber and regulates the temperature.

The homeowner's job with a pellet stove is to refill the hopper (frequency depends on the stove's size and the amount of heat needed) and to clean out the ashes regularly. Off-season cleaning and maintenance of the stove components is also necessary to keep everything working at peak efficiency.

My first thought about your pellet-burning problem is that not enough oxygen is reaching the pellets. An electric vent system controls air flow into the burn chamber and out through the vent pipe. If the system isn't working right, not enough air is getting to the pellets. The issue could simply be a buildup of ash or creosote deposits in the burn chamber. In any case, I would recommend contacting the dealer that installed your stove for specific instructions on cleaning your stove model, or to schedule a repair.

Alternative heating appliances, like pellet-burning stoves, traditional wood-burning fireplaces and even coal-burning stoves are getting plenty of attention. Homeowners should look into them as good supplemental heat sources, and do a price comparison. The purchase price and the cost of professional installation (recommended if not required by your local government) should be factored into the cost of the appliance.

CORRECTION: Thanks to Pete W., who wrote about a recent column on maintaining furnaces that suggested using 10W30 oil to lubricate the motor: "(Automotive) motor oil has detergents that can score the bearings of the motor. The proper oil for electric motors of the sizes found in furnaces is SAE30 non-detergent."

MBTA Senior Citizen Access Pass Program Satellite Location Here Monday

Quincy senior citizens will be able to obtain the MBTA's senior access pass Monday, Dec. 5 from 10 a.m to 1 p.m. at the Richard Koch Park and Recreation Center, 1 Merrymount Parkway (off Southern Artery).

The Quincy location was arranged by Rep. Bruce Ayers and Thomas Clasby, director of Quincy Elder Affairs, who worked in collaboration with Matt Whalen of the MBTA to propose a satellite location for Quincy seniors.

Currently, senior residents have to travel to downtown Boston to the necessary paperwork and photograph for the MBTA senior access passes.

Ayers and Clasby said Quincy seniors should be able to obtain their pass at Quincy locations rather than commute to downtown Boston.

"The event is essential to making the MBTA a truly accessible service to the seniors of Quincy. It is important that seniors be provided with the information on the MBTA service and that they be able to complete the entire application process in Quincy.

"It is difficult for our seniors to travel to Boston in some situations," Ayers added.

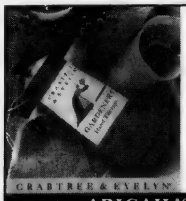
"With the implementation of new fare collection equipment," Clasby said, "the MBTA is replacing all valid existing MBTA Senior Citizen IDs and Transportation Access Pass IDs (T.A.P.) for persons with disabilities."

Ayers and Clasby commended the MBTA's Whalen for his cooperation and assistance with this satellite location for the MBTA's senior ridership program.

For more information, contact the MBTA Office for Transportation Access (617) 222-5438 (voice), 1-800-543-8287 (voice), or (617) 222-5854 (TTY).

Quincy To Participate In National Homeless Event

The city of Quincy plans to participate in National Project Homeless Connect by releasing a video on homelessness which will premiere Wednesday, Dec. 7, at 3 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St.



The 30-minute video will include interviews with homeless individuals and a formerly homeless family, focusing on Quincy's 10-Year Plan to End Chronic Homelessness, which was put into place in June.

"The city of Quincy is committed in the initiative to end chronic homelessness," said Mayor William Phelan. "Quincy's involvement in National Project Homeless Connect will allow us to increase community awareness and further the goals of our 10-year plan."

There are 26 cities across the country in the National Project but, as yet, Quincy is the only city in Massachusetts scheduled to take part in the inaugural event.

Getting in Shape to Hit the Slopes

Q. Each year my family and I go on a skiing trip for a week. About a month before our trip I begin to get in shape for the daily ski runs. My workout consists of cardio, strength training and yoga classes. Normally, I feel good after the week, but this year I plan on trying snowboarding as well as skiing. Could you recommend any exercises that would help me get ready for our trip?

A. Conditioning your body for skiing and snowboarding can improve your recovery time, decrease the risk of injury and allow you to fully enjoy your skiing and snowboarding experience. The main areas of conditioning for skiing are cardiovascular, strength, flexibility and balance. Each area has a distinct role in skiing and snowboarding activities.

Cardiovascular training can include walking, running, elliptical training and cycling. All are great forms of aerobic exercise. Interval training (changes from lower intensity to higher intensity) can help increase the heart's conditioning. Movement exercises such as skipping, shuffling, backpedal running, butt kickers (running with knees up and heels kicking back instead of forward) and carioca (lateral movements with legs crossing in front, then behind) can also prepare your body for the different directions it will move while snowboarding.

The strength of your muscles is extremely important. Not only will strong muscles, bones and joints help you stay on your feet, but they will also give you more control of your body. Conditioning your muscles by improving their strength and endurance will allow you to ski safer. Many injuries occur when skiers and snowboarders are fatigued yet continue to head down the slopes. Lunges (front, side, crossover), squats (single leg and double leg), step-ups and plyometric (power jumping) exercises can increase muscular strength and endurance.

Balance and flexibility are another important factor. Limited range of motion through your joints can impede your ability to maximize your muscles' true potential by causing the body to compensate. Limited range of motion in your ankles can cause additional stress to be placed on the lower back and hips, forcing you to work harder to balance and support your body.

Let's not forget about strengthening the muscles of the abdominals, back, hips and gluteus. Each of these muscle groups plays a huge role in maintaining your body's stability and the ability to move in all planes. Maintaining the integrity of your core muscles should be a priority in your exercise plan.

Continue to train for your trip and spend adequate time on each of the above areas. Ski training can be done year-round, as all of the exercises will not only help on the slopes but throughout your life.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program.

At Quincy Medical Center

Forum Inspires Next Generation Of Nurses

This fall, Quincy Medical Center opened its doors to more than 100 high school students from across the country who were in Boston as part of the National Youth Leadership Forum on Nursing.

The forum was launched in 2004, in response to the growing nursing shortage through out the U.S. and is designed to introduce exceptional high school students to career opportunities within the field of nursing. Each year, high school juniors and seniors are selected to participate in the intensive, six-day leadership forum that includes educational workshops, clinical site visits and panel discussions.

As a participant, Quincy Medical Center hosted four day-long clinical site visits, designed to showcase the many nursing career paths within a community hospital setting. The students met with QMC nurses and toured patient cares areas including the Emergency Department, Critical Care Unit, and other nursing units, including Medical/Surgical, Peri-operative, and Transitional Care.

"As a community teaching hospital, Quincy Medical Center has a professional obligation to shape the careers of the next generation of nurses," said Elizabeth Cadigan, RN, MSN, Vice President of Patient Care. "On a personal level, it is rewarding for our expert nurses to share their knowledge and experience with these future health care leaders."

In addition to the participating in the National Youth Leadership Forum on Nursing, Quincy Medical Center also works to foster the next generation of health care workers who are closer to home. For example, as one of the oldest partners of the Quincy Public Schools, QMC has shaped the health care careers of more than 1,000 students over the past 20 years. The medical center host an annual Job Shadow Day for Quincy students and, each week, provides clinical training for nearly 70 junior and senior-level students from both North Quincy High School and Quincy High School's Center for Technical Education.

Quincy Medical Center (www.quincymc.org) is a 232-bed acute care community-teaching hospital providing South Shore residents with comprehensive medical and surgical services. The medical center's Alliance for Quality with Boston Medical Center (BMC), formed in 1999, brings academic medicine to the community.

At Quincy Medical Center, physicians from Boston Medical Center direct the departments of medicine, surgery, anesthesia, emergency medicine, and psychiatry. Additionally, physicians from BMC who are board-certified in a range of medical and surgical specialties work with community physicians to ensure the continuity of patient care.

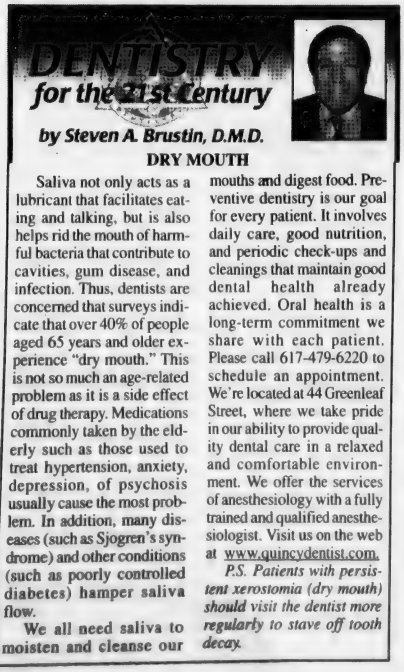
Simple Weight Management Tips

(NAPS) - Entering the New Year is a time of joy and celebration, but is also can be a time of stress for people trying to manage their weight and caloric intake. Faced with hectic schedules, office parties, big, celebratory meals and difficult New Year's resolutions, many Americans succumb to the mindless holiday munch.



In fact, according to a recent survey by Wrigley, 68 percent of Americans feels they often eat more during the holidays than they would at other times throughout the year.

But Americans who want to avoid weight gain before and after the holidays can keep themselves on track by choosing lower-calorie snacks and exercising. Experts agree that managing calorie intake and increasing physical activity are key in the quest for weight management.

"Holiday celebrations often lead to overeating, so it can be challenging for people trying to lose or even maintain their weight with so many tempting high-calorie snacks and leftovers around the office and at parties," said Molly Gee, registered dietician at Baylor College of Medicine. "Taking small steps to eat a balanced diet and stay physically active during and after the holidays are essential for people struggling with their waistline."

Since nearly 40 percent of Americans look for easy ways to avoid consuming high-calorie snacks and foods into the New Year, Gee and Wrigley offer these helpful steps to help keep holiday weight off:

- Steer clear of temptation – have conversations far from the buffet table and replace candy and baked goods at your desk and in your home with more nutritious options.
- Party hearty, not hungry – don't skip meals – "saving yourself" for friendly gatherings or meals can lead to binging.
- Move more – take the stairs instead of escalators or get exercise by taking extra laps around the mall when holiday shopping or making gift returns.
- Chews wisely – replace high-calorie snacks with a piece of chewing gum (average of five to 10 calories.) Chew gum when baking holiday treats to avoid nibbling and pack it when traveling to divert your attention from high-calorie snacking.
- Stay active – fill your days with festive activities that don't emphasize food, including shopping and decorating your home.

DRY MOUTH

Saliva not only acts as a lubricant that facilitates eating and talking, but is also helps rid the mouth of harmful bacteria that contribute to cavities, gum disease, and infection. Thus, dentists are concerned that surveys indicate that over 40% of people aged 65 years and older experience "dry mouth." This is not so much an age-related problem as it is a side effect of drug therapy. Medications commonly taken by the elderly such as those used to treat hypertension, anxiety, depression, of psychosis usually cause the most problem. In addition, many diseases (such as Sjogren's syndrome) and other conditions (such as poorly controlled diabetes) hamper saliva flow.

We all need saliva to moisten and cleanse our mouths and digest food. Preventive dentistry is our goal for every patient. It involves daily care, good nutrition, and periodic check-ups and cleanings that maintain good dental health already achieved. Oral health is a long-term commitment we share with each patient. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we take pride in our ability to provide quality dental care in a relaxed and comfortable environment. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Patients with persistent xerostomia (dry mouth) should visit the dentist more regularly to stave off tooth decay.

Presidents Reign In Raiders, 14-0

THE QUINCY HIGH School football team celebrates near the south end zone of Veterans Memorial Stadium following its 14-0 victory over North Quincy in last week's 73rd annual Thanksgiving Day game. The Presidents extended the record series winning streak to seven games.

The second half of last week's 73rd annual Thanksgiving Day game began the way the defunct XFL used to start games—a sprint for the football near midfield.

After a scoreless 22 minutes of play, the Red Raiders attempted an onside kick hoping to catch the Presidents off-guard and surf a wave of momentum.

But Quincy senior Brian Smith fell on the ball for the recovery a split second before North Quincy senior Chris Tufo crashed on top of him.

That play turned out to be the definitive moment of the game, as the Presidents scored both their touchdowns in the next five minutes to extend their record series winning streak to seven games with a 14-0 victory.

Quincy has now won 11 of the last 12 Thanksgiving Day games and leads the series, 40-28-5.

"They surprised us with the onside kick," said Quincy head coach Bob Noble. "But Brian Smith did a nice job recovering it. He did what he was coached up to do. You never take off until the ball is past you. That was a play that turned the game around."

"I'm not going to lie, we like winning on Thanksgiving," he added. "That's what we're there to do. Our success the last seven years, we're all proud of. Now it's the responsibility of the upcoming classes to continue that."

"I thought we had it," said North Quincy head coach Bill Shaughnessy. "Tufo came real close to coming up with the ball and that would've given us momentum to begin the second half. The kids gave a great effort. We just didn't come up with the big plays. It's frustrating losing year after year."

The Presidents finished the season with a 6-4 overall record and can take solace in their second-place showing in the Atlantic Coast League after champion Plymouth North's 30-0 win over Plymouth South.

"It's not the year we were hoping for," Noble said. "We didn't win the league title. But we can't look down at the season. It was a successful year. We finished second in the league. I'm not satisfied, but I'm happy. The kids played hard and gave their best effort."

The Red Raiders, meanwhile, closed a frustrating season with another two-win campaign and watched another senior class walk off Veterans Memorial Stadium for the final time feeling down.

"The seniors, it's been my pleasure coaching them this year," Shaughnessy said. "It just shows what they're made of and the character that they have, playing as they did today. I just feel bad because they came up short again in their final high school football game."

Quincy senior captain Everton DeCastro delivered another outstanding rushing performance. The all-star tailback gained 145 yards and two touchdowns on 29 carries while adding a 12-yard reception and kicking two extra points.

Neither team mustered much offense in the first half as plenty of bad snaps on a muddy turf contributed to a scoreless game at the break. North Quincy managed just 19 yards of total offense as a handful of dropped balls plagued them. Quincy reached the red zone on two of its three possessions before stalling.

In the second half, Quincy started in great field position at its own 44 after recovering the onside kick. DeCastro picked up 11 yards on the first play, dragging of host of Red Raiders five yards for the first down to ignite a reaction from the fans and his teammates.

Facing a fourth-and-6, junior quarterback Matt Boyle found senior first-year wideout Matt Giordani wide open on a play-action pass for a 29-yard gain to the 2-yard line.

Running out of the Power-I formation, DeCastro followed lead blockers Stroud and Andrews into the end zone and his subsequent extra point gave them a 7-0 lead with 7:54 left in the quarter.

On the ensuing series, the Red Raiders quickly unraveled when they fumbled on their first play to leave Quincy in great field position at their 16.

The Presidents wasted no time converting the miscue into points when DeCastro spun away from two defenders for an 8-yard TD run. His second extra point made it 14-0 with 6:05 left in the third.

North Quincy answered with a long, six-minute drive, moving the ball 50 yards to the Quincy 24. But the Presidents defense stiffened on the first two plays and North Quincy lost 21 yards on an errant snap before punting.

As bad as the third quarter went for the Red Raiders, they caught a break on Quincy's next possession at the beginning of the fourth. On fourth down at the NQ 35, the Presidents snapped the ball over DeCastro's head on a punt attempt and the ball rolled all the way back to the 5-yard line.

With 9:17 still remaining, North Quincy seemed to be in position to climb back into the game. But Quincy's defense rose to the occasion again.

It stuffed Tufo for no gain on the first two downs and senior safety Jon Brooks stepped in front of a pass intended for senior wideout Benson Luc to make a diving interception.

Quincy turned the ball over at its 36 on a fumbled snap, but got the ball back three plays later when Brooks picked off another pass. The running game picked up two first downs to kill the clock and finalize another team celebration near the south end zone.

"Give credit to our defensive coaches, especially Bill Reardon," Noble said. "That's the second year in a row we've shut them out and they've only scored one TD in the last 12 quarters of play against us.

"They really didn't generate much offense. The field conditions weren't the best, which consequently limited what you wanted to do. I'm sure it was the same for them as it was for us."

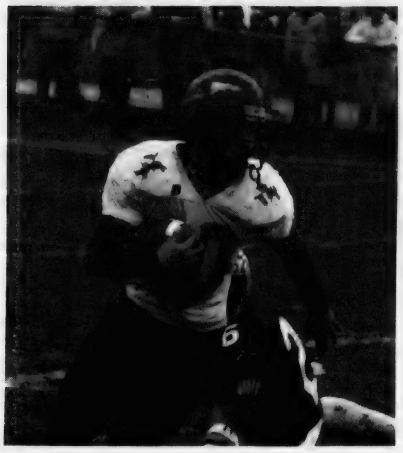
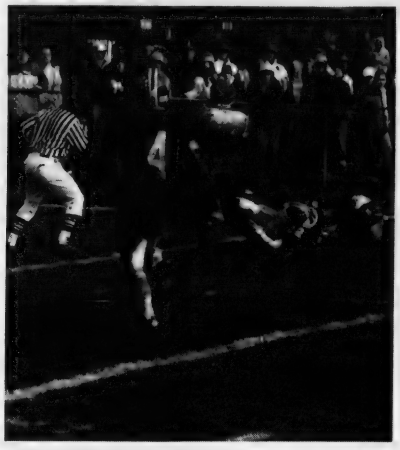
SENSING SOMETHING WRONG?



The sensors that fuel-injected engines use to monitor and evaluate operating parameters take constant measure of air temperature and density, engine temperature, airflow, fuel flow, and other factors. Among the most important of these sensors is the oxygen sensor, which provides information that enables the engine's management system to modify its operation to bring performance into proper specs. When this important component wears out, it sends unreliable information, which causes incorrect changes that can prove harmful to catalytic converters. At the very least, a worn oxygen sensor can lead to increased emissions and such drivability problems as surging and hesitation. Review the life expectancy of your vehicle's oxygen sensor and replace it before it fails.

The oxygen sensor, or O^2 sensor, is a vital component to your car's performance and emission standards. Trust the mechanics at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO to handle any and all engine issues you may be experiencing. We have the most advanced diagnostic equipment, and when you bring your automobile to 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree, we will find the problem for you. If your Check Engine light is on, it could be your O^2 sensor, so please call 781-843-1550 today!



HINT: Most oxygen sensors need to be replaced about every 60,000 miles.

North Quincy Golfers On Par With Success

Red Raiders Post 13-3 Record

THE NORTH QUINCY High School golf team finished in first place in the Atlantic Coast League North Division for the second straight season. Kneeling, from the left: Co-captains Robbie Dolbec and Shaun Lynch. Standing: Head coach Rick Hutchins, Frankie Flora, Peter Dolbec, Jon Drooks, Dan Reilly, Mikey Griffin, Rob McAloon, Chris Boyd, Don Pound and Alex Hollatz.

The North Quincy High School golf team enjoyed a very successful fall season.

The Red Raiders finished with a 13-3 overall record and a perfect 8-0 record in the Atlantic Coast League North Division to place first for the second straight year.

"We played the Cape teams at the start of the schedule and we held our own," said head coach Rick Hutchins. "After losing to Division 2 champion Sandwich in the season opener, we played everyone tough.

"We lost to Falmouth down there by four points and had a classic match at home against Nauset, which went to the sixth golfer before the match was decided. We didn't lose another match the rest of the season, winning the last nine in a row."

The team got some well-deserved respect when it traveled to Souther's Marsh Golf Course in Plymouth and won the ACL tournament by eight shots — its first league championship since 1994.

The Red Raiders also qualified for the state south sectional tournament for the seventh time in eight years. After some heavy rains, the postponed tourney was held at the Glen Ellen Country Club in Millis, where they finished eighth behind teams such as BC High, Barnstable and Needham.

"We had a great ride," Hutchins said. "It was a lot of fun. The highlights of our season include our match with Nauset and our two matches with our friendly rivals at Quincy High School. The Quincy match is always a great day for the city. The kids all know each other and besides the competition there is sportsmanship and a lot of fun.

"A victory at Dennis/Highlands was also important. We also had victories against league opponents Plymouth North, Plymouth South and Whitman-Hanson as well as non-league victories against Weymouth and Bridgewater-Raynham."

The team was led by senior co-captains Robbie Dolbec and Shaun Lynch. "Both these guys have been with the program for four years and it has been a pleasure to coach them and see them grow both as golfers as well as young men," Hutchins said.

Dolbec and junior Rob McAloon were North Quincy's 1-2 punch. Juniors Peter Dolbec, Dan Reilly, Jon Drooks, Mikey Griffin and Chris Boyd also contributed to the team's success.

Freshman Alex Hollatz received a lot of varsity time and played well. Freshmen Frankie Flora and Don Pound also played.

"The key to the season was teamwork," Hutchins said. "One golfer does not win a match. We play eight golfers in a match, so we need everyone making their own contribution. That was the story of this team.

"During the season all nine starters shot at least one round in the 30's while the top golfers averaged in the mid-30's. We basically rotated nine players through eight spots. Because we had depth, this was possible."

Season ending honors went to Robbie Dolbec with the ACL Sportsmanship Award. ACL all-stars were Robbie Dolbec, Peter Dolbec, McAloon, Reilly and Drooks.

The team has its home matches at Presidents Golf Course. "We would like to thank Mr. Don Small, head professional, and his entire staff for all they do for the team, not only during the season but also in the offseason. They are part of our success," Hutchins said.

Recreation Programs At Neighborhood Gyms Start Saturday

The Quincy Recreation Department will conduct supervised recreation programs in 10 neighborhood school gymnasiums beginning Saturday.

The Saturday gym programs are free and open to boys and girls age 8 through high school. The time varies for each age group. All programs have walk-in registration at each location and are open only to Quincy residents. Participants may attend the location of their choice, not just their neighborhood gymnasium.

Assorted gym activities include floor hockey, tag football, basketball and relay races. The core schedule is 9 to 10:30 a.m. for elementary; 10:30 a.m. to noon for middle school and high school. Some adjustments in the schedule may be made at different locations to accommodate differences in attendance by age group.

The Saturday schedule is offered at the following schools: Atherton Hough, Beechwood Knoll, Bernazzani, Merrymount, Montclair, Snug Harbor, Squantum, Point Webster, Wollaston and Atlantic.

Quincy Police Crime Prevention News: 'Awareness'

By LT. DAN MINTON

LT. DAN MINTON

Today's lifestyle is often faced paced and hectic. It may be running errand after errand or going from one child's event to another. We are often preoccupied in thoughts, so much that we don't recognize potential threats around us.

The purpose of this article is not intended to scare the reader, but to encourage you to become more alert as part of your daily routine. When people become more cognizant of their surroundings and make it habit, they reduce their chances of becoming a victim of a crime or accident.

Awareness should begin as you leave the house. Is something unusual? Is there an unknown car parked down the street with someone sitting in it? When dropping the kids off at school or at the playground, is there anyone looking suspicious or out of place, or watching from a distance that you don't recognize? As you leave the supermarket, is there someone loitering in the parking lot?

By just taking a moment to look around and assess your surroundings, you will help prevent unwanted situations from occurring. Criminals are often opportunistic and take advantage of the unwitting citizen.

Three Simple Rules:

• Don't put yourself in bad situations: As you enter a new environment, reassess your surroundings. Evaluate any risk that you may be placing yourself in.

• If it doesn't feel right: Trust your instincts. If you feel unsafe, even if it doesn't make sense or is not logical, take steps to change the situation, like crossing the street or going back into a building you just come out of.

• Assess the situation and your options: If something seems wrong of out of place, call the police. Let us check out the situation. Too often people tell us they were going to call, but for some reason decided not to. The police have the responsibility, authority and resources to determine if a person belongs in a certain location.

The hours of daylight are gradually shrinking. As you leave work or are about to enter or exit a store, take a moment prior to leaving the safety of a building or car, to scan the area for anything that may be out of place or be a potential threat. Remember, a simple call to the police will give you peace of mind.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

The late maestro Leopold Stokowski, at an age well past three score and ten years, continued an inspirationally active life. By personal example, he shamed many younger people when he said, "I would rather talk about the future, the past is something we can no longer do anything about."

He put his words into action. In approaching age 80, he grouped both young and old in the American Symphony. One third of the musicians were talented youth; the other two thirds were more experienced, more mature. Dedicated to his conviction that America is a land of opportunity and that it must remain so, he exemplified a lesson many of us should heed . . . The young learn from the old and the old gain from the vitality and enthusiasm of the young.

In recent years, in too many areas of employment, it is a shame that this two-fold concept of opportunity seems to have been side-tracked. . .

Christmas CD Benefits Homeless Kids

Quincy Point Congregational Church has produced a Christmas CD, 'Tis the Season, a Quincy Christmas to raise awareness and funding for the Quincy Public Schools' Project Access. Project Access provides special services to homeless children to help them succeed in school.

Bethany Congregational Church, Houghs Neck Congregational Church, Quincy Point Congregational Church and St. Joseph's Catholic Church all contributed volunteers to create a 52-voice choir that sang three religious Christmas songs.

Paul A. Thistle, director of Music and organist at Quincy Point Congregational Church, performed playing the new Rodgers 950B three manual digital organ.

Virginia Vickery directed the St. Joseph's Youth Choir with Fr. Vincent Doolan accompanying them on guitar.

Kristin Huberdeau and Bulent Guneralp, local vocalists, provided several solo pieces.

John Robie, the Quincy Point Congregational Church director of Education and Youth, and Susan Dolan, both Marshfield residents, sang and played guitar.

Peter Kolson, former Ward 1 city councillor, sang "A Marshmallow World." Matthew McArthur and Dr.

Curtis W. Penney performed two pieces on the Great Highland Bagpipes. Tom Clasby, Jr. from Quincy's Council on Aging and Co-owner of the Cottage Tavern, performed two Irish tunes accompanied by Mark J. Carey on guitar. Paul Huberdeau of Weymouth accompanied several soloists on piano.

Nancy A. Santry, a well-known Quincy Photographer generously donated the cover photo: "Marina Bay Boardwalk in Winter." CD graphics and design were generously provided by Kimberly Allison of Wilmer Cutler Pickering Hale and Dorr.

David Messier and Andre Cantave provided sound engineering for Same Sky Productions of Bridgewater. Dana J. White provided specialized mastering.

ADA, affiliated with MMIMBIT of Framingham produced the CD.

The CD project to raise awareness and funding for Project Access was the brainchild of Rev. Ann G. Suzedell, pastor, and Lynne Penney, Chair of the Music Committee, both at Quincy Point Congregational Church.

The CD costs $15 and can be purchased from Quincy Point Congregational Church, 444 Washington St. Quincy, MA 02169 Tel: 617/773-6424; Roseann's Floral and Gift Shop, 1091 Hancock St., Quincy; The Perm Solution at 1732 Ocean St., Marshfield; The Bookstore at Eastern Nazarene College, 23 E. Registry Of Deeds Food Drive Underway

Norfolk County Register Bill O'Donnell announces the Annual Registry of Deeds Holiday Food Drive is underway at the Registry of Deeds in Dedham through Monday, Dec. 19.

O'Donnell is asking for donations of nonperishable food items, which will be forwarded to area food pantries.

"Many Norfolk County residents continue to face hardship at this time of year, and food pantries need our help," O'Donnell said. "In this holiday season, I urge all citizens to remember the less fortunate and to be generous in contributing to this effort."

A donation bin has been set up in the lobby of the Registry building (which is open 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday).

Suggested items include cereals, canned vegetables, boxed or canned spaghetti, spaghetti sauces, coffee, and baby food.

Those unable to visit the Registry are urged to contribute directly to a food pantry in their community.

The Registry of Deeds, located at 649 High St., Dedham, is the principal office for real property records in Norfolk County.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Council Approves Tax Break For Squantum Gardens

ments... have been decided, have been negotiated," said Largy.

Squantum Gardens is not owned by the city, and therefore will not be exclusive to Quincy residents, said Derek Gardner, architect for the project.

"An overwhelming number of the applicants will be from the surrounding area," he said.

It is estimated that there would not be enough qualifying North Quincy residents to fill the apartments if it were exclusive to them.

Designed for residential appeal, the exterior of the building will be constructed from durable, wood-like, fire resistant paneling, with a 50 year warrantee. The complex includes wide porches at the entrances.

"We wanted this to feel like a place that would be their home," said Gardner. "They won't feel like they're in a sardine can with other folks."

The complex on the east will provide 108 apartments while the western one will provide 115. Each building will have large community rooms for potluck dinners and poker, while there will also be smaller rooms for games and reading. A library will be provided, as well as two laundry rooms per floor, that accommodate disability.

The buildings are designed in two moon shapes, protecting a garden, at their center, from waterfront wind.

They will be built on concrete modular columns that are proven to stiffen the surrounding soil, to avoid settling into the surrounding marsh area.

Squantum Gardens will qualify for tax breaks after being designated an urban center, based on surrounding traffic and commercial business.

"It's a good deal to begin with, it just makes it that much sweeter," said Largy.

Councillor Coughlin read letters from citizens who could not be present. All were supportive.

"It says a lot about what Quincy's all about," said Councillor Coughlin, "I'm looking forward to our ribbon ceremony," he said.

"It has come to my attention that a number of non-profit organizations file for abatement every year. To some extent... we can look to the bigger picture, but their budget is out of whack," said Councillor James Davis III, "We tax them knowing they'll get the abatement," he said, but in the meantime organizations have to wait.

There was a motion by councillor Gardner to improve the taxing plans for that area, the motion was unanimously approved.

277 parking spaces will be available with 1.24 available spaces per apartment. It is expected that most seniors will only have one car while some may not. There will be designated visitor parking, with closer spaces reserved for residents.

World War II Statue Dedication Dec. 7

Originally plans were to rededicate the statue on Veterans Day but they were shifted to Dec. 7 as a more appropriate date because that "Day of Infamy" marks the attack on Pearl Harbor that brought the U.S. into World War II.

The 11-ton granite ball that had been at the Fore River traffic circle will replace the statue on Constitution Common outside City Hall.

The ball was originally at City Hall, a gift of the Quincy Granite Manufacturers Association, June 25, 1925 to commemorate the 300th anniversary of the settlement of Quincy in 1625.

The ball is now in Barret, Vt., for repairs and re-polishing.

No firm date has been set for its rededication. It will require a new foundation and work on that will depend on the winter weather.

Phelan To Utilize $3.8M To Help Taxpayers

City To Use QC Payment For Taxes

Mayor William Phelan announced Tuesday he will utilize a $3.83 million payment from Quincy College to help taxpayers.

The payment will be received by the city as a general revenue for pension payments that the city had made on behalf of the college from Fiscal Years 1998 through 2004. Phelan has long advocated that the college take a larger responsibility for their pension payments.

"The burden that the taxpayers have endured by subsidizing the college is now beginning to lift," Phelan said. "I am glad that the Board of Governors, or at least those that voted for this payment, have accepted their responsibility to the taxpayers of Quincy. I will now make sure that they taxpayers directly reap the benefits of my efforts."

The Board of Governors [illegible] the city [illegible] its pension [illegible] Fiscal Year [illegible] year.

"We have turned the city's finances around by simply being relentless in collecting what was due to our taxpayers," Phelan said. "This is the largest receipt but others such as the MWRA mitigation and unpaid parking tickets are providing direct benefits for our taxpayers. It is a matter of basic fairness to our taxpayers that they not have to subsidize institutions that are not paying their fair share."

The $3.83 million payment will provide the city with the largest excess levy capacity in Quincy history,

Council Surprises With 189 Percent Tax Classification

By MIKAELA SLANEY

The City Council surprised the business community Monday night by raising its tax classification to the state limit of 189 percent of fair market value, a $10.32 residential tax rate and a $23.28 rate for commercial and personal property for Fiscal 2006.

The residential property rate is down 52 cents from $10.84 per $1,000 valuation in Fiscal 2005 while commercial, industrial and personal property (CIPP) is up 96 cents over the $22.32 rate in the last fiscal year.

At a 189 tax classification, it's $113 less for residential property than 175, according to Marion Fantucchio, with an average household savings of $623 per year.

"It hurts businesses, particularly small businesses," said Peter Forman, president and CEO of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce. "It's not as easy for small businesses as for a national corporation to absorb the tax increase."

"I don't consider this an increase in the commercial rate, it's a decrease in the increase of the residential rate," said Ward 2 city councillor Daniel Raymondi, who introduced the 189 tax classification.

"Everyone seems to feel bad for homeowners." said Council president Francis McCauley, in opposition of the 189 tax classification. "They're making the market, they seem to have money to buy the property but not to pay the taxes."

Of the 189 proposal, McCauley concluded "I don't think it's a wise option. I'm going with 175."

The 175 recommendation by Mayor William Phelan is a continuation of the 175 tax classification used in fiscal 2005.

Paul Angelico, president and C.O.O. of Twin Rivers Technologies argued on behalf of larger companies for a lower tax rate for commercial property.

"It's about paying your fair share. We've paid a quarter of a million and we're happy to do that. We'd like it not to increase. We spent three million more on heating this year," said Angelico.

"I am one of those larger businesses and I can not pass this on to the customers," said Angelico, "We have 120 employees (in Quincy) and I'd like to see that number grow."

"It's better to avoid ups and downs," said Ward 5 city councillor Douglas Gutro, in favor of the 175 recommendation.

(Cont'd On Page 18)

MR. PRINCIPAL — Timothy Glynn, second-grade student at the Squantum School, won the drawing recently to be Principal of the Day. Among his duties was delivering the morning notices on the school intercom. He also received a "goodie bag" of prizes from the PTO, digital photos and a framed picture of him. He enjoyed a hot chocolate break and lunch treat from Carmine's Cafe. "It was fun being principal" he said but turned the job back to Principal Donald Houghton.

At World War II Statue Rededication

Former Prisoner Of War Pays Tribute To All Generations

By TOM HENSHAW

"Our generation has been tabbed 'the greatest generation,'" said Robert Noble, a World War II veteran and former prisoner of war. "But in my opinion, each generation has contributed greatly.

"We would not have the country we have today without everyone's contribution."

Noble made the remarks in a speech prepared for delivery Wednesday at the rededication of the city's World War II statue and memorial in its new and permanent location in Merrymount Park after three years temporary residence in front of new City Hall.

"No event today is held without having in our thoughts and prayers the members of our armed forces currently in harm's way," Noble said.

"May they return soon to a government and people who will welcome them and provide them the medical and emotional support they will need."

When the fighting ended victoriously in World War II, he said, "we came home to a grateful nation."

"The veterans of World War I and the organizations they founded had worked to provide the homecoming veterans with the G. I. Bill. These benefits made the transition to peace time not only beneficial to veterans but to the country as a whole."

ROBERT NOBLE

Noble noted that the rededication of the statue came on the 64th anniversary of the Japanese sneak attack on Pearl Harbor, Dec. 7, 1941, which killed more than 2,000 and "drew us into the greatest conflict in world history."

"When the Japanese attacked out country they brought together a people who were divided," he said.

"There was a significant faction that thought the two oceans that separated us from Europe and Asia was sufficient to protect us from the armies of the Axis nations.

"We were fortunate to have a president, Franklin Delano Roosevelt (the right man at the right time), who was able to pull together all the segments of our society to work for the common good of our country and eventually the world.

"Quincy not only sent her men and women to war but it was the site of a shipyard known the world over for the great warships it launched.

"Quincy provided sailors for those ships and aviators from the Squantum Naval Air Station to fly the planes from the Quincy-built carriers.

"Her soldiers fought all over the world from North Africa, Sicily, Italy, France, Germany and the Pacific Theater of operations.

"Quincy's sailors and Marines half a world away fought their way from island to island to finally bring the war to the Japanese homeland.

"Many of us had experiences we seldom talk about. At home our families waited to hear from their sons, daughters, brothers and sisters. Just as we are doing today."

The veterans of World War II are still being remembered in Quincy by the rededicated statue near the intersection of Hancock Street and Merrymount Parkway, where a walkway of more than 500 bricks and granite-pavers are engraved with the names of World War II veterans.

Installation of the bricks and granite-pavers was performed gratis by members of the South Shore Building Trades Council.

The original plan was to dedicate the statue in its new location on Veterans Day but it was moved to Dec. 7 as a more fitting day since its was the "Day of Infamy" when the attack brought the United States into World War II.

Eventually, the 11-ton granite ball that had been in the center of the Fore River traffic circle will replace the statue on Constitution Common outside City Hall. It is now in Barre, Vt., for repairs and repolishing.

The ball, a gift of the Quincy Granite Manufacturers Association on June 25, 1925, was originally placed at City Hall to commemorate the 300th anniversary of the settlement of Quincy in 1625. No date has been set for its rededication.

37 Firefighters Are Commended By Council For Bravery In Rescues

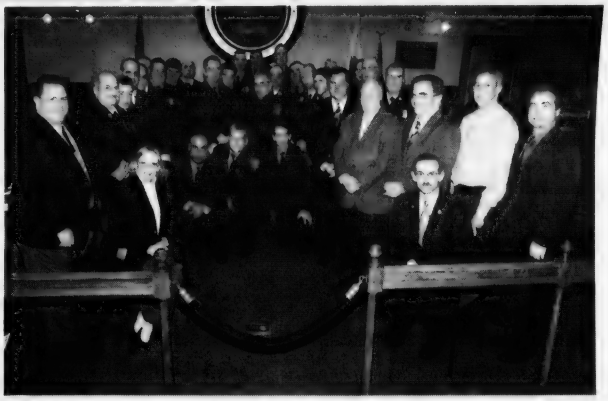
Thirty seven firefighters were cited by the City Council Monday night with commendations for their rescue work in the collapse of a crane at the old Fore River Shipyard and a building under construction on Quarry Street.

"We need to say thank you to our public servants more often," said Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin, who introduced the commendation. "Unfortunately it takes tragic events such as this to say thank you. We're a little tardy in doing what we're doing tonight."

Cited for "heroic acts of bravery and sheer courage" were:

Chief Timothy Pettinelli, former Chief Paul O'Connell, Deputy Chiefs Gerald Galvin and Joseph Barron, Capt. Michael Orsino, Lts. John Barber, Michael Hobin, Peter O'Hare, John Carroll and Paul Leonard, Master Mechanic James April, Mechanic Michael O'Connor.

Firefighters Daniel Polvere, John Goddard, Richard Sullivan, John Banuk, Jeffrey Baldock, Thomas Gannon, Steve Mitchell, Steve Carbo, Christopher Barry, Michael Carroll, Glen Doyle, Michael Dwyer, Michael Eastwick, James Leonard, Thomas Malvesti, Michael Palaza, Robert Reney, Andrew Smith, Stephen Wells, Mark Whouley, John Martell, Luis Ruiz, and Robert Kay and Thomas Bowes of the Fire Alarm Division.



Chief Pettinelli and Lt. Hobin responded to both incidents.

A section of the abandoned craneway at the shipyard came crashing down Jan. 25 on a building where workers were removing asbestos prior to demolition. Two workers were killed and others had to be rescued from under the welter of steel beams.

Those firefighters involved have already been awarded state Medals of Valor in ceremonies at the State House.

Six months later, on Aug. 17, the center section of a four-story town house under construction at 46 Quarry St. collapsed under the weight of newly arrived building materials and two men had to be pulled out of the wreckage and sent to the hospital.

"They knew that the building was unsafe yet they all marched in," said Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi.

FIREFIGHTERS who were cited by the City Council for bravery in their rescue work in crane and building collapses appeared at City Hall for their commendations. Trish Bossart Photos

"Is it too late for me to refinance?"

(The surprising answer? Probably not!)

If you just go by what you hear or read in the mainstream media, you might think that the refinancing "window" has slammed shut. But that's a simplification that's simply not true. Here are the facts: Mortgage rates are still bouncing around near 50-year lows. So if you want to refinance for whatever reason – to be mortgage-free before you retire, to pay for tuition, to consolidate other loans and debts or just to lock in a low rate before the window does close – you still have time. But possibly not much. So don't wait. Come see us or call 617-471-0750.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On Dec. 10, 1830, poet Emily Dickinson is born in Amherst, Mass. Although she wrote 1,775 poems, only seven were published in her lifetime.

• On Dec. 6, 1907, in West Virginia's Marion County, an explosion in a network of mines kills 361 coal miners — the worst mining disaster in American history. Nationwide, a total of 3,242 miners were killed in mine accidents in 1907.

• On Dec. 7, 1925, future Tarzan actor Johnny Weissmuller sets the world record for the 150-yard freestyle swim. MGM later cast Weissmuller to play the title role in "Tarzan the Ape Man" (1932).

• On Dec. 5, 1933, the 18th Amendment is repealed, bringing an end to the era of national prohibition of alcohol. Some states continued Prohibition by maintaining statewide temperance laws. Mississippi, the last dry state in the Union, ended Prohibition in 1966.

• On Dec. 11, 1941, Buick lowers its prices to reflect the absence of spare tires in its new cars. Widespread shortages caused by World War II had led to many quotas and laws designed to conserve America's resources, including prohibiting spare tires in new cars.

• On Dec. 9, 1958, the right-wing John Birch Society is established. Founded with only 11 members, by the early 1960s its membership had grown to nearly 100,000. The Society remains active today, and its members seek "to expose a semi-secret international cabal whose members sit in the highest places of influence and power worldwide."

• On Dec. 8, 1969, at a news conference, President Richard Nixon says that the Vietnam War is ending. Nixon's pronouncement proved premature, however. In April 1970, he expanded the war by ordering U.S. and South Vietnamese troops to attack communist sanctuaries in Cambodia.

True Love

Here's a short story you might call "True Love." It comes from Jackie Foschia in Sedona, Ariz., who asks if we might print it.

Happy to do it, Jackie. It's a good chance and a nice change of pace to get away from the political scene.

EMILY and JAKE FOSCHIA

Jackie's story goes like this:

"Picture this, New York City sometime in the spring of 1945. A young sailor from Quincy Point is walking his date home after a Navy dance at the pier.

"They're both young, in their early twenties. It's a balmy spring night in the city. Love is in the air.

"The sailor has been stung by Cupid's arrow. He tells his date that he's going to marry her someday. She throws her head back and lets go a laugh.

"Marry?" she quips with all the haughtiness of a queen among peasants. "Marry," she questions again. And then, with a rather smug self assuredness retorts, "When I'm ready to marry, I'll line you all up and take my pick.

"Fast forward to Dec. 15, 2005. Emily and Jake Foschia of 1000 Southern Artery, Quincy Point, will be celebrating their 60th wedding anniversary. I guess we all know who she picked.

And with her story, this personal note: "Congratulations to Mum & Dad from you daughters Katherine, Jackie and Sara. Happy Anniversary. We love you."

A little footnote about Jake:

He grew up in Quincy Point and before World War II was employed at the Fore River shipyard. He joined the Navy in 1941 and was assigned to the heavy cruiser USS Boston which he had helped build at the shipyard.

He and Emily were married in 1945 in San Diego and he brought his bride to Quincy. He joined the Quincy Fire Department in 1949 and was honored a number of times for heroism, retiring in 1979.

Happy anniversary.

BURKE

Both Mike Fagerlund, retired Quincy Board of Assessors chairman and a 1935 QHS grad and Atty. George Burke, class of 1950 were at this year's game. Fagerlund for his 68th and Burke for his 62nd.

Not all of the games in the 72-year series have been played on Thanksgiving. The early ones starting in 1933 were played on Armistice Day (now Veterans Day) and on a couple of Saturdays.

The first one played on Thanksgiving Day was in 1938 and the first played at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Can anyone top George's and Mike's records?

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A is reproduction of a trade card used by the Craig and Richards Granite Company whose office and works were located on Water Street in Quincy Adams. The card says 106 Water St. but when the street was renumbered many years ago it became 290. The company also owned a large quarry on the hill at the end of Mt. Ararat Road. They specialized in furnishing their own dark blue Quincy granite but like most Quincy monument companies they also handled all types of domestic and foreign granites. After the company closed, other granite companies used their site at the corner of Brook Road, and most recently it became home to the headquarters of the Fallon Ambulance Company. The old Craig and Richards quarry was filled with refuse long ago and is now part of the High Point development project on Quarry Street. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Dealing With Disruptive Students In The Classroom

As a substitute teacher in the Quincy Public Schools since 2000, I hope the Quincy School Committee works overtime on funding and then finding solutions to the issue of handling disruptive students in the classroom. A few weeks back three brand new school committee members were elected and with three new pairs of eyes perhaps this is the time to act.

Many schools deal with the issue by endless detentions. Sometimes students can get suspended or expelled but neither expulsions nor suspensions solves the problem more than a few days.

One middle school I subbed at created a class full of disruptive students segregated from the other students. Personally, I think this "Welcome Back Kotter" approach is counterproductive to education and it really doesn't work.

Where do these students go after being Kotterized? One student once told me his goal in life was to get out of middle school and land in the GOALS program next to North Quincy High School. Some goal?

Packing disruptive students and treating them like Dead End Kids gets you Dead End Kids. These are not prisoners to be segregated from the general prison population. These are kids. What are we producing? Tomorrow's inmates at MCI Cedar Junction?

Schools are not for containing or baby-sitting future criminals. Schools have a mission to educate and to reach out to all students. Sometimes that job is real difficult but these disruptive students are crying out for help and we seem unable to reach through to them. This is the 21st century. We should be doing better. Schools are the gateway to the future. Eventually almost everyone gets through school and how they do it determines what their futures hold. I'm no bleeding heart but we have to do a better job.

Pearl Harbor Attack Sends City Into Action

This Week
1941
64 Years Ago

Quincy responded with feverish activity to word that the Japanese had attacked Pearl Harbor.

"The time for play at civil defense is past," said Edwin J. MacEwan, controller of the Fifth Civilian Defense District, which included Quincy and 10 South Shore towns.

"If the Japanese can bomb Hawaii, which is 3,000 miles away, then the Germans can bomb Quincy, which is only 2,700 miles away."

Mayor Thomas S. Burgin cut short a Cape Cod holiday and returned to confer behind closed doors with Police Chief John J. Avery, Solicitor John D. Smith and Fore River Police Chief Howard H. Dacey.

I Co., commander by Capt. John Brewer, one of Quincy's two state guard companies, was mobilized and ordered to report to the Armory at 7 p.m. Sunday night.

Z. Cranston Smith, chief air raid warden, sent out a call for 1,000 additional volunteers to augment the force of 30 air raid wardens that were to be graduated on Monday.

Chief Avery directed members of the Quincy Police Department not to leave the city without permission and he canceled orders to put the police boat "Guardian" in winter storage.

Police, alerted by the New Haven Railroad that a Japanese was board a southbound train, stopped the train at Wollaston and took him off only to find it was a prominent Chinese laundryman from Weymouth returning from a weekend date in Boston.

'A Guy In Love With His City'

Frank McCauley Honored As Jewish War Veterans 'Citizen Of The Year'

City Council President and former mayor Frank McCauley was honored by the Quincy Jewish Veterans Post Sunday as its "Citizen of the Year."

Two mayors were among those paying tribute to McCauley at the annual breakfast at Beth Israel Synagogue where the award was presented by Commander Dr. Bertrand Shaffer and Past Commander Harvey Solomon, program chairman.

Mayor William Phelan, noting that McCauley assisted him "tremendously" when he first ran for office and advised him on fiscal matters when he became mayor, said:

"But it's not city finances and fiscal conservatism that is Frank's legacy. His legacy is right here in the audience. His wife, Sandra, his family who absolutely adores him and who he adores and that's really what it's all about. He's the luckiest guy in the world."

Presenting McCauley with a citation, Phelan added, "I have a feeling you are not going too far and we will be hearing from you in the years to come."

Former Mayor Arthur Tobin, now clerk magistrate of Quincy District Court, referred to McCauley and himself as "a couple of old warhorses who go way back together."

"Frank McCauley is a guy in love with his city," Tobin said. "If he didn't have that love and passion he would not have served so many years. He just wanted to give of himself because he loves this city. His family has followed in his footsteps."

State Rep. Steve Tobin presented McCauley with a House of Representatives citation on behalf of himself and Reps. Bruce Ayers and Ron Mariano.

"He was a very good mayor for the city of Quincy," Tobin said. "There is another side of him. He really enjoys civic participation.

"It's pretty clear that he will long be recognized in Quincy as a prototype for what it means to be a citizen of the community."

Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly, a longtime friend, presented McCauley with a commendation from the City Council citing his "lifetime of public service and dedication . . . and being the taxpayers fiscal watchdog for more than 30 years."

On a personal note, Kelly said:

"Some say Frank is tight, a kind of penny-pincher. He would rather cut than appropriate. He is none of those things. I was an altar boy with Frank, a boy scout with Frank, I grew up with Frank, a lifelong friend. He is a very warm, outgoing person, a fine person to know."

McCauley's son, Michael, speaking on behalf of the family, said of his father:

"He is humble. He has this glacial calm We have an individual who has served in public office 32 years in the city of Quincy.

"He has held every elected office in the city, some more than once. He has served in many other roles such as son, husband, veteran, father and grandfather. In a job review of his life he would be graded:

"Exceeds all expectations every single time."

He said if his father's parents, Hugh and Mary McCauley, were alive they would say, "Well done!"

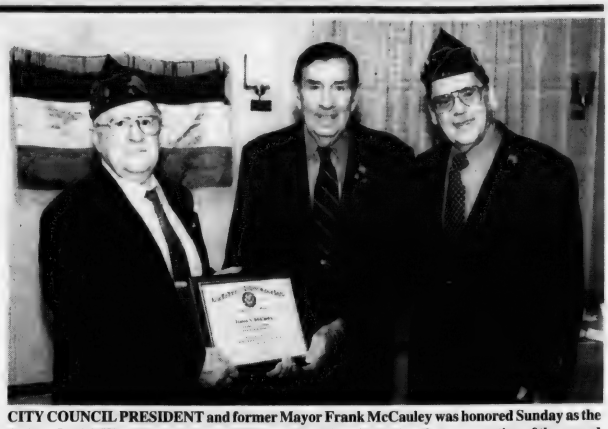
John (Jake) Comer, past National Commander of the American Legion, commended McCauley for his service to the city and to veterans. Ward 6 Councillor Alicia Gardner presented him with a citation from state Sen. Michael Morrissey and Tom Stansbury presented one from the Veterans Department.

McCauley thanked the Jewish War Veterans for honoring him as their "Citizen of the Year."

He recalled serving on the City Council Veterans Committee and attending Quincy Veterans Council meetings.

"Occasionally, you picked up something like someone trying to get around veteran's preference and we were able to alert the city council and put a stop to it. So, I'm very appreciative of the veterans. I have been very close to them."

Noting that over the years he served with many people in the city council, school committee and the mayor's office, McCauley recalled that he and Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymondi go back to 1972 when they were elected to the school committee.



"It has been a good relationship with Dan and all the councillors. I would like to thank them all as they elected me president of the council twice.

"I've had a great career in city government over the years. I've enjoyed every single minute of it. We have disagreements on the council and school committee but most of us have learned that we can disagree without being disagreeable. And that's how things get done.

"We hash it out, take the vote and then walk away. I'm leaving but I won't be far away. I'll still be down on Manet Ave."

McCauley, a four-term mayor, will close out a distinguished 32-year public service career at the end of the month.

He is the only person in the city's history to be elected to all four municipal offices: mayor, city councillor at-large, ward councillor and school committee.

MEMBERS OF THE family join Frank McCauley at the breakfast honoring him as the Quincy Jewish War Veterans "Citizen of the Year." With him from the left are daughters, Julia Tympanick and Jennifer Logue, his wife, Sandra, daughter, Melissa Higgins, and son, Michael McCauley. Also attending were his grandchildren. Due to an emergency his son, Robert, was unable to be present.

Downtown Holiday Stroll Set For Saturday

Victorian carolers, special free holiday presentations at historic sites, and sales and promotions at participating businesses are just a few of the highlights of Quincy's upcoming Downtown Holiday Stroll, to be held throughout Quincy Center from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday December 10.

With events and performances occurring at the Adams National Historical Park's Carriage House, the Dorothy Quincy Homestead, Quincy Historical Society and at several downtown businesses, the Holiday Stroll promises to be a fun and festive event for the entire family, said Jennifer Logue, executive director of Discover Quincy.

"We hope everyone will come out and get into the holiday spirit while taking advantage of the special sales and promotions to do their holiday shopping," said Logue, who noted that the National Park Service trolley would provide free shuttle service between the Visitor Center in Presidents Place and the event locations. "From presentations on colonial yuletide traditions and 18th century shadow theater to holiday musical concerts and cookies and cocoa at participating businesses, there will be something for everyone to enjoy."

To help shoppers get in the spirit of the season, the Figgy Puddin' troupe of Victorian carolers will stroll up and down Hancock Street from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. During those same hours, the Quincy Art Association will host a holiday open house at its headquarters at 26 High School Ave. In addition to holiday refreshments and artist demonstrations, the association will hold a holiday art sale featuring hand-painted porcelain holiday ornaments as well as original works of art priced under $100. A drawing will also be held for a free art class of the winner's choice.

Quilters' Compass (27B Cottage Ave.), meanwhile, invites shoppers and visitors to stop by from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. for cider, cookies and to decorate their very own square to add to the "Quincy Quilt." All decorated squares will be sewn together to make a quilt representative of life in Quincy in 2005.

"This is a great way for both individuals and organizations, like churches or non-profits, to be represented on the Quincy Quilt while participating in a fun and creative project," Logue said.

Quilters' Compass will also offer a 20 percent discount to those who sign up for a quilting class during the Holiday Stroll.

Some of Quincy's best-known historic sites will be open for free theatrical and musical presentations during the Holiday Stroll. Free arts and cultural events occurring at historic sites that day include:

Delahunt Honored For Aid To Coast Guard

Congressman William Delahunt, a Coast Guard veteran himself, has been honored for his leadership as a founding co-chair of the bipartisan Coast Guard Caucus in Congress.

The award, a reproduction of the barque "Eagle,' the Coast Guard training ship, was presented to the Congressman by Sen. Edward Kennedy in ceremonies hosted by the Navy League.

"You are more than just the tip of the sword for our homeland defense; you are the beacon of hope," Delahunt told a crowd that included Admiral Thomas Collins, the commandant of the Coast Guard.

"Because of you, our kids are less likely to use drugs; our fish stocks remain healthy; our coast lines are pristine; and, most importantly, our loved ones are watched over and protected on the high seas."

Delahunt and two colleagues, Congressmen Gene Taylor of Mississippi, a Democrat, and Howard Coble of North Carolina, a Republican, both Coast Guard veterans, formed the Coast Guard Caucus in 1997.

WILLIAM DELAHUNT

Delahunt reminisced that when he first came to Congress, the Coast Guard suffered from chronic underfunding and it was an uphill fight just to get the money for spare parts and fuel.

The real success of the caucus, he said, could be measured in elevated awareness among their congressional colleagues of the important work Coast Guardsmen and women do every day.

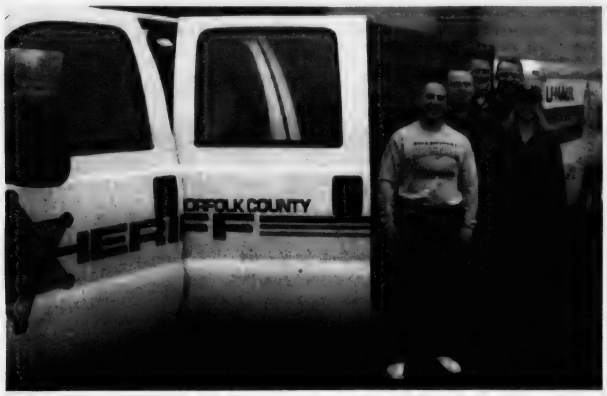
Conway Country Wins Best Commercial Float

Jack Conway Real Estate continued its award-winning tradition in the annual Quincy Christmas Parade this year, bringing home the 2005 Trophy for Best Commercial Float.

The entry featured a turreted Victorian house and a group of costumed sales agents and their families taking a "Victorian Stroll through Conway Country."

"We've been participating in the Quincy Christmas parade for many years, and it's always a grand old time," said Chairman Jack Conway. "I'm very grateful to our agents and their families who made our entry the big winner for the third consecutive year."

Founded in 1956, Norwell-based Jack Conway & Co. is the largest independent real estate company in Massachusetts with more than 1,000 sales agents in 45 offices from Boston to Cape Cod. The company is entering its 50th year of serving the real estate needs of buyers and sellers in Conway Country.



For the third year in a row, Jack Conway & Company took home the 2005 Trophy for Best Commercial Float in Quincy's Annual Christmas Parade on November 27. Many thanks to the entire Conway-Quincy sales team who decorated and rode on the float. They were: Diane Furness, Amy DeThomaso, John Pacella, Pat Foley, Jenn Kern, Steve Reilly, Olivia King, Karen Boisson, Breeah Langton-Tahbi, Kristina Brown, Rose Kelley, and Lynn Luster. Special thanks to Conway V.P. Denis Lilla, advisor to the parade committee, and to float creator and driver Eddie Corbo of Conway H.Q., who constructed the Victorian house and signage.

HEADING TO LOUISIANA with hurricane relief supplies are (front to back) Rocco Bruno, Jason Dickie, Sara Deshler, Ed Burke and Bob Durgin, all of the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office.

Help Is On The Way For Katrina Victims

Sheriff's Employees Enroute With Supplies, $20,000 For Louisiana Facility

Five employees from the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office set out recently from the correctional center in Dedham on a 1500-mile journey to deliver supplies and a check for $20,000 to staff at the Washington Correctional Institute (WCI) just north of New Orleans, an area still recovering from the devastation left behind by Hurricane Katrina.

"When we heard of the disaster in New Orleans, we knew immediately that we wanted to help," Sheriff Michael Bellotti said. "But, I wanted to be specific in our efforts."

Bellotti identified a "sister facility" in the hard hit area of Washington Parish.

"While their personal lives were in serious disarray, the 418 employees at WCI kept their facility secure, handling a population of 1,100 inmates in the aftermath of one of the biggest natural disasters in U.S. history," Bellotti said.

The Category 4 hurricane that barreled through Washington Parish, Louisiana on Aug. 29 cut a swath of destruction that leveled homes and disrupted electricity and water supplies.

The employees of the Washington Correctional Institute were no exception.

Though the correctional center was mostly unscathed, many of the employees' homes were demolished or severely damaged and some employees lost contact with family members who joined an estimated one million people displaced by the storm.

"It was a no-brainer," Bellotti said. "We were going to reach out – one correctional center to another. It made perfect sense. It was our way to help."

In just seven weeks, Sheriff Bellotti's Office filled two 200-square-foot storage bins with donated clothes, canned goods and toiletries, and also sold Katrina Relief shirts and hosted a charity golf tournament - raising more than $20,000 in all.

"I couldn't be prouder of everyone at the Sheriff's Office," Sheriff Bellotti said. "We all came together in a short amount of time and accomplished a great thing. I know the staff at WCI is very grateful. We wish them the best."

With a U-Haul trailer in tow, the Sheriff's small convoy of two vehicles and five employees set off at 9 a.m. today. Representing the Sheriff's Office are Sgt. Robert Durgin, Officer Edward Burke, Officer Sara Deshler, Assistant Deputy Superintendent Jason Dickie and Caseworker Rocco Bruno. They expect to arrive late Wednesday.

Included with the 400-square-foot trailer of clothing and non-perishable food are 2,000 feet of fire hose donated by the Hanson Fire Department and protective gear from the Avon Fire Department. The fire equipment will be distributed to local fire departments in the Washington Parish area.

All donations will be delivered to the Washington Correctional Institute. Proceeds will benefit the WCI Employee Fund.

"The outpouring of concern and help from sister facilities across the country has been amazing," WCI Deputy Warden Robert Tanner said.

"I don't know how to express our appreciation. But it sure is good to know that other professionals from across the country recognize our plight and are willing to step up and help out in a time of need.

"It truly has been great."

Board Cancels Liquor Licenses At Two Closed Businesses

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The License Board Tuesday canceled two alcoholic licenses at two popular businesses because they ceased to conduct licenses at their premises and both have closed.

Raffael's at State Street had closed for a year and has relocated in Hull.

However, Chairman Joseph Shea said owner Elio Ricci had planned to relocate Raffael's somewhere in Quincy Center but had failed to find a suitable location.

Shea said Ricci was still hopeful he would find something next year and said he was grateful to the board for holding the all-alcoholic license as long as they did.

Shea said this was not a "negative vote" to Ricci. Health Commissioner Drew Scheele said he was "sad" that Ricci couldn't find a spot in Quincy and called him a "good operator and a nice guy."

The other establishment canceled was Charlie's Mini Market, Inc., 247 Atlantic St. They had a beer and wine license.

Shea said they stopped doing business in September. Scheele said a lot of people had "grown up in that area and had eaten their famous steak and cheese subs."

The license is owned by Margaret Westgate. Shea said proper notice was sent to Westgate with no reply making it "well within our right" to cancel.

Both cancellations will be mailed to the Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission.

Council Surprises With 189% Tax Classification

(Cont'd From Page 1)

Councillor John Keenan supported the 175 recommendation, in an effort to attract business to the city.

Keenan recounted actions of Boston when they adapted the 189 tax rate.

"They hailed it as a savior," said Keenan, but residents "just paid more later on."

Keenan suggested that senior homeowners instead take advantage of other tax deferrals.

"Take a walk down Hancock St.," said Keenan, "there are at least 20 vacant store fronts... for every vacancy it costs residential taxpayers in the long run. There is a direct impact. 175 is fair."

It's not a contest of one versus the other," said former mayor Joseph LaRaia,, in support of a 189 tax rate.

In 1988 the tax classification was raised to 175 due to increasing residential property value. The council then adopted legislation to increase it to 200 percent.

Phelan recently approached LaRaia and said, "'Joe I'm coming to you with 169.' When he left that office I wondered is it really the right answer. I looked at 1988 and business paid no less than 37 percent of total taxes raised," said LaRaia.

The average in the next 14 year period was 38.6 percent.

"There was a big disruption in 2002," said LaRaia.

There was an increase of 3 percent which totaled $3 1/2 billion. In 2003 it rose to 35.5 percent then in 2004 it sunk to 31.1 percent. It continued sinking in 2005 to 29.1 percent.

"Eight percentage points approaching 10 million that residents had to pay cause it was reduced on business side," said LaRaia. "The residential community is paying for it," said LaRaia.

"The proposal of the mayor dropped to 26.6 percent. I don't think he knows you can go to 189," said LaRaia.

"One hundred and eighty-nine (percent) is not a cure-all," LaRaia continued, "but it salvages what we have lost in the past couple of years for tax payers."

"What is the equitable distribution," said Raymondi, in support of the 189 tax classification.

"There has been a $13 million shift, the combination of that shift has had devastating impact, particularly for seniors," said Raymondi.

"In 2001 the residential value was a little more than $4 billion and now it's $9 1/2 billion," Raymondi continued, "That's a $5 1/2 billion increase and I don't see that big of a difference since 2001,"

"We have to correct the imbalance, unfortunately the city council has not taken advantage of this," said Raymondi

"Business owners are paying less," said Raymondi, "I move that the mayor's recommendation be amended."

"This is not pro business versus pro residential," said city councillor Joseph Finn, who also supports the 189 amendment.

"We are the only state in the union, out of 50, where we are losing our population," said ward 6 city councillor Alicia Gardner,

"The gap between the haves and the have-nots is getting greater. Any time I can support an action that helps seniors and young home owners I'm for it," said Gardner.

Ward 1 city councillor Leo Kelly defended the 189 percentage insisting that although there are other tax exemptions for seniors, many seniors don't qualify because the prerequisites are so far out of date.

"267 seniors took advantage of exemptions. Many more than 267 own homes," said Kelly

Ward 4 city councillor James Davis III insisted that the vacant commercial property is not a result of their taxation, many of them were successful and changed locations to expand.

Davis also said that some went out of business simply because "they're not good business people."

"Let's stop talking about (downtown Quincy) like it's a terrible place. It's a great place, and it's safe."

"I'm going to support 189 because it's the right thing to do this year, and not worry about the past," said Davis.

Residential property is booming with the construction of new apartments and condos, and the expansion of apartments into condos which increases its property value.

Adversely Quincy is losing business property, with commercial land becoming residential or remaining a vacant lot.

"There has been a shift in value," said Fantucchio. "We have not had too much commercial construction."

This may change with the construction of a new ramp to the highway, which is expected to necessitate the construction of one or two more office buildings.

FIRE SAFETY

by Captain Tom Lyons
Fire Prevention Bureau
Quincy Fire Department

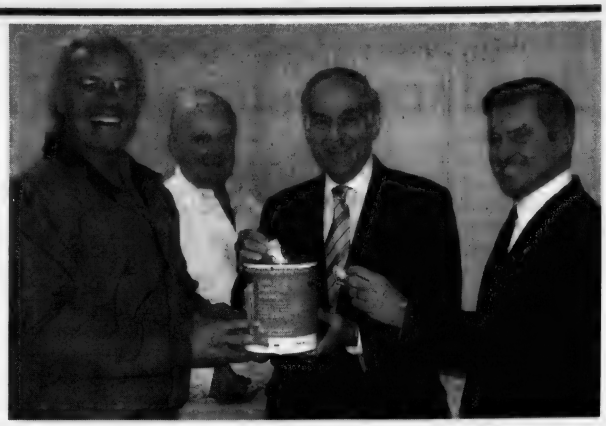
Illegal Parking Can Hinder Fighting A Fire

I suggest to suppression personnel in this Department that if there is a topic they believe is worth conveying to the public and that will either help prevent fire or facilitate suppression activities during a fire, that I will gladly do so. Here is one such topic.

I was approached by an officer the other day and told of an incident where fire apparatus could not gain access to a building with a reported kitchen fire where a vehicle was illegally parked on a street corner. This parked vehicle restricted their access to the street where the building was located. Meanwhile, the trucks had to stop there, some distance from the building, well short of immediate access.

A situation like this can severely complicate suppression tactics by adding valuable minutes onto the time it takes to gain access to and extinguish a fire. Instead of attention being placed upon sizing up the situation upon arrival, focus is diverted to gaining access while the fire continues to burn and time is lost. Therefore I'd like to bring to your attention here a few City Ordinances, which attempt to eliminate situation like this where emergency vehicles are severely hampered and obstructed.

One such Ordinance specifies that unless a street is posted with a sign specifying otherwise, there shall be no parking, "Upon any street or highway within twenty feet of an intersecting way..." If this ordinance had been adhered to on that day, responding emergency apparatus could have made the swing around that corner and would not have experienced a delay.



While I'm on the subject, another ordinance specifies that there shall be no parked car, "Upon any street or highway within ten feet of a fire hydrant." The vast majority of fires are extinguished with water and we have to have immediate access to it.

On some of the smaller side streets where vehicles are parked on both sides we ask that residents consider that emergency vehicles must still be able to pass and travel unobstructed along that roadway. In such an instance our ordinance specifies maintaining "... a clear and unobstructed lane at least ten feet wide for passing traffic." I suggest here that 10 feet is a minimum width needed. Consideration should be given to the fact that these responding vehicles are attempting to do so safely and promptly to be successful.

The Quincy Police Department has been very cooperative over the years in assisting us when we are aware of an instance of obstruction due to illegally parked vehicles. However, we still need your proactive cooperation in allowing us to do our job safely and quickly as well. It is our earnest intention to respond and offer quality care and attention at an incident and time can be a determining factor in success or failure. Kindly adhere to these ordinances while minimizing any hindrance to our efforts. Someone's life may depend on your cooperation.

Thank you for your cooperation!

Have A Happy, Safe Holiday Shopping Season

By KATE McSHANE

With the busy holiday season fast approaching, many people are getting ready to do some serious shopping.

It is important to remember during this hectic time to be vigilant about safety. During this season, shoppers are often pre-occupied, making them easier targets of crime.

There are many people out shopping at all times, so those that prey on the unsuspecting have a broader range of potential victims.

To make this a safe holiday season, here are some safety tips:

• Shopping during the daytime is usually safer. Park in well-lit areas and try to shop with a family member or friend.

• Wear comfortable clothes and do not wear expensive jewelry.

• Leave your purse or wallet at home. Carry your cash or credit card in your front pocket or distribute it to more than one pocket. A thief will move on to an easier victim. If it is necessary to bring your purse, make sure the strap can go over your shoulders and that it can rest under your arm. Remember, even though you know there is very little value in your purse, the thief sees a bag of opportunity.

• Do not carry and expose large amounts of cash. Use your credit card or a check for any purchases.

• Do not get distracted by carrying too many packages at once. Take more than one trip to the store or drop some in your car and go back for more. Leave packages in your trunk, out of sight, and not on the front or backseat. Always lock your car doors and make sure the windows are rolled up.

• Keep a close eye on your children. If you must bring them shopping, make sure they stay with you at all times. Constantly be aware of your surroundings. Look at who is around you and beware of strangers who approach you.

Holiday shopping is not always done in the stores; it is becoming increasingly popular online. It is important to be as safe online as you would anywhere else. Make sure that you find the company's privacy policy and that the server is secure before you give out your personal and financial information.

Read over all return and refund policies before buying and make sure to print out copies of all purchases for your own records. Paying by credit card is the best option for consumers because it offers the most customer protection.

Whether you are shopping online or in the stores this year, remember to protect yourself. Just keep these simple tips in mind and have a safe and enjoyable holiday shopping season. Happy Holidays!

(Kate McShane is an intern at the Quincy Police Department.)

Morrissey Honored With MASSCAP Service Award

The Massachusetts Association for Community Action (MASSCAP) honored Senator Michael Morrissey with a MASSCAP Self-Sufficiency Public Service Award at its recent 8th annual luncheon in the Great Hall of the Massachusetts State House.

"This award celebrates Senator Morrissey's commitment to the goal of self-sufficiency for all citizens of the Commonwealth," said Beth Ann Strollo, Executive Director of Quincy Community Action Programs.

Morrissey is Chairman of the Telecommunications, Utilities & Energy Committee and has been a leader in the effort to provide more state assistance to help low-income families and elderly pay their fuel bills.

"Energy and utility bills could increase 20-30% this winter and Senator Morrissey has been a leader in this effort to provide more state help," said Joseph Diamond, executive director of Massachusetts Community Action Programs. Senator Morrissey has been a consistent supporter of community action programs in his district, which includes Abington, Braintree, Holbrook and Rockland.

MICHAEL MORRISSEY

"one of my chief goals in the Senate has been to develop and support innovative public policy measures that enable low-income and working people to achieve self-sufficiency and independence," Morrissey said.

"It is critical we help individuals, particularly our elderly and disabled, to heat and light their homes and provide ongoing financial help to this low-income community to pay their utility bills. I have been fortunate to have the support of the House and Senate leadership to increase the state's commitment to our heating assistance programs for people with income up to 200% of this poverty level."

Governor Mitt Romney has signed the Fuel Assistance Bill and Energy Efficiency bills, which were sponsored by Morrissey.

For over 40 years, the 24 agencies that make up MASSCAP have been providing Massachusetts residents with basic support services, programs to promote self-sufficiency and economic security and training initiatives.

"It is truly an honor to be recognized by MASSCAP for this work and cooperation we have enjoyed for years in helping people meet today's financial challenges," said Morrissey.

Cut-A-Thon Raises Funds For Katrina Victims

Students and faculty of the Mansfield Beauty Schools will sponsor a Cut-A-Thon today (Thursday) from 9 to 11 a.m., 1 to 2:30 p.m. and 5 to 6:30 p.m. at 200 Parkingway with income from haircuts and manicures to benefit the Red Cross Katrina Fund.

"We decided to hold a fundraiser so the victims of the Katrina hurricane know that we have not forgotten," said the school's announcement, noting that, three month later, only 60,000 of 500,000 people are living in New Orleans where only two of eight hospitals are functioning.

For more information on the Cut-A-Thon call 617-479-1090.

Electrical Safety Foundation Encourages AFCI Installation During Home Renovations

Home renovations add value, and they also present a prime opportunity for an investment to improve a home's electrical safety.

The Electrical Safety Foundation International (ESFI) is urging consumers to install arc fault circuit interrupters (AFCIs) to protect all of the circuits throughout the home during renovations.

AFCIs are electrical safety devices designed to prevent fires caused by dangerous electrical arcs. Arc faults are one of the major causes of the 73,500 residential electrical fires that occur each year.

"Use of new AFCI technology could prevent 50 to 75 percent of these fires, saving hundreds of lives, reducing thousands of injuries and nearly $1 billion in property damage annually," said Anne Mayberry, ESFI program manager.

Arc faults do not necessarily create a sustained short circuit that causes a traditional circuit breaker to trip or a fuse to blow, but can result in hot spots in wiring that can lead to a fire. AFCIs recognize the unique signature of harmful arcs and shut off the circuit to prevent a fire hazard.

Arcs can occur along the circuit in residential electrical systems and at outlets and switches, behind walls. Hidden electrical fires can spread rapidly, delaying detection by smoke alarms, reducing the chances of survival. Conditions that trigger arc faults include:

- Damaged wires from nails driven into walls;
- Cracked insulations on wires due to aging or stress;
- Frayed wires at stress points;
- Loose or improper connections, faulty electrical equipment; and
- Overheated electrical wires.

ESFI recommends having AFCIs installed on all general purpose circuits throughout the home, particularly in older homes where arcing hazards could have developed over several years.

For more information on electrical safety and arcs, visit the ESFI web site (www.electrical-safety.org).

Holiday Clothing Drive At Norfolk County Registry Of Deeds

Register Bill O'Donnell and the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds have joined with the Neponset Valley Rotary Club in a Holiday Clothing Drive to help the homeless.

"The Registry is asking for donations of new socks, underwear, gloves and hats," O'Donnell said. "Donations can be dropped off at the collection box in the lobby at the Registry of Deeds anytime during business hours.

"I hope that real estate professionals and members of the public whose business brings them to the Registry of Deeds will consider contributing to this effort."

The clothing drive ends Dec. 22. In addition, financial contributions can be mailed directly to: "Neponset Valley Rotary Club Clothing Drive", P.O. Box 4031, Dedham, MA 02027, and will be used to purchase additional clothing for area homeless shelters.

The Registry of Deeds, located at 649 High St., Dedham, is the principal office for real property in Norfolk County.

Hints For Homeowners

Building Wealth Through Home Ownership

(NAPS) – Purchasing a home can be a significant step toward financial security. However, analysts say it's the equity you build in a home- not the house itself- that drives your prosperity.

Home equity can be used to fun significant life events such as retirement, a wedding or college costs. Equity is determined by the value of your house, less the balance of your mortgage. If your home is worth $100,000 and your mortgage is $85,000, you have $15,000 of equity, or 15 percent ownership. "Investing in a home is a time-tested way of building wealth," said Lee Farkas, Chairman of Taylor Bean and Whitaker Mortgage Corp., a leading national wholesale mortgage lender. "What borrowers need to understand is that it's really important to choose a loan that helps them build equity."

Loans are Not Created Equal

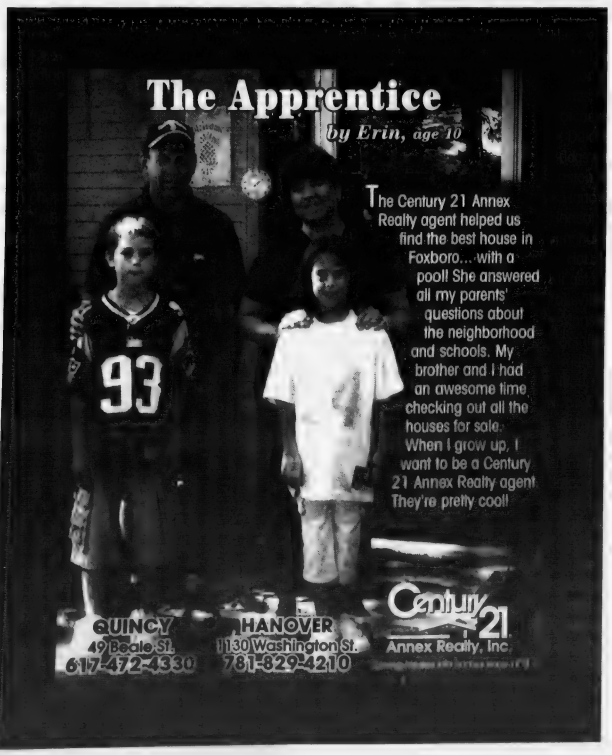
Some mortgages may offer low initial rates, but the lower payment is often achieved by deferring principal repayment- meaning you may not build equity for several years.

For example, five years after taking out a $100,000 mortgage, a borrower who deferred the principal and part of the interest would not only have no equity, but also would owe about $10,000 more than the amount originally borrowed. A borrower who made interest-only payments would have no equity and would still owe the full loan amount. However, a borrower with a 30-year fixed-rate mortgage (FRM) whose payment includes interest and principal would have reduced the loan balance and built up equity of more than $6,000.

Finding Safer Bets

With mortgage insurance, buyers with a down payment of three percent or less can qualify for a traditional 30-year FRM that will build equity at a faster rate than non-traditional loans. Mortgage insurance lets borrowers with less than 20 percent down payment purchase a home by providing lender coverage against borrower default.

"Mortgage insurance means you can get the loan for the house you want, despite a low down payment. It's a great tool to help you get into a home and start building personal wealth today," said Steve Smith, President and CEO of PMI Mortgage Insurance Co.



Unlike nontraditional mortgages, payments on a 30-year FRM with mortgage insurance will be the same each month, so borrowers can budget and plan for the future. Mortgage insurance will be canceled automatically when your loan balance reaches 78 percent of the home's original value, or you can request cancellation when you reach 20 percent equity or ownership.

How Much Do You Know About Heating A Home?

How much do you know about heating your home?

(NAPS) Americans may face higher energy bills this year. Taking this quick quiz may help you understand what this could mean for you.

1. America's most popular heating fuel is a) oil, b) natural gas, c) electricity?

2. The average natural gas bill may increase by an average of a)25 percent, b) 48 percent, c) 61 percent?

3. Natural gas prices go up and down because of a) heating demand, b) cooling demand, c) natural gas production?

4. Natural gas utilities are helping to stabilize prices through a) billing plans, b) storage, c) sales.

5. To help lower natural gas prices, Congress is promoting a) energy efficiency, b) a more diverse mix of fuels, c)construction of a pipeline from Alaska.

Answers.

1. b) Natural gas is America's most popular home heating fuel, heating 52 percent of the nation's homes (more than all other forms of energy combined).

2. b) Consumers who heat with fuel oil, propane and electricity will pay more this year too.

3. All of the above. Weather is the biggest factor in how much you pay for natural gas. It can affect production and supply (hurricanes can force workers to leave the rigs), and also affect how much energy customers use (demand).

4. a) and b) Customers can also use energy more efficiently, such as replacing old furnaces, insulating their homes and installing programmable thermostats.

Natural gas utilities also use hedging in more than half the states. Hedging is a tool that allows utilities to use future contracts and weather risk insurance to stabilize prices.

5. All of the above. Congress passed a major energy law in 2005 to spur additional natural gas production while promoting energy efficiency and a more diverse mix of fuels to generate electric power.

To help further, experts at the American Gas Association say Congress should increase funding for the Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program (LIHEAP). They could also increase imports of liquefied natural gas and encourage more natural gas production.

Hints For Homeowners: A Look At Windows

(NAPS) When purchasing windows for a new home- or replacing windows in your existing home- it's important to consider not only the style of windows you're interested in, but also the materials from which the windows are made.

Traditional wood windows provide design flexibility, including countless options of shapes and sizes, along with the various options to paint or stain the interior to match the decor inside the home. Wood windows are naturally strong, which provides additional structural support for the home. Wood is naturally energy-efficient, providing up to 1,100 times the insulating value of aluminum. Like a fine piece of furniture, the beautiful, rich, warm tones of wood windows provide a home with character and charm.

For a low-maintenance option on the exterior of your wood windows, look for extruded aluminum cladding to protect the wood from the harsh elements and everyday dents and scrapes. The finish on your cladding should meet American Architectural Manufacturer's Association specifications.

Commercial grade finishes offer protection from weathering, aging and fading.

Pultruded fiberglass windows are a fast-growing alternative to vinyl and aluminum windows. Pultruded fiberglass is made of thin, strong cables of glass, saturated with specially compounded resins to create a remarkably durable material. The glass core makes pultruded fiberglass windows highly resistant to expansion or contraction.

If you are looking to purchase windows for a new home that are both energy efficient and low maintenance, one option to consider is Integrity from Marvin, which has been using Ultrex, a state-of-the-art pultruded fiberglass, for more than 10 years to provide the ultimate low-maintenance windows for your new home.

Pultruded fiberglass is also available in replacement windows for your home. If you are remodeling your home and looking for energy-efficient windows that re virtually maintenance free, Infinity from Marvin uses Ultrex both inside and out.

For more information about purchasing windows for your new home or remodeling project, call Marvin Windows and Doors at (888) 537-8268 or visit marvin.com.

Compost Chemistry

Q. I started to compost this summer. All I used was grass clippings. There was a huge pile, now it is half the size and has an odor like cow manure. I have turned it quite a few times, but there seem to be large slabs and not the earth or compost like I thought I would have. Any suggestions? — Real F., via e-mail

A. Too much green stuff! Not enough brown stuff! That's a cute phrase on a composting Web site hosted by the state of Michigan. It's also a fast way to describe a good balance for a compost pile.

Because you're using 100 percent grass clippings, a lot of nitrogen likely is building up in the compost. And even though you're turning the pile regularly, the matter is not breaking down evenly. There may be too much moisture, and not enough air, reaching the interior of the pile.

To resolve this, add more brown stuff! Meaning mix in wood chips, straw or sawdust, dry leaves or pine needles. Pile up brown stuff to the same height as the current compost pile, and then mix it all in well with a shovel and/or pitchfork. The compost pile will return to about two-thirds or more of its original size. However, the "hot compost action" will take off again, so in a few months you'll have a smaller pile again — only this time without the funky smell.

What if you're a composter whose pile is damp and smells sweet? You're having the opposite problem — not enough nitrogen in the mix. Too much brown, not enough green. Add grass clippings, food scraps — anything still green and alive. Be sure to place the food scraps in a hole in the center of the compost pile and cover them well with completed compost material (or just plain dirt). In a few weeks to a couple of months, the pile should be working along pretty well — in fact the temperature in the center of the compost pile should be significantly warmer than the outside air.

And that leads to another problem: a compost pile that does not heat up, not even a little bit. The composting action is minimal in this case. Make sure the pile is the right size: 3 feet in diameter by 3 feet high is ideal. A too-large or too-small pile won't compost efficiently. Make sure it is moist, but not too moist. A pile that dries out quickly should be sprayed with a hose and covered with a tarp between turnings. A tarp also protects the pile from animals, which will forage if scraps aren't properly covered or if meat products are placed in the pile.

Holiday Shopping Safety

By KATE MCSHANE

With the busy holiday season fast approaching, many people are getting ready to do some serious shopping.

It is important to remember during this hectic time to be vigilant about safety. During this season, shoppers are often pre-occupied, making them easier targets of crime.

There are many people out shopping at all times, so those that prey on the unsuspecting have a broader range of potential victims.

To make this a safe holiday season, here are some safety tips:

• Shopping during the daytime is usually safer. Park in well-lit areas and try to shop with a family member or friend.

• Wear comfortable clothes and do not wear expensive jewelry.

• Leave your purse or wallet at home. Carry your cash or credit card in your front pocket or distribute it to more than one pocket. A thief will move on to an easier victim. If it is necessary to bring your purse, make sure the strap can go over your shoulders and that it can rest under your arm. Remember, even though you know there is very little value in your purse, the thief sees a bag of opportunity.

• Do not carry and expose large amounts of cash. Use your credit card or a check for any purchases.

• Do not get distracted by carrying too many packages at once. Take more than one trip to the store or drop some in your car and go back for more. Leave packages in your trunk, out of sight, and not on the front or backseat. Always lock your car doors and make sure the windows are rolled up.

• Keep a close eye on your children. If you must bring them shopping, make sure they stay with you at all times. Constantly be aware of your surroundings. Look at who is around you and beware of strangers who approach you.

Holiday shopping is not always done in the stores; it is becoming increasingly popular online. It is important to be as safe online as you would anywhere else. Make sure that you find the company's privacy policy and that the server is secure before you give out your personal and financial information.

Read over all return and refund policies before buying and make sure to print out copies of all purchases for your own records. Paying by credit card is the best option for consumers because it offers the most customer protection.

Whether you are shopping online or in the stores this year, remember to protect yourself. Just keep these simple tips in mind and have a safe and enjoyable holiday shopping season. Happy Holidays!

A Job Well Done

By LT. DAN MINTON
Quincy Police Crime Prevention Officer

On Nov. 25, 2005, at approximately 7:30 p.m., Officers John O'Donnell and Karen Barkas were working an undercover assignment at a liquor store in the Washington Street area.

LT. DAN MINTON

They were part of the "Cops in Shops" program, which aims to catch people over 21 buying for minors as well as catch minors who try to buy alcohol with fake identification.

Officer O'Donnell was conducting surveillance on the outside area and Officer Barkas was positioned inside posing as a clerk. Officer O'Donnell observed a male drive into the parking lot and enter the store, where Officer Barkas watched him as he attempted to purchase alcohol.

When asked for identification, the male (suspect) gave an Arizona license to the clerk. The clerk told the suspect he needed a Massachusetts license. The suspect then left the store, went to his vehicle, then returned to the clerk with a Massachusetts license.

Since he had already tried to use an out-of-state license, Officer Barkas examined the license and then scanned it in a computer to check its validity. When told his license would not scan and there was a problem, the suspect blurted out, "I'm 28. That's my Mass. license. I'm 28 years old." Officer Barkas then identified herself as a police officer and watched as the suspect's face dropped in what could best be described as surprise and anguish.

A check of the suspect's actual Massachusetts license status showed that not only was the suspect 27 years old, but that his license to drive was suspended in Massachusetts. Although Officer Barkas did not see the suspect driving, Officer O'Donnell did witness the suspect drive in from a public way, Washington Street, into a parking area used for public access.

The suspect, a 27-year-old male from Quincy, was arrested for "Operating a Motor Vehicle with a Suspended License," and his license seized as evidence. Nice work!

The "Cops in Shops" program is a community-wide, cooperative effort between retailers and law enforcement to deter minors from attempting to purchase alcohol and stop adults who buy alcohol for minors.

Lieutenant Peter Turowski, liquor inspector for the Quincy Police Department and coordinator of this program, stated, "Cops in Shops is a proven program aimed at deterring and preventing minors from attempting to purchase alcohol. What young people will not know is when we will be there. It could be any time, at any place. Our advice is not to risk it. We have tough laws in Massachusetts and in Quincy. We enforce it."

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

Walking Program Gives Measure of Success

Q. Can you really lose weight by just walking? I have read articles and seen exercise programs that promote walking as a way to lose weight, but this seems too easy. What's the catch?

A. Walking is a great way to exercise, and yes, it can help in weight management when used as part of a healthy lifestyle. As we all know, there is no one miracle exercise that will solve all of our fitness problems. Walking, however, can definitely move you closer to your goals.

Most people walk throughout the day in their homes, office buildings and stores. This type of movement can help elevate your heart rate and burn some calories, which is great. But the type of walking mentioned in weight-loss articles and TV shows usually refers to walking programs, which normally include a 30-40 minute schedule of walks that are designed to improve your performance if completed consistently.

These programs may include intervals where you change the pace of your walking for short periods of time. They may also have a goal of walking a designated distance, or completing a distance in a designated time. Each program would help your heart and the rest of your body become stronger and gain endurance.

To make a walking program "work," it is recommended that you have the other parts of your lifestyle in tune. This would include proper nutrition and other activities that challenge your body, such as resistance training and other cardiovascular exercises.

Among the benefits of a walking program are: No equipment needed; you can walk with family and friends; you can walk year-round; and you can see your progress by how much farther and faster you're able to walk.

Always speak with your physician before starting any exercise program. If you have a heart condition or are on medication, talk with your doctor about modifications you may need to make to your walking program.

The bottom line is that there is really no "catch." A progressive walking program along with proper nutrition and other healthy lifestyle choices can get you closer to the results you desire. Get moving!

Older People At Risk For Hypothermia

BY SHARRON BEALS

Many lower the thermostat to 60 or 65 degrees before turning in for the night to conserve heating costs, however, being too conservative could lead to hypothermia and has, especially among older people.

"Up to 50,000 older Americans, many over 80, are hospitalized with hypothermia each winter," according to a recent article published by Tufts University.

Hypothermia is a body temperature of 95 degrees or lower that develops as the body loses more than it can produce. The temperature drop can occur in hours or days, depending on the type of conditions to which a person is exposed. In its early stages, hypothermia causes fatigue, weakness, poor coordination, lethargy, and drowsiness.

If a mildly hypothermic person is found early enough, he or she can be warmed up with hot beverages or by lying in a warm bed. But if the body temperature falls lower than 90 degrees, body systems, heart, lungs, nerves, brain and muscles gradually slow down. Breathing and heartbeat slow, too, and can eventually stop. About half of elderly people who develop serious hypothermia die from it.

Older people are considered at higher risk for hypothermia because the regulatory systems by which they generate or conserve body heat may no longer be fine-tuned enough to cope with conditions that a younger person might easily be able to withstand.

Consider one way in which the body regulates temperature is by altering the circulation of the blood, which carries heat. Contracting certain blood vessels helps slow the flow of heat to the skin, fingers, toes, ears and nose, places where it dissipates from the body, and keep it closer to vital organs at the body's core.

Dilating the blood vessels does the opposite, moving heat from the core towards the extremities so that it can leave the body more quickly. But the involuntary nervous system that governs this contraction and dilation process loses efficiency with age, so an older person's "thermostat" may not kick in as quickly or as well, and too much heat may be lost from the outer parts of the body. Older people may also sense temperature changes differently and thus not even be aware that they're becoming too cold.

Shivering, which uses the muscle activity of shaking to generate heat, is another line of defense against encroaching cold. But older people have less muscle mass to use in shivering, which makes it less effective, and their nervous systems may be slower to prompt shivering in the first place when the air temperature drops.

What's more, older people, very old people in particular, have less insulation against the cold because the layer of protective fat under the skin tends to thin with age.

Certain illnesses, many of them more common in later years, can also change the way the body responds to cold. For instance, any disease that limits activity, such as severe arthritis or Parkinson's disease, decreases the amount of heat you're able to produce with everyday moving around.

Conditions that cause paralysis, such as stroke, can interfere wit the muscles' ability to shiver. Diseases like diabetes or thyroid disorders can affect the body's ability to regulate heat as well.

Many medications may work against the body's ability to regulate temperature, too according to experts at the University of Maryland School of Pharmacy. There have been some case reports with benzodiazepines such as lorazepam (Ativan) and alprazolam (Xanax). Other medications commonly implicated are antipsychotics such as haloperidol (Haldol) and risperidone (Risperdal). Even some blood pressure drugs such as clonidine (Catapres) affect temperature regulation.

To be sure, one shouldn't stop taking a medication for fear of developing hypothermia. There are several things one can do to protect yourself or someone else.

As people get older they need to know the signs of hypothermia. They can easily be overlooked, since the confusion, memory loss, and clumsiness the condition can cause might resemble symptoms of Alzheimer's disease or other conditions linked with aging.

Symptoms also include irritability, poor judgement, sleepiness, slow reactions and slurred speech. Furthermore, not just hands and feet but also a person's back and stomach may feel cold to the touch.

Be aware that although hypothermia is generally considered to be a body temperature of 95 degrees or lower, some home thermometers don't even register below 96 degrees. If you see a temperature that low, call your doctor to find out whether it needs to be measured more accurately.

When taking your own or someone else's temperature, make sure to shake down the thermometer all the way. Cases of hypothermia have been missed in emergency rooms because the hospital personnel failed to do so.

The experts tell us if taking medication to ask your doctor if it might be putting you at extra risk for hypothermia. If he or she says you can switch medications or change dosage, do so.

It is suggested that we keep our house temperature at a minimal of 68 to 70 degrees, even at night. If you're concerned about the cost, try heating one or two rooms at a time. Some states have programs that can help with the expense of heating or weatherizing your home.

To trap your own body heat, dress like the skiers, in layers indoors and out. Don't be shy about wearing a hat inside, or even a nightcap to bed.

Experts also warn us not to be tempted to drink an alcoholic nightcap to warm up. The warm tingle actually results from the alcohol works to dilate your blood vessels, causing you to lose heat more quickly than you otherwise would.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

CHALLENGING CONVENTIONAL WISDOM

While dental experts previously thought that adults generally being to develop gum disease in their late-30s or early 40s, new research shows that twenty-somethings are showing more signs of periodontal problems, especially in and around their wisdom teeth. Periodontal disease is a progressive condition, in which bacteria attack gums and the roots of teeth. When researchers recently studied approximately 400 people in their 20s who planned to keep their wisdom teeth, they found that about one-quarter of them had periodontal disease with no obvious signs or symptoms of the disease. This is the first time wisdom teeth have been systematically examined in large study, offering one more factor to take into account when considering having your wisdom teeth extracted.

Most problems with wisdom teeth develop in people between the ages of 15 and 25. It makes good sense to start preventive measures against dental disease as soon as possible. When was the last time you had a complete dental exam? We make a thorough evaluation of existing and potential problems. Nothing is more economical than regular checkups. Small developing problems can be corrected before they become serious problems. Call us today at 617-479-6220 to schedule a convenient appointment for the highest quality dental care. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. It is a good idea to have your third molars evaluated before age 25.

North Quincy Boys 'Should Be Competitive'

BASKETBALL

By CHRIS POISSON

The North Quincy High School boys' basketball team is loaded with experience with seven returnees, a couple of whom were league all-stars.

And after those players ended last season with a well-played 66-60 loss to a powerful Bridgewater-Raynham squad in the state tournament, optimism permeates the gym on Hancock Street.

"We're excited and anxious to start the season," said head coach Jim Rendle, whose team went 10-10 last year. "As long as we stay healthy, we should be competitive.

"Experience is something we have. The kids seemed real focused right now. They have a strong worth ethic in practice. They just can't wait to start playing and that's a good sign. They're upbeat and very positive."

The Red Raiders tip off their season next week on the road. They head to Marshfield Tuesday and to Bridgewater-Raynham Friday, both games starting at 6:30 p.m.

Like his girls' volleyball program, Rendle has set up a tough schedule early on for his players in hopes it prepares them for Atlantic Coast League action. North Quincy battles Barnstable in the home opener Dec. 20 and will compete in the Chelsea Holiday Tournament Dec. 28 and 29.

"We schedule a difficult schedule as much as we can," Rendle said. "It will give us a good test in the beginning of the year and will let us see where we are heading into league play and competing for the title."

Returning for their final season are seniors Kyle Costa, John Murray, Kevin Donovan, Akil Benjamin, Joe Howlett, Imad Elkatrib, Tom Power and James Mullaney. All of them are capable of starting, which will depend on the match-up.

A four-year starter, Costa is an all-star point guard who can bury the outside shot, including deep-range three-pointers, and handle the ball flawlessly, with the ability to break presses by himself.

"The ball will be in good hands most of the game when he has it," Rendle said.

Murray is a three-year starter who has battled the injury bug the past two seasons. When healthy, the 6-foot, 4-inch center is a dominate force in the paint on both the offensive and defensive ends of the floor.

Donovan is coming off an all-star season in which he led the team in rebounding as a 6-3 guard. Rendle said with his versatility and length, he'll see some more playing time inside this year.

Benjamin (forward) and Howlett (guard/forward) will start most nights with Elkatrib (guard/forward) quickly jumping off the bench to provide a spark. Power can also play both positions and Mullaney is a guard.

Up from the JV team are senior guards Jade Pina and Jon Eaton and junior guard/forward Matt Edgerly. Sophomore guard Tim Kerrins rounds out the roster.

"We have a lot players returning to varsity with experience and we have some JV kids on the team that are improving and stepping up," Rendle said. "We have some depth. We have seven players that could start which is a nice luxury to have."

Home Opener Tuesday Vs. Marshfield

North Girls' Goal: Return To State Tourney

The North Quincy High School girls' basketball team has good reason to believe it can get back to the state tournament for the seventh time in eight years.

Despite its concern of losing all-stars Shauna Kelly and Sarah Goreham to graduation, the Red Raiders still have one all-star and seven players returning from last year's 14-9 squad.

"I think it will be an interesting year," said head coach Doug MacFarlane, whose team fell in the first round of the tourney last year. "It's hard to lose two players like that. We need some players to step it up this year. We had a good year last year and hopefully we can repeat that again."

"I think we'll be competitive and we're looking to make the tournament," he added. "Our other goal is to look at the league title. Whitman-Hanson has most of their team back so they're the cream of the crop."

The Red Raiders open their season next week at home with Marshfield Tuesday and Brockton Friday, both games starting at 6:30 p.m. They have an 11-day break before participating in the Chelsea Holiday Tournament Dec. 27 and 29.

Sophomore forward Rebecca Goreham will be looked upon to make up for some of the scoring left behind by her older sister, Sarah. She is coming off an all-star season in which she nearly averaged a double-double, scoring just under 10 points and grabbing nine rebounds.

"Hopefully she can pick up her scoring a bit and keep up her rebounding," MacFarlane said. "Her sister Sarah was our big scorer last year and we need to replace her offense."

Starting with Goreham in the front court are senior tri-captains Elyse O'Connell and Kayla Lenane, a transfer from Bridgewater-Raynham last year who tore her ACL in the first practice and missed the entire season.

Senior tri-captain Kelly Barden returns to come off the bench along with sophomore first-year players Jillian Benn and Catherine Feeney, who is nursing a sprained ankle.

In the back court, junior Megan Therrien will start at the point and will be paired with junior Lauren Stille. Backups include senior Britney Papile and sophomores Kasey O'Connell, Paige Bonanni and Mary Kate Stille.

"Hopefully the guards can pick up the scoring slack, too," MacFarlane said. "They're our better shooters and if teams play zone against us hopefully we can get some open shots for them.

"We have a nice mix. We have some decent size up front and our guards are small and quick. We're going to run and run. I don't think we'll be a good set-up offense. We're going to try to score in transition and hopefully that will be our forte."

BEWARE OF FLOODED ENGINES

By some estimates, up to 350,000 vehicles were damaged by hurricanes Katrina and Rita, and auto experts are warning consumers to be aware of unscrupulous dealers and brokers who may try to pawn off these vehicles on unsuspecting used-car buyers. Half of all vehicles damaged by Hurricane Floyd (1999) were put back on the road. The fact is that when vehicles become submerged in salt water, it corrodes electrical systems, wreaks havoc with the engine, and rusts body panels. Even so, flood vehicles may be cleaned up and marketed to unwary buyers. To avoid this possibility, always work with reputable dealers and brokers whom you can trust and who can provide clear documentation about the vehicle's past history.

Always be sure you can trust the company you buy your used car from. At LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO, you can always trust our knowledge and advice. SCOTT DEWARE

A Thought For The Week

This would be a happier world if people always reached proper conclusions based on the evidence they see or hear. Too many times we are took quick to criticize and then afterwards we are sorry that we have been so harsh. Too many times we speak biting words before we realize the true circumstances of the situation. Wrong conclusions are too easily reached too often. Here is a good example:

A man was walking down a road enjoying the scenery and did not see an approaching car. The driver blew his horn but the man kept on walking, unaware of the oncoming car. The driver used his brakes and lightly tapped the man down. The scared driver immediately stopped and when he saw the man was unhurt, he immediately condemned the man harshly. In a moment's time, however, the driver was ashamed of his hostile words. The driver discovered the pedestrian was deaf and obviously could not hear the horn...

Yes, biting words can often be spoken before we realize the true circumstances. It is not best to exercise caution before reaching a conclusion – which could be wrong?...

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You might feel that you have all the answers right now. But it might be wise to listen to other ideas before you decide to close the lid on other possibilities.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Bovines give and expect loyalty, so it might not be easy to reconcile with someone you feel let you down. Why not ask a neutral party to set up a clear-the-air meeting?

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Anticipating the holidays with family and friends fuels your must-do Gemini energies. But try to pace yourself so you'll be up for whatever comes along later.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) More background information might come through regarding a decision you expect to make. Be sure to check the source carefully before you move.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) The strong, nurturing nature of the Lion comes through this week as you reach out to family and friends in need of your warm and loving support.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A relationship that has almost totally unraveled could be close to being restored with more effort on your part to be more patient and less judgmental.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your sense of fair play is strong this week, which can cause a problem with a longtime relationship. But in the end, you'll know what decision to make.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You might not know all the facts behind an unwelcome development, so keep that Scorpion temper in check and resist lashing out at anyone.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) This is a good time to reinforce relationships — family, friends, colleagues — that might have been overlooked in recent years.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Family situations continue to thrive. Business associations also improve. Some holiday plans might have to be shifted a bit. Be flexible.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Avoid any influence of negative energy in this week's aspect by not allowing small problems to grow into large ones. Work them out immediately.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A friend might need advice on how to deal with a challenge to his or her moral values. And who better than you to give the honest answer? Good luck.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a sense of adventure that inspires others to follow your lead.

City To Use College Payment For Taxes

according to Chief Assessor Marion Fantucchio. Excess levy capacity is the difference between the amount the city is allowed to charge taxpayers by law and the amount taxpayers are actually being charged. The city's excess levy capacity is now $6,391,796.

City Council President Frank McCauley, long considered the City Council's financial guru, praised Phelan for his work on the city's finances at Monday's tax classification meeting. McCauley jokingly lamented Phelan surpassing his record for largest free cash certification in city history.

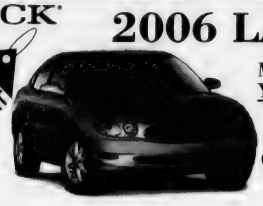
"The excess levy capacity represents more than $6 million that our taxpayers will not have to pay because of sound planning and fiscal management," Phelan said. "Quincy is in the unique position of having stabilized taxes, increased our excess levy capacity and increased our reserves simultaneously. There are few, if any, municipalities in the Commonwealth that can claim that."

Supplemental Budget Earmarks Funds For Quincy Parks, Manet

Quincy would receive a healthy share of the state's $241 million supplemental budget for Fiscal 2006 that addresses funding deficits and money for certain local projects and programs.

The legislation provides $55 million for Chapter 90 roadway funds to cities and towns, $7 million for police body armor as well as establishment of an emergency supply of medication for seniors in Medicaid or Prescription Advantage.

"The city of Quincy would also receive $175,556 in payment in lieu of taxes (PILOT) for certain state land within its borders," said Sen. Michael Morrissey. State-owned properties cannot be taxed by municipalities, however the state does provide some assistance based on a formula."



Quincy may also receive $100,000 for improvements and upgrades to Merrymount Park, a measure inserted into the House bill by Reps. Stephen Tobin and Ron Mariano.

The Senate also earmarked $300,000 as a direct grant for the Manta Health Center to reduce the cost of administration and services. The House has earmarked $250,000 for the same purpose.

The bill passed by the Senate also contains an appropriation of $100,000 for the upkeep and maintenance of Squantum Point Park, which is owned by the Department of Conservation and Recreation.

"The Squantum Point Park funding is also in the House of Representative's version of the legislation ands should make it into the final version of the supplemental budget," said Morrissey.

The House and Senate versions of the supplemental budget are currently before a House-Senate Conference Committee to work out the differences between the two. The compromise versions is expected to go before the Legislature early next year.

$10 Million Approved

Land-Taking For Concourse Gets Council Go-Ahead

By MIKAELA SLANEY

The City Council's Finance Committee Monday night gave the go ahead for land-taking on Mayor William Phelan's proposed route for the Quincy Center Concourse and appropriated $10 million to get it started.

The unanimous vote of the Finance Committee virtually assures passage since the same nine members of the Fin Com comprise the nine-member City Council.

The concourse, which is designed to connect Burgin Parkway with McGrath Highway across Hancock Street, will require the taking by eminent domain nine parcels of commercially zoned land valued at $7,986,200.

The parcels, partial or complete, include:

- 148 Parkingway, Tanline
- 150 Parkingway, Superfitness
- 1586 Hancock St., Modern Formal Shop
- 1601 Hancock St., Vacant lot
- 1563 & 1597 Hancock St., movies and registry
- 1570 through 1576 Hancock St., Granite City Tattoo
- 1596 though 1602 Hancock St., City Financial
- 11 Revere Rd., Holy Ground
- 14 Revere Rd., Eugene Thomas Salon & Endless Sun Colusion Salon.

En route to approval, the Finance Committee rejected by 8-1 votes six amendments proposed by Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi, five of them involving the Town Brook Flood Control Project.

Raymondi said he was not against the Right of Way Acquisition but he wanted the Bigelow Street Flood Relief Conduit prior to or along with the land-taking or construction of the Concourse.

The Finance Committee also approved authority for the mayor to borrow $10 million to cover engineering and land-taking expenses.

Planning Director Dennis Harrington assured the Finance Committee that owners of the nine land parcels to be taken had been updated

City Achieves Historic Financial Mark

Mayor William Phelan announces the city has achieved a unique accomplishment in municipal finance; the city's excess levy capacity and free cash certification are the highest in city history in the same year.

The city excess levy capacity is the difference between what the city is allowed by law to tax its property owners and what the city actually taxes its property owners. The city's excess levy capacity is in excess of $6.3 million this year.

"Our excess levy capacity represents $6.3 million in tax relief for our residents," Phelan said. "While communities throughout the Commonwealth consider Proposition 2 1/2 override votes to meet their needs, we have managed our city in a way that continues to provide services, limit taxes and create a stronger municipal financial portfolio."

Due in large part to the collection of one-time revenues such as the pension payment from Quincy College and a mitigation payment from the MWRA, the city established a new high for free cash certification in excess of $11.3 million.

"It is entirely unique to have such a large reserve in the same year that we are concurrently taxing our residents further below the limit than ever before," Phelan said. "Our city's financial health continues to improve from where we were four years ago. I am proud of what we have accomplished thus far and I will continue to work in the best interests of our taxpayers."

Phelan thanked the city department heads and the City Council for their role in the success.

"This accomplishment is due to a lot of hard work from many people," he said. "I want to thank everyone for getting on the same page with me and working toward the collective goal of sound financial health for our great city."

44 Pass, Two Flunk In Police Liquor Sting

Two out of 46 liquor establishments tested in a single night during a recent Quincy Police sting operation were charged with selling alcoholic beverages to a minor.

Lt. Peter Turowski, the city's liquor inspector, identified them as the X and O Restaurant at Hancock and Maple Streets and Joe's Market at 260 Center St.

They will be called on to appear before the licensing board at a future date.

In each case, said Turowski, a 19-year-old female volunteer was sent in to purchase liquor and was able to do so without being asked for identification.

The random compliance checks, which are financed by a grant from the Governor's Highway Safety Bureau, will continue through the holiday season.

2 A.M. Closing For New Year's Eve

The License Board Tuesday voted to extend the hours on New Year's Eve and allow a 2 a.m. closing for all common victualer and all alcoholic licenses.

The last call for drinks will be at 1:30 a.m. with all drinks off the bar at 2:15 a.m. and all patrons out of the premises by 2:30 a.m.

Police Chief Robert Crowley added that no free drinks are to be given with tickets as part of a package plan usually offered on that night.

Crowd Braves Bitter Cold At Statue Rededication

WWII Memorial Recalls 'Greatest Generation' Sacrifices

It was a brisk, blustery afternoon but the crowd stood on its feet in the cold throughout the ceremony in tribute to the men and women who fought in history's bloodiest conflict.

The occasion was the rededication of the World War II statue and memorial in its new and permanent home where Merrymount Parkway meets Hancock Street on the border of Wollaston.

"Today we aptly describe you as 'the greatest generation,'" said Mayor William Phelan to the smattering of World War II veterans in the crowd.

"It is my hope that that title will last forever. May no future generations be faced with the evils that you've conquered."

Robert Noble, a World War II Army veteran and a former prisoner of war, recalled that "we came home to a grateful nation" and urged that the men and women now fighting in Iraq be extended the same welcome home.

"May they soon return to a government and people who will welcome them and provide them the medical and emotional support they will need," he said.

A CROWD OF more than 250 braved the bitter cold and blustery wind to attend the rededication of the World War II statue in Merrymount Park at Hancock Street and Merrymount Parkway.

Fittingly, the statue was moved from its temporary home in front of City Hall to its new location on Dec. 7, the 64th anniversary of the "date that will live in infamy" when the Japanese bombed Pearl Harbor.

A Pearl Harbor survivor, Frank Conway, was singled out of the crowd at the rededication and recognized.

The steps leading up to the statue are a walkway of more than 500 bricks and granite pavers engraved with the names of World War II veterans.

They were installed gratis by members of the International Union of Brick Layers and Allied Craftsmen of Local 3.

Together, Phelan and Noble placed a wreath on the statue.

"Years from now," said the mayor, "young people will come to this spot and learn about the sacrifices you made so that they would not have to.

"May the lessons taught by your generation be a benefit for hundreds of years to come.

"It's my hope that this memorial educates people about sacrifice, determination and courage in the face of suffering.

"You have given generations a gift of freedom and understanding.

"It brings me great honor to dedicate this memorial to the men and women who helped our nation, divide, win and recover from the greatest conflict in the history of mankind."

The Rev. William English, pastor of Trinity Parish, who gave the invocation and benediction, hailed the statue as "a constant reminder to all of us of the ultimate sacrifices they made for us."

"Like Christ himself, these men and women died for others, for us, for our freedom," he said.

"We ask the Lord, bless and protect our service men and women stationed around the globe today, especially our local Quincy sons and daughters."

Noble compared the early days of World War II to current uneasiness among Americans about the war in Iraq.

First Night Quincy Accepting Entries For Grand Procession Parade

First Night Quincy is accepting entries from those who wish to participate in the Grand Procession Parade Dec. 31.

Residents, businesses and community organizations are encouraged to participate by entering a float, or even simply a vehicle bedecked with lights and color, which is the theme of the parade.

Prizes of $500, $250 and $100 will be awarded to the entries that show the most creativity, originality and work.

"The Grand Procession Parade is a festive, fun way for neighborhood associations, PTO's and other groups to put their creativity and talents to use and raise money for their various causes," said Mayor William Phelan.

Though it may not be the longest route as it begins at the intersection of Hancock Street and Saville Avenue and disbands at Temple Street just beyond City Hall and the Church of the Presidents, the cast of colorful characters, including a band of Giant Vegetables and a traditional Chinese Dragon dance, make up for the lack of distance.

Those interested in participating may obtain entry forms by contacting the Quincy Park Department at 617-376-1251.

In addition to the parade, the city's family-oriented First Night celebration, beginning at 4 p.m. and extending to 9 p.m., will offer two fireworks displays, ice sculptures, street performers and an eclectic range of live entertainment spread across 16 venues in Quincy Center.

The First Night button is the ticket to all indoor festivities and may be purchased at City Hall, the Park and Recreation Departments, Gymboree of the South Shore Plaza and various Dunkin' Donuts locations.

Cost per button is $7, with a Family Pack of Five on sale for $20. For the complete listing of entertainment and button sales locations, visit the city's web site at www.ci.quincy.ma.us.

QUINCY MEDICAL CENTER Shows Spirit of Giving - This holiday season, Quincy Medical Center again hosted an "adopt a family" holiday gift-giving program to support the Braintree-based Dianne DeVanna Center for the Prevention of Child Abuse and Neglect. Nearly all departments at the community teaching hospital voluntarily purchased toys, clothing and other gifts in efforts to make the holidays a bit brighter for 79 South Shore children whose lives have been impacted by domestic violence and child abuse. DeVanna Center staff Ryan Walker and Susan Nagle (shown, center) remark on Quincy Medical Center's lobby filled with toys, clothing and other gifts donated by department and staff, including (shown, left) Steve Bonanno and QMC President and CEO Dr. Gary Gibbons and (shown, right) Paige Williamson and Linda Sherman.

Board Grants Fortune Teller License

The License Board Tuesday granted a fortune teller license to Melanie Carney, doing business as Madam Destiny, with a stipulation that no business be done at her residence.

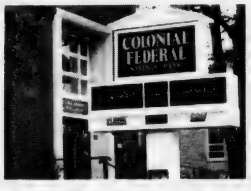
Carney said she has a full time job, and plans to conduct her business at night at other people's homes. She will begin by taking phone calls for those interested in having their fortunes told.

She said the she hasn't set up a process as yet, but said that she plans to have a connection to her phone from a company on the internet which in turn will give out her number.

She said on week-ends, she plans to have parties along with her husband who she said is a professional comedian and she will do readings between his performances.

Trinity Parish Holiday Fair For Rwanda Vocational School

A holiday fair will be held Saturday, Dec. 17, from 4 to 8 p.m. at Holy Trinity Church hall, 1000 Sea St., Houghs Neck, to help build a vocational school for orphans in the African country of Rwanda.



The event is sponsored by Operation Day's Work, a volunteer organization at Quincy High School, Broad Meadows Middle School and Archbishop Williams High School in Braintree.

There will be arts and crafts, food, music, raffles and those attending will have an opportunity to have pictures taken with Santa Claus and turned into Christmas tree ornaments.

Looking for a great local bank?

Have all the great local banks disappeared? Absolutely not! We're Colonial Federal Savings Bank – an independent local bank with no plans to merge. We keep things simple and we treat customers right. For example: We don't make you open multiple accounts to get our best deals. We don't make you give us your life savings to get a great rate on a CD. If you have a question, you talk to us – not some out-of-state call center. We offer every banking service from old-fashioned Christmas Clubs to state-of-the-art online banking, free checking, mortgages, business banking and more. THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On Dec. 16, 1811, the greatest series of earthquakes in U.S. history begins when a quake of an estimated 8.6 magnitude on the Richter scale slams the Mississippi River Valley near New Madrid, Mo. The earthquake raised and lowered parts of the Mississippi Valley by as much as 15 feet. At one point, the Mississippi River momentarily reversed direction, giving rise to Reelfoot Lake in northwest Tennessee.

• On Dec. 12, 1901, Italian physicist and radio pioneer Guglielmo Marconi succeeds in sending the first radio transmission 2,000 miles across the Atlantic Ocean from England to Canada, disproving detractors who told him that the curvature of the Earth would limit transmissions to 200 miles or less.

• On Dec. 18, 1916, Betty Grable is born in St. Louis. During World War II, she became a top box-office draw and was voted "favorite pin-up girl" by American servicemen. Paramount had Grable's legs insured for $1 million.

• On Dec. 15, 1939, "Gone With the Wind" premieres in Atlanta. The film, based on Margaret Mitchell's Pulitzer Prize-winning novel, became an instant hit, breaking all previous box-office records.

• On Dec. 14, 1947, the National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing (NASCAR) is founded in Daytona Beach, Fla. It was the first formal organization for stock-car racing, a sport said to have begun with souped-up bootlegger hot rods during Prohibition.

• On Dec. 13, 1957, the last two-seater T-bird is produced. Through 1957, Ford's Thunderbirds were jaunty, two-seat sports cars that boasted removable hard tops and powerful V-8 engines.

• On Dec. 17, 1963, the U.S. Congress passes the Clean Air Act, a sweeping set of laws designed to protect the environment from air pollution. It was the first legislation to place pollution controls on the automobile industry.

On The Lighter Side

The tributes to Frank McCauley last week as the Quincy Jewish War Veterans honored him as their "Citizen of the Year" were warm and sincere.

McCAULEY

But there were bits of humor sprinkled among the accolades at the award breakfast at Beth Israel Synagogue.

Maybe you might find a smile or two in the following:

Mayor William Phelan recalled McCauley spending hours with him advising him on municipal finances and then: "We had an increase of 18 percent (taxes) and I said it's because I learned everything I know about municipal finance and fiscal conservatism from Frank McCauley."

PHELAN

Phelan presented McCauley with a citation with an apology: "Frank, my son (William Arthur) sat on your citation before I could get it off the front seat so I apologize for it being wrinkled."

Steve Tobin said when he was first elected state representative, he went to McCauley who was then mayor for a briefing on the city's financial picture and what the city hoped to get in local aid from the state.

TOBIN

"I was so new that I had no idea. I had no experience in municipal finances. Frank stood up there with a big easel, charts and all that and I remember he said: 'We got to figure in the cherry sheets.' And I thought we don't even grow cherries. I said, boy, do I have a lot to learn."

"He was a very good mayor for the city of Quincy," he added. ". . . You'll notice I didn't say he was the best mayor," noting his father, former Mayor Arthur Tobin, now clerk magistrate of Quincy District Court who was there to help honor McCauley, was sitting a couple of feet away.

McCauley's son, Michael, pointed out that in addition to being elected mayor, city councillor and school committeeman, his father served in other posts.

M. McCAULEY

"He was appointed do the draft board by President Lyndon Johnson where he was affectionately known as "Thumbs down Frank."

McCauley was in good form himself in the humor department.

"I just want to remind my wife, Sandra, about all the good things that were said about me today when she screams at me for the 10th time to take out the rubbish."

McCauley and Dan Raymondi have been close friends since 1972 when both were elected to the school committee.

RAYMONDI

McCauley of course is a Republican and Raymondi a Democrat, with quite different philosophies, leading them to be known as Quincy's political "Odd Couple."

Noting the pair have served together on the city council the past eight years — and prior to that — McCauley told Raymondi who attended the breakfast:

"Dan, I've tried to instill in you all the attributes and qualities of a good councillor and politician. As you know, I am leaving the council and you'll have to learn how to get along without me from now on and I wish you very well.

McCauley indicated he has written his own obituary and Raymondi called out "Can you send me a copy?"

"Dan needs a copy of my obituary," McCauley explained, "because I've selected him to do my eulogy at my funeral. So I'm urging Dan to be in good health. Dan can be a little loquacious on occasion but, Dan, on that day you can talk as long as you want."

McCauley recalled Rabbi Jacob Mann, the beloved late spiritual leader of Beth Israel Synagogue:

MANN

"He always had a message with a little bit of humor. Over the years I've been outspoken on certain issues, a little controversial at times. Every time the Rabbi would see me at a function he'd come over to me and whisper in my ear: 'troublemaker!'

"Then he would walk away and come back and say, 'Keep it up!'

"That's what I've been doing over the years. My voice will be silenced at the end of the month, but I hope to be around for a few more years to watch what goes on in the Quincy political scene."

McCauley, four-term mayor now city council president, is leaving the political scene at the end of the month, closing out a distinguished 32-year career.

A career that includes an historic note: the only person to be elected to all four municipal offices: mayor, councillor at-large, ward councillor and school committeeman.

That may stand unchallenged for some time.

One more note about McCauley:

He is now 76 but hardly looks it. One reason may be that good Houghs Neck air. Another the fact he walks an average 10 miles a day, weather permitting.

And he has a goal of 2,000 miles for the year which he hopes to reach by the end of the month.

Let's see now: 2,000 miles is the equivalent of walking from Quincy to where?

To Denver, Colo., according to Linda Beeler of the Thomas Crane Library Reference Department. Actually, she says, about 100 miles beyond Denver.

Now that he's retiring maybe he'll have the time next year to "walk to California."

But meanwhile you can count on him finding the time to keep tabs on what's going on around City Hall.

And, hearing from him, too.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS OLD POSTCARD postmarked in 1909, shows two scout cruisers at the Fore River shipyard ready for delivery to the U.S. Navy. These were the first cruisers built at Fore River; the original USS Salem (CS-3) and the USS Birmingham (CS-2) both delivered in 1908. At the time heavy cruisers with four stacks were named after cities, while battleships with three stacks were named after states. Both these ships were scrapped by the Navy in 1930. The second Birmingham (CA-42) was built at Newport News in 1942 and scrapped in 1959. The second Salem (CA 139) was built at Quincy in 1949 and since returning here in 1994 has been open to the general public as part of the US Naval Shipbuilding Museum at Fore River. 189% Tax Classification A Disservice'To Taxpayers

I would like to submit the following letter to the Reader's Forum in regards to the City Council vote on classification.

The city councillors who voted for the 189% tax classification shift did a disservice to both the residential and the commercial taxpayers. This was a short sighted decision which will have negative long-term effects on all residential taxpayers.

Between Fiscal Year 2002 and Fiscal Year 2004, the average single family tax bill increased by $22.20 % or $661. This was a period in which the City of Quincy faced a deficit because of overspending previous budgets (rollover bills) and severe state aid cutbacks. The city now has $11 million in free cash (this is like a savings account) and the excess levy capacity is almost $6 million. The excess levy capacity means the city could have raised additional taxes but chose not to.

Mayor Phelan recommended (and Councillors McCauley, Keenan and Gutro) supported a 175% tax shift. This would have meant that the average residential tax increase from Fiscal Year 2004 to Fiscal Year 2006 would have been 4.15% or $151. In fact, Mayor Phelan committed to Alan Cousin in August 2004 (then President of the Quincy Taxpayers Association) to try and keep the residential tax increase below 5% in Fiscal Year 2005 and Fiscal Year 2006. The mayor's proposal would have meant that the average two-year residential increase would have been 2.07% per year.

In the future, there really will be no need to have a tax classification hearing, other than this is required by law. Future mayors and councillors will have no say in classifying the tax rate. They will not be able to help their constituents except to tell them that their hands are tied. The city will be locked into a 170% tax classification rate forever (or until the law changes).

Is saving $300 on average really worth paying thousands more in the future? In my opinion this was not a financially sound decision. The councillors who voted for this proposal have the obligation to cost out this proposal and tell the residential taxpayers how we will save money in the long run by adopting this year's 189% rate of classification.

Sal Says He's Sorry

Usually, when I write my letters they mean something positive. I rarely shoot from the hip; I think I may have shot from the ankles last week.

The whole purpose of my letter was to make sure we were doing enough for all our public school students. Those who find it very easy to get into trouble need our help as those who come to school to learn.

My only experience with the Quincy Public Schools was and remains as a substitute teacher at the middle school level. One middle school bothered me a few years ago with a Welcome Back Kotter mentality toward disruptive students. I did not like what I saw and I unwisely projected that feeling onto the GOALS program of which I know very little.

I'm sorry for offending the folks at the GOALS program who are indeed trying to help these students overcome their present troubles and get on with their futures. There have been tremendous success as students thought to be unteachable by some have in fact turned their lives around thanks to a lot of hard work from a lot of public school teachers committed to helping these students.

I feel I insulted folks unfairly and I apologize for my unkind words in last week's letter.

This is not a perfect world. No one is perfect which I proved quite well last week. There are no dead end kids and there is no dead end mentality inside the Quincy public schools. GOALS does work.

Shooting from the hip is something I'll try and overcome as one of my New Year's resolutions.

Mayor Ross Calls For More Parking

Dec. 15-21
1949
56 Years Ago

Mayor Charles A. Ross dedicated the new parking area west of Hancock St. and called for the city to continue to progress by taking land east of the downtown area for a second large parking lot.

"The continued growth of the city demands that we keep pace with it or fall into a state of stagnation which I am convinced is not the desire of any public minded citizen," he said.

Public Works Commissioner Charles R. Herbert pointed out that the new west side parking area is the largest municipally owned metered parking lot on the eastern seaboard.

DUNN NEXT AUDITOR?

Miss Elizabeth Dunn, principal clerk in the auditor's office, was considered the leading candidate to succeed Leo E. Mullin as city auditor when his retirement becomes effective Dec. 23.

Miss Dunn served eight years as city auditor in the late 1920s and early 1930s, the last one to be appointed by a mayor prior to passage of a law giving that authority to the City Council.

Other candidates included lame duck Councillors Clifton H. Baker and William J. Papile, who would not be eligible for selection by their colleagues until their Council terms expire Jan. 1.

Another frequently mentioned name was that of School Committeeman Alexander Smith.

ROSS NAMED REGISTER

Charles N. Ross, a Quincy attorney and son of Mayor Ross, was named first assistant register of deeds for Norfolk County effective Jan. 1, according to an announcement by Register L. Thomas Shine.

Ross, who won a bronze star while overseas with the Yankee Division during World War II, was narrowly defeated in the first Plan E City Council election, finishing eighth among 59 candidates.

The starting pay for first assistant register was $4,680.

Quincy ArtsAlive! Launches Cultural Website

Residents and visitors seeking information on Quincy's arts and cultural offerings have a new source of information on the city's cultural scene: www.quincyartsalive.org.

The city's first web site designed specifically to provide information on Quincy's active arts and cultural community, www.quincyartsalive.org offers web surfers the chance to learn more about Quincy's cultural and educational organizations while providing an up-to-date source of information on upcoming arts and cultural events.

"Quincy is well-known for its historic sites and attractions, but we also have a thriving cultural scene that includes a variety of art exhibitions, concerts, plays lectures and festivals throughout the year," said Jennifer Logue, executive director of Discover Quincy, which spearheaded the new site's development as part of the Quincy ArtsAlive! initiative.

"We hope www.quincyartsalive.org helps raise awareness of Quincy's cultural offering while highlighting the contributions of the many talented artists who live and work in our community."

Highlights of the Quincy ArtsAlive! web site include:

• A calendar of upcoming arts and cultural events.

• Sections devoted to the visual arts, performing arts and culture, with links to local cultural organizations and educational institutions.

• Information about historic Quincy, with links to www.discoverquincy.com, the city's tourism web site.

The Quincy ArtsAlive! web site will also shortly be adding a section where local artists can post profiles of themselves and samples of their artwork.

"One of the goals of the Quincy ArtsAlive! initiative is to integrate more fully arts, culture and tourism into the local economy," said Logue, who noted that the new web site was designed by Quincy-based Cyclone Design. "By enabling local artists to showcase their work, we hope to help support the cultural economy while highlighting what Quincy's cultural community has to offer residents and visitors."

Funded in part by a grant from the Massachusetts Cultural Council, the Quincy ArtsAlive! initiative is co-sponsored by the City of Quincy, Discover Quincy, Adams National Historical Park, Quincy Art Association, Quincy Historical Society and Quincy 2000.

"In addition to the new web site, Quincy ArtsAlive! recently produced the city's first comprehensive visitor guide aimed at attracting tourists to Quincy. Boaters Name Morrissey Legislator Of The Year

Sen. Michael Morrissey has been named "Legislator of the Year" for 2005 by the Massachusetts Boating and yacht Clubs Association (MBYCA).

Morrissey, a veteran yachtsman himself, received the award for the second time at a meeting in the Palmer's Cove Yacht Club in Salem.

The award reads in part "for his concern and aid to the advancement of boating interests in Massachusetts on important legislative matters."

He was chosen particularly for his sponsorship of bills striking down the illegal practice of a two-tier fee structure for moorings based on residency of the boater.

Morrissey has been an advocate for fair and reasonable state lease payments for yacht clubs and public property and is seeking for clubs to obtain five-year leases.

Stops On The Downtown Holiday Stroll

DOROTHY QUINCY HANCOCK (aka actress Belinda West) tends the hearth at the Quincy Homestead. West treated attendees to a presentation on colonial yuletide traditions as part of Saturday's Holiday Stroll.

THE HURDY-GURDY Band performs London street ballads and French baroque melodies at the Adams National Historical Park as part of Saturday's Holiday Stroll.

PAT FAY (center), owner of Quilters' Compass, displays part of the Quincy Quilt being assembled as part of the Quincy ArtsAlive! initiative. During the Holiday Stroll, attendees were invited to come in and decorate their own square for the quilt, which features squares depicting Quincy's many historic sites. With Fay are Kathy LeBlanc (left) and Terry O'Donnell, who made some of the quilt's historic squares.

REBECCA DINSMORE and her daughter, Sarah Bellott, discuss colonial music with Holiday Stroll attendees at the Dorothy Quincy Homestead. Bellott performed a concert of colonial carols while accompanied by her mother on the Homestead's recently restored antique spinet.

Ward 6 Councillor Alicia Gardner said she agreed with the terms and said the only thing she wanted was the signature of both parties.

Police Chief Robert Crowley asked that the trucks not back into handicapped spaces.

Church's 'Heart To Heart Tree' Says 'I Care' To Holiday Suffering

The Quincy Community United Methodist Church in Wollaston is offering a simple yet unique way of telling someone "thank you" or "I care" during the Christmas season.

It's a spun glass heart ornament from the church's "Heart to Heart Tree," that can be given to someone who has suffered a loss that can't be fully expressed in mere words.

The concept was originated with the Rec. Dr. Susan F. Jarek-Glidden, pastor of the church at 40 Beale St.

"Originally the heart ornaments were meant to be given to people who are experiencing a difficult holiday season, as a way of letting them know someone cares," she said.

"Although most of the hearts are still given to people who are hurting, some individuals have given to people who have made a difference in their lives, such as mentors.

"It's a way of expressing feelings, a way of saying 'thank you' as well as 'I care.'"

The Heart to Heart Tree can be found on the second floor of the church (outside the sanctuary) through Dec. 24. A donation of $2 per heart ornament is requested.

For more information, call the church office at 617-773-3319.

THIS IS THE season for giving and Uncle Sam Rounseville sends a message to support local charities on his public service billboard at Newport Avenue and Beale Street, Wollaston.

FIRE SAFETY

by Captain Tom Lyons
Fire Prevention Bureau
Quincy Fire Department

Safety Tips For Wood, Coal Stoves

"In 2003, there were 741 fire incidents involving solid fueled appliances, fireplaces and chimneys. These were responsible for five injuries and resulted in $1.1 million in property losses. These incidents make up 34 percent of all fires linked to heating systems." (Statistics supplied by the Office of the State Fire Marshal.)

When installing a wood or coal stove:

- As required by the State Building Code, a permit must be obtained from your local building department whenever a fireplace, wood or coal burning stove is installed. Prior to their initial use, the same must be inspected by a local building inspector.
- Have the chimney and flue inspected by a qualified mason prior to use. Cracks in the flue or mortar joints can allow flames and heated gases to migrate into a living space.
- Allow at least 36 inches of clearance around an appliance to prevent combustibles from coming into contact with the heat source.
- A solid fuel appliance, such as a wood or coal stove, cannot share a common flue utilized by other solid fuel, fossil fuel or gas fired appliances.

When initially using your stove or fireplace, make certain the damper is open prior to lighting the fire. Don't close the damper too soon as well before the fire has died out where smoke and carbon monoxide can migrate into the home as smoldering continues.

For that matter, install and maintain smoke detectors and a carbon monoxide detector to provide continuous protection for your family. Never leave children unattended near the stove. Never use an accelerant such as gasoline or kerosene to start a fire within it.

With use over time, the State Fire Marshal recommends that the chimney flue be cleaned prior to each heating season where creosote, a tarry, flammable by-product of burning wood can accumulate and possible occlude the chimney, restricting the required draft for safe operation. Lastly, make certain the ashes are disposed of properly.

As I write this, I recall a fatal fire at the beginning of my career where ashes were improperly disposed of within a cardboard box while the hot embers ignited the box and adjacent combustible materials. During the sleeping hours, the fire extended through the home.

To prevent fire, ashes removed from a stove or fireplace should be shoveled into a metal bucket with a metal lid, placed outside on the ground away from the house. Do not assume where they are ashes that they are harmless; embers can smolder and remain hot for days, igniting combustibles hours later.

With the prices of fossil fuels increasing substantially, I wonder whether there will be a resurgence of wood and coal stove use? If so, please do so with safety in mind.

Thank you.

WWII Memorial Recalls 'Greatest Generation' Sacrifices

(Cont'd From Page 2)

"When the Japanese attacked our country they brought together a people who were divided," he said.

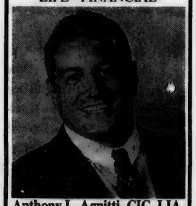
"There was a significant faction that thought the two oceans that separated us from Europe and Asia was sufficient to protect us from the armies of the Axis nations.

"We were fortunate to have a president, Franklin Delano Roosevelt (the right man at the right time), who was able to pull together all segments of our society to work for the common good of our country and eventually the world."

Hank Bradley, director of Veterans' Services, acting as master of ceremonies, recognized members of the committee that planned the statue — John Donlon, Leonard Morris, John Mahoney, Herbert Skellett, Linda Montillio, Peter Gacicia, Ron Donovan and Liz Fitzpatrick.

The pledge of allegiance was led by John Raeke, past commander of the George F. Bryan VFW Post, and the national anthem was suing by Patrolman Patrick Faherty of the Quincy Police.

The colors were presented by the Quincy High School Junior ROTC Color Guard Unit and Taps was sounded by Donald Murphy.



WORLD WAR II veteran with the slogan "We Stick Together" on the back of his cap had a close-up view of the statue and re-dedication ceremony. Trish Bossart photo

Cutting Energy Costs In The Kitchen

(NAPS) – Being sure stoves and other kitchen appliances are energy efficient could save you dough.

Try these tips:

Dishwashers

The U.S. Department of Energy (DOE) says most of the energy used by a dishwasher goes towards heating water. Remember to check your dishwasher's manual to see how hot the manufacturer recommends water to be. You may have the water temperature set too high, and that could be costing you money. Also, only run the dishwasher when it is full and be sure to let your dishes air dry, rather than using the dishwasher's dry cycle.

Stoves And Ranges

Replacing old drip pans with new ones could reduce energy costs. The drip pans reflect heat from the burner or coil and speed up cooking time. It's also important to be sure your oven's internal thermostat is accurate. If it's not, your oven may be getting hotter than need be – and using more energy than is necessary.

Refrigerators/Freezers

Be certain your refrigerator and freezer doors seal tightly. The DOE suggests testing the doors by closing them over paper. The paper should be half in the appliance and half out. If you can pull the paper out easily, it may be time to adjust the door latch or replace the seal. Also, remember to cover all liquids and wrap all food stored in the refrigerator. Uncovered items can release moisture that makes the compressor work harder and use more energy.

Home Improvement Projects Save Energy, Money

(NAPS) — What's the forecast for home heating bills? The average American household spends $1,500 annually on energy bills, a number that may go up as much as 50 percent this year. But you can beat those numbers by making the most of some tips to conserve energy, protect the environment and lower utility bills.

Because electricity is generated by burning fossil fuels, which release greenhouse gas emissions into the air, using less energy at home directly reduces the risks associated with global warming.

According to the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), if just half of all American homes were heated with Energy Star-qualified projects, the change would prevent nearly 70 billion pounds of greenhouse gas emissions, equivalent to the emissions of nearly 6 million cars.

Energy-Saving Ideas

• Seal up your home. One of the most cost-effective ways to reduce energy bills is to air-seal holes, cracks and openings in your home, and then add insulation to stop the flow of heat through the walls and ceilings. Consider the following tips:

Weather-strip and insulate your attic hatch or door to prevent warm air from escaping out the top of your house.

Seal holes in the attic that lead down to the house, such as open wall tops and ducts, plumbing or electrical runs.

Weather-strip doors and windows that do not seal tightly. Use foam gaskets around electrical outlets (under the plates) to reduce drafts.

For more information on home sealing, consult EPA's new "Guide to Energy-Efficient Heating and Cooling" at www.energystar.gov/heating.

• Heat your home wisely. When your heating system works effectively, you will be more comfortable and save money.

Replace furnace filters before the heating season and change them once a month for maximum savings.

Cover filter slot with a piece of wide tape to keep air from getting in around filter edges without passing through the filter.

Seal duct joints with shiny foil tape with an UL-181 label.

Set back your thermostat while you're asleep or away. When used properly, an Energy Star-qualified programmable thermostat with four temperature and time settings can save you $100 each year on energy costs.

Ask your heating contractor to service your heating system and check your duct system too.

• Change a light. If every household changed a light to one that has earned the Energy Star, the nation could save enough energy to light 7 million homes and reduce greenhouse gas emission equivalent to that of 1 million cars.

• Power-down computers and electronic products when not in use. These products often use energy even when switched off.

• Look for products that have the Energy Star.

The government's Energy Star is on more than 40 different kinds of products for the home, including lighting, home electronics, heating and cooling equipment and appliances.

These products provide the features and performance you want while helping you save energy and reduce greenhouse gas emissions.

Check with your utility company to see what rebates are available for the purchase of Energy Star-qualified appliances, lighting or HVAC (heating, ventilation and air conditioning) systems.

Home Idea

(NAPS) – One way to ensure that the sale of your home will proceed without a hitch is to make sure there are no problems with transferring the title to a new owner.

Most mortgage lenders require a title search and title insurance on any property they lend money against. If a title problem pops up, the sales process screeches to a half, and that may mean losing the new home you want.

Rust-Stained Concrete

Q. My front concrete porch has rust stains on it from a bench and railings. What is the best way to remove these stains, or can the porch be painted over to hide them? Any advice would be appreciated. — Richard M., via e-mail

A. Try to clean the rust from the concrete first, before painting, just in case the rust shows through the new coat. A few different methods can be used to scrub away the rust, starting with the mildest cleaner and working your way up to heavy-duty stuff.

Don't use chlorine bleach to remove rust stains from concrete: Chlorine will actually "set" the rust. Patio cleaners sold at the hardware store should also be avoided when dealing with rust.

First, try fresh-squeezed lemon juice on the stain — and by fresh, I mean, squeeze the lemon right over the rust stain! Scrub with a nylon cleaning brush, let the juice sit for a few minutes, scrub again, repeat.

Vinegar is the next level — usually, plain white vinegar, applied as above. You can try cider vinegar too, as the difference in acidity might have an effect on the stain.

General-purpose concrete cleaners may also do the trick; scrub the area with cleaner and a wire brush.

The next, more drastic, cleaning method is to use oxalic acid. This is typically sold at the hardware store as wood bleach, and is packaged as a powder. Because oxalic acid is toxic, wear rubber gloves and eye protection when working with it, and follow the instructions on the back of the package exactly. It's a good idea to test an inconspicuous area of the porch first, because the acid could leave some unsightly marks (especially if the porch is already painted). Let it sit for several minutes, then rinse the concrete well.

If cleaning fails, two other methods may work. Concrete can be buffed, using a hard stone, or sanded down, smoothing the surface and grinding away the rust. This is usually a professional job, although you could try using your own power sander and increasing grades of paper to buff the concrete. That would be more effective on a small area than a large area of rust (such as rust streaking down a driveway).

If all that fails, go ahead and paint — you'll have given the porch a pretty thorough cleaning, at any rate.

Clean Floors Keep Kids, Pets Safe

(NAPS) — Even though most homes get a lot of foot traffic, many homeowners don't like the idea of cleaning their carpets with strong chemical solutions that can leave a harsh residue.

Fortunately, cleaners are now available that offer kinder alternatives. New soap-free cleaners are effective, yet contain no harmful chemicals and are completely safe for children, pets and the environment.

Fast and easy to use, these unique cleaners are rinse-free and quick-drying, leaving behind no soapy residue to attract stains or soil. They do leave behind a fresh, clean scent, unlike many other cleaners that leave a room smelling of chemicals.

"Since so much activity in the home takes place on the floor, many homeowners are concerned about the harsh residues typical cleaners leave behind," said Brian Warren, president of FloorCare Concepts, which manufactures Mohawk FloorCare Essentials.

FloorCare Essentials provide a safe alternative for periodic cleaning or emergency spills. Good for both wet and dry spills, these products can also be used on other surfaces like countertops, upholstery, drapes, tile and grout. All that's needed is a cleaning cloth.

These products, sold at Wal-Mart and over 5,000 retail flooring stores around the country, come in spray bottles and one-gallon concentrate for steam-cleaning machines.

A range of products and accessories are also available, including microfiber cloths and odor eliminators that support the cleaning and preservation process of all types of flooring and carpeting.

Tips For Maintaining Hard, Soft Surfaces

Carpet:

• Use mats or runners at all home entrances and on uncarpeted areas adjacent to carpet to reduce soil and moisture in traffic areas.

• Use furniture coasters to distribute the weight of heavy items.

• Close drapes or blinds during hours of direct sunlight to extend the beauty of your carpeting.

Hard surface:

• Sweep floors regularly.

• Use protective mats at all exterior entrances.

• Never over-wet your wood floors. Water can cause damage to wood flooring.

• Never use oil soaps, wax, wax liquids or other household products to clean your floor.

Fencing, Decking Extends Living Space

(NAPS) — One of the best ways to add a room with a view is to create a garden room.

That's the latest concept in landscaping and it may be as simple as adding a deck or creating a private space with some fencing.

A wide variety of materials are available for fences and decks, including wood, vinyl and composite materials that combine wood with plastic or vinyl. Color-coated and/or slatted chain-link and ornamental fence materials are also available.

Wood fences and decks can be painted to match a home or left to weather naturally, while vinyl and most composite fences and decks do not need painting and are available in several colors, such as white, gray and brown. Vinyl and composite materials require very little maintenance, with no painting or staining required, though some composite fences may be painted, if desired.

Vinyl, wood and composite materials can be used to build a variety of fence types, such as privacy and post and rail, while vinyl can also simulate ornamental iron fence.

Privacy fences, which can be personalized with latticework, decorative post caps, cut outs or curved tops, are a popular choice for creating an "outdoor room." Privacy fences can completely shield a property from its neighbors or have a slightly open design to allow air to flow through.

Slatted chain-link also offers a more private backyard getaway, and homeowners can find slats in colors that coordinate with their homes or create a pattern using different colored slats.

For homeowners with a beautiful view, ornamental or color-coated chain-link materials may be the best choices for fencing because they provide "see-through" security.

Depending on the color, these fences can become virtually invisible, as they blend into the landscape. Color-coated chain-link is available in green, black and brown, while ornamental steel and aluminum fences are available in a wide variety of colors, from black and white to more custom colors that match homes.

A refutable American Fence Association contractor can help you choose the right fence and deck for your needs.

Flynn Helps Raise $75,000 For Wellspring Center

Serving as auctioneer and master of ceremonies, Flynn led the charge to encourage eager and active bidding.

"These events make business worthwhile," Flynn said. "It is easy to get caught up in the day-to-day grind of conducting business, but events such as these put everything in perspective, especially for a great cause like the Wellspring Multi Service Center.

"It was a pleasure to connect with Wellspring, and I am looking forward to working with them to help their cause in the future," he added.

Financial Consequences Of Drunk Driving

The consequences for drunk driving can be phenomenal. Consider the following estimated costs for a drunk driving conviction:

• Towing	$100
• Car storage per day	$30
• Bail fee	$40 (min)
• Defense Attorney fee	$5,000
• Minimum fine	$500
• Driver Alcohol Education	$600
• Insurance Increase (3 yrs)	$5,000
• Loss of 2 days work	$250
• Victim's Trust Fund	$50
• Victim Witness fee	$35
• License Reinstatement	$300
• Head Injury Surcharge	$125
• Court costs	$250
• Probation fee	$360
• Personal embarrassment	priceless
• Public humiliation	priceless

TOTAL: minimum of $13,000

There is also the possibility of being incarcerated for "not more than 2 1/2 years House of Correction," for the first offense, with significant increases for each additional offense.

It should be noted that your license will be suspended for 180 days for failure to take the breathalyzer test. This can be added to the one year license suspension for the conviction. These are circumstances that would bring the cost considerably higher.

Remember, these numbers reflect the basic drunk driving charge. If there is an accident where someone is injured or killed, the penalties are much stiffer.

A Job Well Done

By LT. DAN MINTON
Quincy Police Crime Prevention Officer

On Nov. 27, at approximately midnight, Officer Paul Murphy was dispatched to a "hit and run" motor vehicle accident at the intersection of Newport Avenue and Beale Street. Officer William Plant, who was on his way home from a detail, witnessed the accident and reported the suspect vehicle as a black pick-up truck with the front end damaged, heading east on Beale Street.

LT. DAN MINTON

Upon arrival, Officer Murphy noted extensive damage to the second vehicle and minor injuries to the occupants. After interviewing the occupants as well as another motorist, Officer Murphy determined that the victim's vehicle was stopped for the red light southbound on Newport Avenue at Beale Street when the black pick-up truck crashed into it from behind, then fled.

Officer Plant sifted through the debris left at the scene and found a license plate registered to a black truck. Officers checked the Quincy address of the trucks' owner but it was not there.

At approximately 1 a.m., Officer Murphy found a black pick-up truck at Caddy Park on Quincy Shore Drive. It had front end damage, a missing front plate, with the rear plate the same as the plate left at the scene of the accident.

Officer Joseph Nabstedt assisted Officer Murphy as they approached the truck, which was running with one occupant in it. After numerous knocks directed at the driver, Officer Murphy opened the door, woke up the driver and detected a strong odor of alcohol.

After giving the driver a series of field sobriety tests, the 45-year-old Quincy man was placed under arrest for "Operating Under the Influence of Intoxicating Liquor," "Leaving the Scene of an Accident with Personal Injury," and "Leaving the Scene of an Accident after Property Damage." Nice work!

During the holiday season, alcohol-related accidents and drunk driving arrests tend to increase. This is in part to availability of alcohol during the festive season. Drunk driving kills all year long, but the toll can be especially devastating during the holidays.

That's why December has been designated National Drunk and Drugged Driving Prevention Month by a coalition of organizations coordinated by the National Commission Against Drunk Driving.

MADD statistics state that during the Christmas holiday period, the percentage of drunk driving accidents increases. In 2001, 2,053 people were killed in alcohol-related accidents between Thanksgiving and New Year's Day, compared to other holiday statistics of 127 deaths during the Fourth of July weekend, and 284 during the Memorial Day weekend of the same year.

Staying Focused Over the Holidays

Q. I'm always so busy during the holidays that I barely have time to exercise. If I only have time for one type of exercise, what would give me the best workout: cardiovascular, strength training or another type of exercise?

A. Staying committed to your exercise program during the holidays, or any other time of the year when your schedule is especially hectic, can be a challenge. But planning for the break in your schedule can help keep you from missing your workouts altogether.

Instead of choosing just one type of exercise, I would recommend a combination of them all. The key to surviving a disruption to your normal workout schedule is to create as many options as possible. The more options you have, the more likely you are to remain active.

For example, if you plan to complete cardiovascular exercises by attending a group exercise class during the limited time you have available, and if for some reason the class is canceled, you might decide not to work out at all. However, if you've developed a plan that anticipates change, when you arrived at the gym and learned the class was canceled, your plan B could be to use a treadmill, bike or even swim.

This type of planning will not only give you options, it will also limit the excuses you can give yourself for not exercising. The more permission we give ourselves for not finding even 30 minutes to take care of our bodies, the more difficult it becomes to get back on schedule once our calendar clears up.

Take a few minutes and write down some ideas on how you can stay active during the holidays, or any time that your schedule changes. Walking with family and friends, aerobic/dance or circuit training, DVDs, hiring a personal trainer or finding an exercise buddy are great ways to help yourself stay accountable.

If you have access to a variety of exercise equipment, take advantage of all your options. Do cardiovascular exercises one day, strength training another day, and group classes such as yoga or kickboxing on still other days.

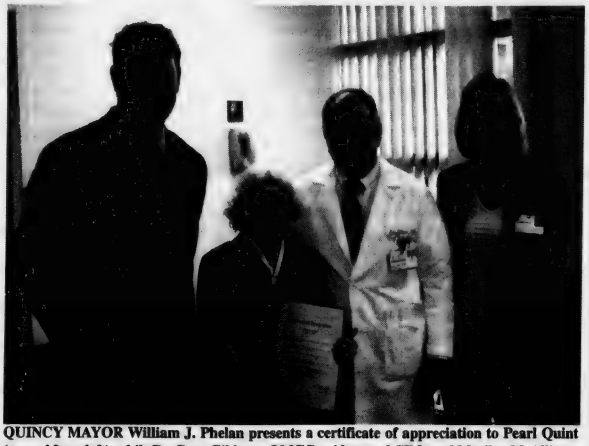
99 Years Young

Pearl Quint: A Model Of Healthy Living

"A model of healthy aging."

"A dedicated friend."



"An inspiration to everyone."

Just a few of the kind words used to describe Quincy resident Pearl Quint during a recent luncheon honoring her 99th birthday at Quincy Medical Center, where she remains an active volunteer.

Pearl was commended for her 23 years and more than 10,000 hours of volunteer service to Quincy Medical Center. Pearl began volunteering at QMC in 1962 and still volunteers about 4 hours per week at Quincy Medical Center. She assists with hospital mailings and collating projects, and, evens does quick errands around the building.

During the celebration, Mayor William J. Phelan, and state Rep. Stephen Tobin, on behalf of the Quincy delegation, presented Pearl with official certificates, recognizing her dedication and commitment to community service.

Pearl also has a longstanding dedication as a volunteer for the American Red Cross. She began volunteering with the organization in 1917, at age 11, knitting strips of yarn to make blankets for American soldiers fighting in World War I. In 1997, she was honored for more than 50 years of service to the organization, and served the organization as a volunteer until this year.

ON BEHALF OF the Quincy delegation state Rep. Stephen Tobin (far right) presents Pearl Quint with a certificate of recognition for her longstanding commitment to community service. DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

SMOKERS' HESITATION

When researchers analyzed the data from a governmental health care survey of more than 15,000 Americans, they found that smokers are less likely to seek dental care than non-smokers. This is an unfortunate finding in that smokers are more susceptible to oral disease than non-smokers. According to the study sponsored by the National Institutes of Health and the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, one-third of current smokers reported having at least one dental visit in the year studied compared to 45 percent of non-smokers. This statistic becomes all the more compelling when one considers that smokers face increased risk of gum disease, tooth loss, and oral cancers. No reasons were given for smokers' aversion to dental care.

This column reinforces that if you smoke, you should quit. Whether you smoke or not, we invite you to come see us for all of your dental needs. Good experience with dentistry is based on making the right choice in a family dentist and in taking the right steps to keep dental costs at a minimum through self-care at home between visits. We strive to teach good oral hygiene. In the long run you will have better dental health and, of course, spend far fewer dollars. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we're currently accepting new patients. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Chewing tobacco also poses an increased risk for developing oral cancers.

A New Approach To 'Conscious Eating'

(NAPS) - If you're concerned about your weight and vitality, a new approach may be just what you need.

The idea is something called "Conscious Eating." It's not a diet but an approach to eating created by the editors of Body + Soul magazine, the newest publication from Martha Stewart Living Omnimedia. The program can be used to slow down and tune in your body's natural intelligence about what it needs, while better understanding your emotions and how they affect your appetite.

To help more people find this road to wellness, there's a new book full of simple strategies. The book outlines the principles of Conscious Eating and how to make them work in your life. The 64-page book comes with two CDs – one of relaxing music and the other on meditation techniques to use before eating. The kit also includes inspirational cards in an attractive tabletop box.

Presidents' Rebuilding Project Starts Friday

BOYS' BASKETBALL

By CHRIS POISSON

Right now, the Quincy High School boys' basketball team is not even close to equaling the 17-3 Atlantic Coast League North Division champion squad of a year ago.

But head coach Bob Fisher, sounding more like a housing contractor, believes the Presidents could end up there over time.

"We're not executing in the early going," he said. "But it's early. The intensity is there. The work ethic is there. The defensive commitment is there. We have the strengths to build from within. You don't build a house in a day. We're working on the foundation, and that's our defense, worth ethic and transition game. We'll add the trim later."

Quincy will begin to pour the foundation in tomorrow (Friday) night's season opener against Silver Lake at home at 6:30.

A young team, the Presidents return only four players as they graduated nine seniors, including three all-star starters. Of the top eight players on the team, three are sophomores and one's a freshman.

Starting in the front court are senior tri-captain Lavell Johnson and junior Steve Connolly at forward and senior tri-captain Joe Griffin at center. Johnson, who was surrounded by play-makers last year, is the go-to guy this season.

"He is one of the better ball players in the area," Fisher said. "He's hungry and he loves the game. He plays with passion at both ends of the court. People think he's just a shooter but he defends and runs the court as well as anyone. And he's a leader. He vocalizes a lot on the floor, communicating with his teammates.

"It's nice to have that experience back. But teams are going to come after him. Last year he was just another player on the team and this year he's the bull's eye. I think he'll respond to that."

Connolly and Griffin are both playing new positions. "Connolly is smart, steady and has an impeccable worth ethic," Fisher said. "He gets dirty and fights for loose balls. It's nice to have him back.

"Griffin is relentless under the basket and he's playing a new position to help the team. He's fundamentally sound and a quick learner. And he has a nice eight-foot jumper."

The first player off the bench will be sophomore Giovanni Cesare, who can also play guard. Juniors Tom Hazelhurst and Matt Boyle and sophomore Dashawn Matthews, a transfer from Charlestown, will also play forward and junior Kinsin Theodoris center.

In the back court, freshman Doug Scott, the younger brother of graduates Alex and Parker, will fill the point guard spot vacated by Parker.

"He's mature beyond his age in terms of basketball maturity," Fisher said. "Unfortunately, he's a freshman and a lot is expected out of him. He has quickness, vision, passion and knowledge of the game. He's a nice little player but lacks experience."

Scott will be partnered with senior tri-captain John Orlando. "Orlando is our best defensive guard in the back court," Fisher said. "He's steady and does everything right. I think his experience will help Scott big time."

Sophomore Parris Amado will be the first guard off the pine. Senior Everton DeCastro and juniors Sean Boyd, Wendell Cosgrove and Hazelhurst will also see time.

"First and foremost, our goal is to play together on a daily basis and get better individually and collectively as a team," Fisher said. "It's going to be very difficult to repeat last year. Our talent is not as strong but our depth is better.

"We need to take it one game at a time. I know it's a cliché. The road is going to be tougher. I feel as the season goes on, we'll get better. We're like a diamond you find in the haystack. Once you find it, you have to polish and clean it."

Rec. Dept., Elks Free Throw Contest

The Quincy Recreation Department and the Quincy Lodge of Elks will once again co-sponsor the Elk's National "Hoop Shoot" Free Throw Contest.

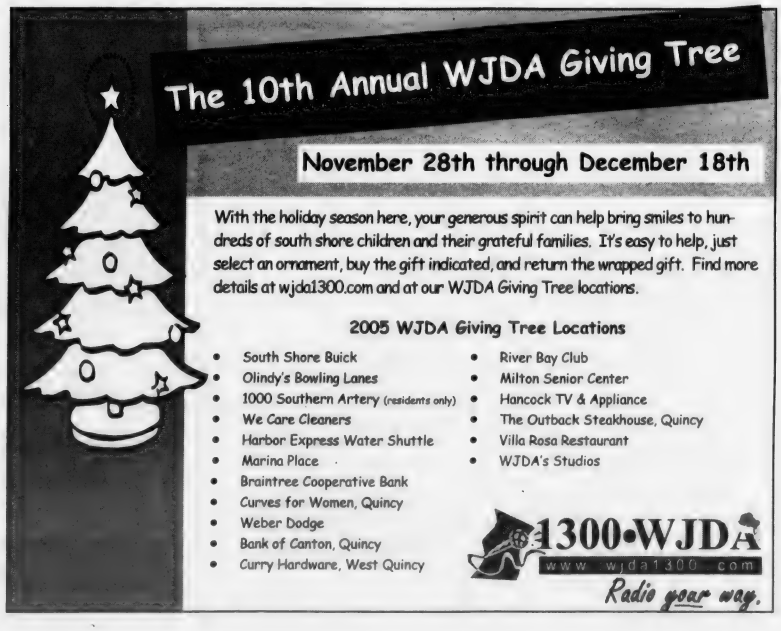
The first round of the Quincy contest will be offered at the following gymnasiums Saturday at 10 a.m.: Atherton Hough, Atlantic Middle, Bernazzani, Beechwood Knoll, Merrymount, Montclair, Point Webster, Snug Harbor, Squantum and Wollaston.

The first round will also be conducted at 3 p.m. Monday, Dec. 19, at Marshall School; Wednesday, Dec. 21, at Parker School and Thursday, Dec. 22, at the Lincoln Hancock Community School.

The Quincy competition is the first step in a national contest for boys and girls ages 8-13. Contestants are assigned to three separate categories in both boys and girls divisions. Age groups are 8-9, 10-11 and 12-13. The contestant's age is determined by April 1, 2006.

Each participant is awarded points for successful free throws. Boys and girls in the age 8-9 group will shoot from four feet in front of the regulation foul line.

The program will be supervised in neighborhood gymnasiums by Recreation Department leaders assigned their regular recreation programs in that area.



The program is free and contestants may participate even if not previously enrolled in the recreation program. Participants may choose any of the various times or sites to compete, but they may only compete in the Quincy qualifier.

"We are pleased that the Quincy Lodge of Elks has once again provided this program for the benefit of our participants," Recreation Leader Barry Welch said. "Many Quincy residents in the past have enjoyed the benefits of this activity at the local, regional and state level as well as the national championship.

The Quincy Lodge Hoop Shoot Chairman is Ed Miller, athletic director of Quincy Public Schools.

Red Raiders Mixing Newcomers, Returnees

BOYS' ICE HOCKEY

By CHRIS POISSON

The North Quincy High School hockey team has seen inconsistent results in the preseason as it tries to blend newcomers with returnees.

The Red Raiders scrimmaged Tuesday and Wednesday in hopes of finding the right combination heading into the season opener Saturday night at 8 against Plymouth South at Quincy Youth Arena.

"We have a mixed bag," said head coach Bob Doyle. "We have a group of 11 returnees and nine newcomers without much experience. So it's going to be a work in progress between the two groups. We've been a little inconsistent with our play in the preseason. Hopefully we can jell together and have a good year. They're a great group of kids."

North Quincy has been dealt a huge blow with the injury to senior Chris Tufo. The physical, first-line right winger hurt his hamstring in the Thanksgiving Day football game and there's no timetable for his return.

"It's a big loss," Doyle said. "But it gives some of the younger players a chance to step up and fill his spot."

With Tufo's injury, the Red Raiders now need to replace the production of two players as scoring sniper Paul Graham graduated. "That's a lot of points," Doyle said.

The all-junior second line features center Jimmy Fitzpatrick, left winger Nash Winters and right winger Ted Finnegan, a talented trio that also skates for the National Bantam A team.

Doyle expects Donovan, Fitzpatrick and Winters to shoulder much of the offensive load.

"Our second line is our best line right now," Doyle said. "We're quick, not very physical. Our goal is to be quicker than others and be aggressive. We'll be more physical when Tufo gets back."

Between the pipes, there's the returning tandem of senior tri-captain Frankie Sorrento and Matt Connors. "We should be strong in net," Doyle said. "Both are solid goaltenders. They should keep us in a lot of games."

Defensively, North Quincy has three experienced blueliners with senior tri-captain Evan Harrington and juniors Joe Canavan and Kenny Patey, who will also see time at forward.

It will try to mesh them with sophomore Derek Scott and freshmen Matt Furey and Matt Rodriguez. Also playing defense are seniors Rob Mann and Dave Finnegan.

"I've been real pleased with Derek Scott's physical play," Doyle said. "We have two freshmen that haven't missed a beat. They're not intimated. They have great vision and make smart plays."

After School, Evening Gym Programs Underway

The Quincy Recreation Department's after school and evening gym programs are underway in neighborhood gyms throughout the city.

The programs are supervised by members of the Recreation Department staff who oversee a variety of gym activities, games and sports that are appropriate to the age group of the participants.

Programs are offered at a variety of days and times depending upon the location, availability of the gyms and number of participants. Quincy residents are eligible to register at the location of their choice and attend different locations if they desire.

The programs are open to participants from private and parochial schools as well as public school students. Recreation equipment is supplied by the Recreation Department and participants are requested to wear sneakers at gym locations.

Quincy Girls Tip Off Basketball Season Tonight

The Quincy High School girls' basketball team squeaked into the state tournament last year by winning its final two games at the end of the wire.

This season, the Presidents hope their five returnees and six newcomers can extend their postseason streak to four straight years — and with a little less of a dramatic ending.

"We've made the tournament three years in a row and we hope to continue that," said head coach Jeff Bretsch. "We definitely have the kids to do that. I expect we'll be a good team with the five returnees who are the starters. The kids worked hard in the offseason and played in summer leagues and fall leagues. They've worked hard to develop their game."

Quincy tips off the season today (Thursday) at Weymouth at 6:45 p.m. Next week, it hosts Plymouth South Wednesday and Methuen Thursday, both games starting at 6:30 p.m.

Starting in the front court are senior co-captains Jessica Page and Ashlee Scott and junior Brighid Kyle.

Page, who was the leading rebounder and second leading scorer last year, will step into the leading role vacated by Nicole O'Sullivan. A jack of all trades, she also has the ability to deliver in the clutch.

"Page was a terrific player last year," Bretsch said. "This year I think she'll naturally slide into the role as leader. She's very intelligent and makes everyone a better player. That's her greatest strength. She can do whatever we need her to do."

Scott, who is coming off an outstanding volleyball season, is an aggressive player who should shine defensively.

"She's doing a great job as a captain," Bretsch said. "She's not that big but she's defending centers. She's athletic, strong and aggressive. She's tough as nails and doesn't back down from anyone."

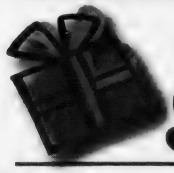
Kyle, a transfer from North Quincy last year, has no trouble putting the ball in the hoop but has also picked it up a notch in the defensive end.

"Brighid has come a long way from last year," Bretsch said. "She's really matured and grown into her role. Her most notable improvement has been her defense and she's capable of putting points on the board, too."

In the back court, sophomores Meagan Tobin and Marybeth Torpey have earned starting roles in their second year with the team.

"Meagan and Marybeth have made big strides from nervous freshmen to starters," Bretsch said.

The bench features three players called up from both the JV and freshman teams. They are senior center Megan Brennan, junior forward Hope Collins, junior guard Sarah Troy, sophomore forward Sasha Smith, sophomore forward Julie Kisielius and sophomore center Elizabeth Bock.



"We're a very young team," Bretsch said. "We have a lot of new players, but they work hard and are very intelligent. By the end of the season, they'll make significant contributions.

"We don't have a lot of height after losing Nicole O'Sullivan. We have a lot of good ball handlers and kids that know what to do with the ball. What we lack in height we make up with aggressiveness."

SCOTT DEWARE

A Thought For The Week

We are all fortified by traditions. They play an important part in our lives. Traditions provide patterns on which we can depend and they give us security, a sense of belonging.

A tradition is more than just something that has been handed down. It comes from the heart. A tradition is something that you believe in dearly and would like to see handed down to your children.

Granted, in our hectic way of life today, some of the traditional ways of doing things cannot help but to be changed. However, some of them can.

Traditions are important to all of us and most of them have helped us to grow, and even make us think a little more. So I ask you, before changing, or even eliminating your traditions, consider how much they have affected you and what you have learned from them. It might just change your mind. . .

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) At this time you might want to resist that otherwise admirable Aries penchant for getting to the heart of a matter quickly. Keep in mind that a delicate situation calls for patience.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your aspects favor more diplomacy and fewer direct confrontations when dealing with a relationship problem. Avoiding hurt feelings can help in your search for the truth.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Positive aspects are strong this week. Although you might still have to deal with some problems caused by a recent period of turmoil, you are making progress, and that's what counts.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A family matter could benefit from your counsel. But don't come into it unless invited, and don't stay if you feel uneasy. Just remember to reassure one and all that you'll be there for them.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) As the truth about an ongoing situation emerges, you could find that you were right to defer judgment before you had all the facts. Now would be a good time to move on to other matters.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Your plans to take control of a personal situation because you feel you are best qualified could create resentment. Best to hear what everyone else involved in the matter has to say about it.

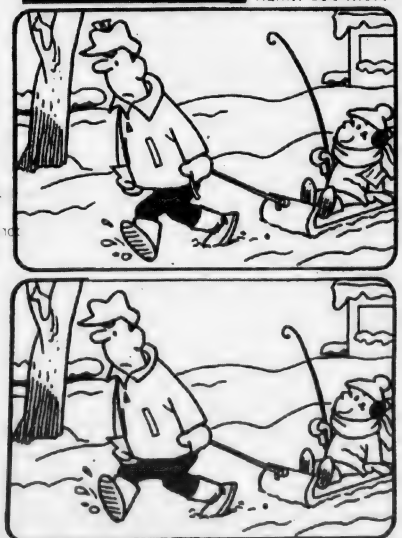
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Uncovering some surprising background facts about that ongoing personal matter could make you reconsider the extent of your involvement. A neutral family member offers advice.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Religious or spiritual themes start to dominate your aspect this week. This can serve as a counterweight to the mounting effects of the season's growing commercialization.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Taking on that recent challenge impressed a lot of important decision-makers. Meanwhile, proceed with your holiday plans, and don't forget to include you-know-who in them.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Disagreeing with an opinion you can't accept could be dicey, and your motives might be questioned. Best to wait to mount a challenge until you have support for your position.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Getting involved in helping others in this increasingly hectic period not only makes the generous Aquarian feel good, but you could also gain a more substantive benefit from your actions.



PISCES (February 19 to March 20) The Piscean way of thinking clearly and objectively helps you resolve a complex situation without creating any ill will. Don't be surprised if your counsel is requested on another matter.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a way of persuading people to look at the positive possibilities that make up any choices they might face.

and were in agreement with the plan.

"There are a number of parcels that will be taken no matter what the design," said Jeff Mullen, attorney for Rizzo Associates, designers of the plan.

"We've dealt with each tenant," said Harrington. "No one has been ignored in the process."

The public hearing part of the meeting showed a split over the land-taking with 14 in support of the plan and seven registering their opposition.

"The first I heard about it was what was in the newspaper," said Jerry Hanly, owner of the Holy Ground.

"I got blindsided," said Paul Sterman, owner of Frantic Framers. "I didn't know anything was going on until (Hanly) told me. My business was going to be taken, then it was not going to be."

Public Works Commissioner Steve O'Donnell said legally the Fin Com could only alert land owners and it was up to them to notify their tenants.

"We believe as an organization that the time is now to proceed," said Dean Rizzo, executive director of Quincy 2000 Collaborative. who , rculated 20 letters of support from the Quincy business community.

"Twenty years is a long time to be doing this," said Bob Curry of Curry's Hardware. "Now is our chance to act as a team. We need to create things downtown."

"This really isn't a hard vote to take," added former Mayor Walter Hannon, chairman of the Mayor's Downtown Committee. "I just wonder if I'll live long enough to see this happen."

Not everyone favored the land-taking.

"Five months ago, I purchased 14 Revere Rd., said Steve Morris, proprietor of a salon at that address. "At the time, the land-taking plans did not involve the property but eight weeks later, plans changed.

"I mortgaged everything I owned to buy this. This is a nightmare. I put a $180,000 down payment. I think you ought to be ashamed of yourselves, especially the city.

Raymondi tried to hold out for action on the Town Brook Flood Control Project.

"Here we are 10 years after Town Brook and it's not yet to be constructed," he said. "I've lived with this frustration for years. We need to recognize as a City Council that an area of the city is being flooded.

"To do nothing, I believe is unacceptable. The people I represent continue to be flooded."

O'Donnell acknowledged that Town Brook is an issue.

But, he added, "the addition of it to this order would just cause confusion. The mayor's recommendation is that it should not be included."

"I'm not sure we should link the two," said Council President Frank McCauley. "It would put an aura of uncertainty on the whole project."

"The sooner we get it going the better for Quincy," said Helen Murphy, who described herself as a "partial" land owner.

Raymondi's final amendment proposal called for improvements in the intersection of Ryan Parkway, Miller Stile Road and Revere Road. It was also shot down by an 8-1 vote.

Putting Merry In Christmas

Local Charities Helping Hundreds Of Needy Families

By MIKAELA SLANEY

A sluggish economy plus the hardships of war and an unusually high number of natural disasters, have shown once again how the worst of times can bring out the best in people, as local charities moved to help hundreds of needy families have a brighter holiday season.

"I'm amazed at the amount of good will," said John Yazwinski, executive director of Father Bill's, a shelter that is a temporary home to 30 families, and 150 adults this holiday season.

"There are so many constituents, community-groups, safe-groups and banks that are reaching out to us first. In the years past I found myself on the phone reaching out to people to help," said Yazwinski.

Families living at Father Bill's will receive new gloves, hats and $25 gift cards for groceries and toys.

The Saint Vincent DePaul Society of St. John's Church, helped more than 129 families.

With their efforts and the donations of gifts and money to their giving tree, they have donated gifts for 20 girls and their children staying at the Friends of the Unborn.

The remainder of the families get a turkey and supermarket giftcard, in addition to two gifts per adult and at least four per child.

The organization is comprised of six or seven couples who belong to the parish.

"We've had great Pastors who've supported us, just allowing us to do what we do," said president Bill Lawless. "They don't have to let us use their names and facilities.

Lawless recognized the efforts of St. John's pastors, past and present: Father Bill McCarthy, Father Peter Quinn and Father Richard Cannon.

"We collect from the people in the parish, so we try to give it back to people in the parish who are in need," said Lawless.

Parish members fulfill gift ornament requests, and

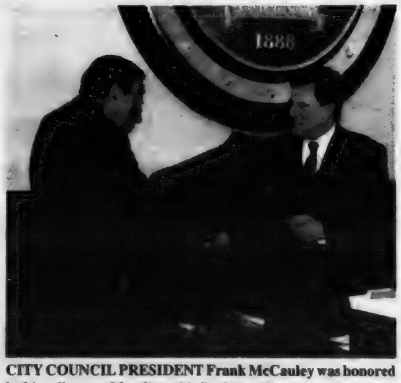
Closes Distinguished 32-Year Career

Old Politician McCauley 'Just Fades Away'



Frank McCauley took the final bow in his distinguished 32-year political career to a standing ovation at his final city council meeting Monday night.

The venerable, 76-year-old City Council president attended his final Council meeting Monday night, gathering mementoes of his 32-year career along with plaudits from his colleagues, friend and foe.

"He's a role model for me," said Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi, his opposite number who lost a bitter battle for mayor to McCauley in 1981.

"We developed this rela-

'I Will Miss You'

Gardner Praised At Last Council Meeting

By MIKAELA SLANEY

Alicia Gardner was honored at her last meeting of her two-year career as the Ward 6 councillor Monday night.

A photograph of the Adam's Mansion, by Libbie Payne, and autographed by the council members, was presented to her.

"I will miss you," said Gardner who is leaving to attend to family matters.

"As (McCauley) said, 'you never know what the future may hold,' although my family doesn't want me to say that," she chuckled.

"I want to thank you for your services," said McCauley, "you're on top of the issues with your ward."

"You do all the hard work and are the first to credit other people for it," said Councillor at-large John Keenan.

"You've succeeded at everything you've done, but most importantly you've succeeded as a daughter, a sister and a mother," said Ward 4 councillor Jay Davis III. "You've put family first. That's something you should be remembered by.

"You're a rolemodel for so many young women and daughters."

"I know how passionate you were about this job," said Ward 3 councillor Kevin Coughlin. "Your instincts were, at all times, terrific."

Gardner was joined by her family including her parents, Robert and Gloria Noble, her husband, William, daughter, Nancy and son Robert. (Her other son William was unable to attend.)

Work Progressing On Wollaston Beach Project

Sen. Michael Morrissey and Reps. Bruce Ayers and Stephen Tobin gave a progress report this week on the status of the ongoing Wollaston Beach improvement projects by the Department of Conservation and Recreation (DCR).

"The delegation and the citizens of Quincy applaud the department for its continued efforts to beautify Wollaston Beach," Morrissey said.

DCR Commissioner Stephen Burrington, in response to their request for an update, said reconstruction of the drainage system has accounted for a majority of the work thus far, and to date nearly all catch basins have been replaced or rebuilt.

In addition, electrical work for relocated street lighting and traffic signalization has progressed in conjunction with the installation of water lines for new showers and water bubblers.

"We are grateful that one of the most important elements of Wollaston Beach, the seawall, has been repaired along with the beginning work for the new granite wall at East Squantum Street," Ayers said.

"DCR has informed us that the seawall will be sealed this winter," Morrissey added.

"Over the winter, contractors and subcontractors will continue working," Tobin said. "By the spring, DCR hopes to have the road resurfaced, curbs reset and new sidewalks poured."

In addition, it is planned that by the spring the signal systems will be completed and benches, bike racks and water features will be installed.

"After many years of planning, design and permitting, it is satisfying to see these long-anticipated improvements taking shape at last," Burrington said.

For more information, call Morrissey at 617-722-1494.

Baby Jesus Spray Painting Still Under Investigation

Defacting Of WWII Statue Anguishes Bulge Veteran

By TOM HENSHAW

"I'm kind of aggravated" said Lennie Morris. "That fella kneeling there was one of my men.

"They ought to have those kids clean up the statue in the cold until they freeze."

Morris had just viewed the World War II statue in Merrymount Park that had been spray painted by vandals last Friday a few days after its dedication.

Three 13-year-old boys, two from Quincy and one from Weymouth, were arrested for the vandalism Sunday and were due to appear in juvenile court Wednesday.

Morris was one of the founders of the committee that planned the statue honoring the fighting men and women of World War II.

The wish for a cold punishment for the perps came natural to him.

He's a veteran of the Battle of the Bulge, where outnumbered American troops held out against a last ditch German assault in the bitter winter of 1944-45.

The statue, which shows four soldiers, sailors and Marines, was cleaned of its spray paint by Tuesday but the anguish remained.

"I don't know why they moved it from City Hall," said Morris. "I don't know why it wasn't patrolled by police like City Hall. I don't know why they don't have lights in it."

"I'm not sure lights would have made any difference," said Tom Koch, executive director of the Park Department.

"The manger scene at City Hall was fully lighted yet somebody spray painted the Baby Jesus."

That happened on Wednesday night when the door of Bethany Congregational Church and the sidewalk at Presidents Place were also painted with slurs.

Koch said there appeared to be no connection between the two incidents of vandalism.

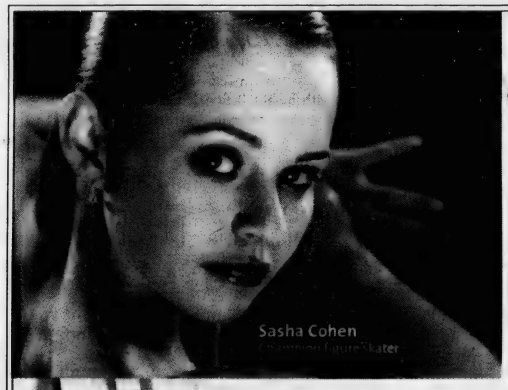
He did, however, indicate that some lighting may be included when that area of the park is finished "as originally envisioned by Charles Francis Adams."

Police arrested one youngster Sunday afternoon while, they said, he was spray-painting a building on Old Colony Avenue.

The others were taken into custody the same day at a gas station at Hancock Street and Standish Avenue.

All three were charged with a felony, defacing and vandalizing personal property valued at more than $250.

No one has been arrested for the vandalism to the Baby Jesus figure, which is the same one that was stolen last Christmas and later found in the Town River.



QUINCY CARES DONATION - Commonwealth Building, Inc., Wood Commercial, both of Quincy and Floor Works of Taunton recently contributed $5,000 to Quincy Cares to help in the recovery of areas affected by Hurricane Katrina. The three local businesses forwent their annual holiday parties to make the generous donation. Dear Santa:

Dear Santa:

I've tried to be good all year. Honest.

But I know I broke my promise that I would write to you sooner. So here I am again. Late again.

But, cross my heart, I'm going to write to you a lot sooner next year to make it easier for you to pack your sleigh. No more last minute requests. I'll try to do it right after Thanksgiving.

As you know, Santa, most of the gifts I ask for are in a humorous vein — but some in a serious. I know it's late but I would really appreciate it if you could deliver as many of these gifts as you can when you and Rudolph and the other reindeer reach Quincy.

And just a reminder, Santa: We are the Quincy that pronounces it Quin-zee the way it should be. Wouldn't want you to mix us up with the Quincys that pronounce it Quincy-cee.

So, Santa, please drop off the following to the following:

Mayor BILL PHELAN, the solution to the still dragging, still haunting new Quincy High School issue. If it isn't renovating the present school, then the right spot for a brand new school. With a go-ahead from Treasurer TIM CAHILL and a shovel for him to help break ground . . . FRANK McCAULEY, a billboard-sized "Well Done" citation for his 32-year distinguished political career as mayor, city councillor, city council president and school committeeman. He's been a fiscal watchdog, too, and will be missed . . . Santa, could you also bring him a piggy bank for the pennies he likes to pinch . . . DOUG GUTRO, a unanimous vote for the city council presidency . . . ELAINE DWYER, the same for the school committee vice chairmanship . . . Former Mayor JIM SHEETS, success in the fund-raising for the planned Adams Family Memorial in Washington, D.C. . . . DAVID McCULLOUGH, an Honorary Quincy Citizenship. And a box of ribbons for his Royal typewriter he still uses for those Pulitzer Prize biographies like John Adams . . . ED KEOHANE and his Quincy Partnership colleagues, a Quincy Partnership statue . . . DISCOVER QUINCY, a new executive director as capable as JENNIFER LOGUE who is leaving. And more success for JENNIFER who is returning to WGBH as Senior Publicist in Media Relations . . . RON MARIANO and JO-ANN BRAGG, who are stepping down from the school committee after serving well for 16 and 12 years, respectively, a well-deserved "thank you" . . . MIKE McFARLAND, a good year as he moves from the school committee to the city council . . . ALICIA GARDNER, a happy retirement and maybe a thought or two about returning to the political scene . . . BRIAN McNAMEE, constituent pleasing resolves as he succeeds her as Ward 6 councillor . . . City Clerk JOE SHEA, the day he would still like to see: when all of the city's registered voters actually turn out to vote . . . Police Chief ROBERT CROWLEY, a year without major crimes, violence and fatal accidents . . . Fire Chief TIM PETTINELLI, a year without deadly fires and false alarms . . . Sheriff MIKE BELLOTTI, the right time to run state-wide . . . School Supt. RICHARD DeCRISTOFARO and Public Works Commr. STEVE O'DONNELL, just a dusting of snow . . . DEAN RIZZO, executive director Quincy 2000 Collaborative, and MARALIN MANNING, executive director Quincy Business Association, a pair of roller skates or a scooter to get around easier to all the places they get around to, helping Quincy businesses . . . Senator MIKE MORRISSEY and Reps. BRUCE AYERS, RON MARIANO and STEVE TOBIN, continued clout to bring Quincy its rightful share of Beacon Hill goodies . . . SAL GIARRATANI, a large eraser to keep beside his large box of stationery . . . JOE FASCI, our Granbury, Texas, correspondent, a new 10-gallon hat to go with his spurs that jingle, jangle . . . On a more serious note, Santa, JOE reports sighting this bumper sticker: "Many Who Plan To Seek God At The 11th Hour, Die At 10:30. (That will give us all something to think about) . . . Fr. BILL McCARTHY and JOHN YAZWINSKI, the miraculous day when they can lock the door at Father Bill's Place because it and other shelters for the homeless are no longer needed because there are no homeless . . . Majors DOUG and LINDA JONES of the Salvation Army's Quincy Temple Corps, an 11th hour surge to fill their kettles to the brim to help Quincy families in need this Christmas season. (The kettles are running behind so far, Santa) . . . A Happy, Healthy New Year for Fr. BILL MULLIN, CLARA YEOMANS, our 1989 Citizen of the Year, VIRGINIA SWALLOW, MARGE NASH, JOYCE BAKER, IRVING ISAACSON, JOHN DONLON, CHARLIE RYEBERG, and SHARYN (PAOLUCCI) SWATEK, a true "Profile In Courage" . . . The best always to our good friends at WJDA: JAY and TERRY ASHER, JOE CATALANO, MIKE and DEBBIE LOGAN, JIM FELCHI, CHARLIE ROSS, TERRY FANCHER . . . And all my love to DOROTHY, GAIL, LINDA, DONNA (D.J.), DOLLY, BOB, AMY B., FREDDIE, JIM, AMY G., MICHELLE, KIM, BRIAN, KELLIE, LINDSAY, JAY, MICHAEL, DAVE, BEN, JULIE, WENDY and (?) . . .

Santa, SHARRON BEALS still waits up Christmas Eve at the Beechwood Community Center, hoping to catch you. She wants to personally give you a copy of her favorite "Thought For Christmas" to bring back to Mrs. Claus. We've mentioned it before but here we go again:

"Do you know what would have happened if it had been the Three Wise Women instead of the Three Wise Men? They would have asked directions, arrived on time, helped deliver the baby, cleared the stable and made a casserole, brought practical gifts and there would be "Peace On Earth."

Santa, I'm sure I've again forgotten some people including good friends. But to all of them and all of you, a very Merry Christmas, Happy Chanukah, and a Happy, Healthy New Year.

Scenes From Yesterday

MERRY CHRISTMAS
from QUINCY, MASS.

Largest Christmas Tree in United States.
85 feet high contributed by Retail Merchants.

CONTINUING ON WITH a Christmas tradition, this is the eleventh year we have published this 1934 postcard. This 85-foot Christmas tree was decorated with over 600 lights and two stars on the top that blinked alternately. Its placement in front of the Granite Trust Bank building was with the approval of bank president Theophilus King. He had built the art deco building in 1929 on the site of the old Bethany Church. King was Howard Johnson's banker and convinced him to open his second store, a restaurant, in the bank building at One Chestnut Street on the left. Johnson had his first office here as well. Homer's Jewelry store was under the awning on the right, now home to Rogers Jewelry Store. Today, this building is being considered as the centerpiece of a new large development that could go all the way down to Cottage Avenue. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net

Christmas Eve Promenade Draws 10,000

Dec. 22-28
1939
66 Years Ago

More than 10,000 people strolled up and down a darkened Hancock Street singing carols in the city's first Christmas Eve promenade in downtown Quincy.

Vehicular traffic was blocked at Washington and School streets, and street and store lights were turned off leaving only the colored lights of sidewalk Christmas trees.

The Granite Trust Co. bell ringers gave a special Yuletide program on the bandstand on Chestnut Street.

Mayor Thomas S. Burgin called the promenade "one of the most beautiful activities ever held in our city."

Reddish bronze Christmas bells grouped over the decorated doorway at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Ryan of 8 Samoset Ave., who won the $5 first prize for decorations offered by the Merrymount Association.

"Nowhere in Quincy have more beautifully decorated homes been seen during the current holiday season than in Merrymount," said a member of the prize committee.

Christmas babies were born at City Hospital to Mr. and Mrs. John Balducci of 113 Butler Road and Mr. and Mrs. John Melanson of 96 Montclair Ave.

PARKING LOT HAILED

City Councillor Aldo Della Chiesa called the purchase of the municipal parking area to the west of Hancock Street between Granite and School streets "one of the most progressive steps the City Council has ever taken."

"I have been through the parking area many times recently," he said, "and observed with satisfaction the hundreds of cars which fill the spaces there."

EIGHTH GRADERS from St. Ann School stand in front of the Korean Wear Veterans Memorial following wreath laying ceremony on Veterans Day.

St. Ann School Students Pay Tribute To Veterans

Middle school students at St. Ann School in Wollaston observed Veterans Day by honoring Quincy veterans of the Korean War, singing patriotic songs and listening to a veteran chaplain of the war in Vietnam.

The Rev. Arthur Calter spoke to the youngsters about his experiences in the military and showed them several pictures of soldiers who fought in Vietnam.

The students also wrote letters of appreciation to veterans of World War II and had them delivered to area nursing homes. Victoria Barney, Michael Medeiros and Tori Smeglin read their letters to the assembly.

After the assembly in the gym, the students walked to the Korean War Veterans Memorial at the corner of Hancock Street and Southern Artery, placed a wreath at the memorial and prayed for all veterans.

Sister Catherine, the principal, conveyed the school's appreciation to Father Calter, John Mahoney of the Morrisette American Legion Post, the teachers and students for their participation in the day's events.

Beachcombing Treasures Topic Of Library Program

Quincy resident Norma Jane Langford will draw attention to the mysterious shards of pottery and sea glass that was up on Quincy's beaches next month at the Thomas Crane Public Library,

In her presentation, "China Beach: Treasures from the Sea," Langford will show slides, display her own collection of treasures and explore the story of her finds Thursday, Jan. 5, at 7 p.m.

Then she will lead a winter beachcombing walk Saturday, Jan. 7, at the Edgewater Drive beach in Houghs Neck, beginning at 10:30 a.m. at Brill Field at Sea Street and Island Avenue.

Rain date for the walk is Sunday, Jan. 8, at 1 p.m.

Langford's interest in beachcombing began during a winter walk along the beach in Houghs Neck when she found pre-World War I amethyst glass, hand-blown glass circa 1820 and a tiny porcelain doll from Europe.

She is a senior lecturer at Northeastern University and writes and lectures on a variety of topics, including historic houses and gardens, archaeology, urban farming and travel.

The China Beach program is sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library and the Park Department's Environmental Treasurers program.

For more information of the slide presentation, call 617-376-1301 or visit thomascranelibrary.org. For more information on the walk, call 617-472-0799.

'Feed The Hungry' Event Raises $60,000 For Interfaith Social Services

The eighth annual Interfaith Social Services "Feed The Hungry" event held recently at Lombardo's in Randolph raised more than $60,000 for Interfaith Social Services based in Quincy.

Local business leaders and residents attended the festive evening produced by Tiffanie Williams & Co. of Quincy. The event featured décor donated by Party by Design, and a Snow Queen living art raffle table, presented by Gin C. Productions Air Brush Face and Body Artist.

Attendees participated in silent and live auctions and raffles, enjoyed a sit-down dinner and danced to the music of rhythm & blues band "Five after Five" with dancer Brian Bergdoll of New York City.

The event also featured a four-foot Chocolate Fantasy Fondue Fountain from Be Dipped of Weymouth.

Proceeds from the event benefit Interfaith Social Services, whose numerous programs and services have helped those in need throughout Boston's South Shore since 1947.

Marie's Kitchen

Oyster Stuffed Pork

Here is a great oyster stuffing recipe for a roast pork that I will be cooking for Christmas. I plan to make a 6-7 pounder and if the bone is in you can stuff the top by cutting it all along the top edge. Then secure it with toothpicks. If you use a pork shoulder you can do the same thing. Also pork tenderloins can be cut in halves, but not all the way. Any leftover stuffing can be baked in a greased casserole dish.

OYSTER STUFFING

1 can oysters (fresh if you are ambitious)

4 slices of bread cut in cubes

2 tablespoons fresh parsley (chopped)

1 small onion

2 stalks celery

1/4 cup white wine

1 cup chicken or beef stock

1/2 cup seasoned bread crumbs

2 tablespoons oil and 1 tablespoon butter or margarine for sautéing

Sauté the onion and celery. Add the oysters, the chicken stock and the wine. Then add the bread and blend well and then add the bread crumbs. It should be dry enough to stuff the meat, otherwise, add a little more crumbs.

Slit the top part of the roast and place the stuffing. Bake in a 325 degree oven for 20 minutes to the pound. If you use a thermometer, follow those directions.

Fallon Ambulance Donates $2,000 To Quincy Schools

Fallon Ambulance Service, the region's largest independent, family-owned ambulance service provider, recently donated $1,000 to two Quincy schools as part of a commitment to contribute $5,000 to each school over the next five years.

The Lincoln-Hancock Community School and the Sterling Middle School are each recipients of the $1,000 donation. Fallon Ambulance Service donated the money as part of their ongoing commitment to the City of Quincy and the neighborhood of their newly opened company headquarters.

The schools have earmarked the funds for cultural programs, computer programs and books.

"We are proud to be a part of the neighborhood and the City of Quincy," said Peter Racicot, senior vice president of Business Development. "The schools do a tremendous job enriching the lives of the children and making this a quality community for people to live.

"We look forward to continued involvement in promoting education within the community."

Fallon Ambulance Service traces its beginnings to 1936 when James R. Fallon, Sr., established the company; it remains a family-operated business to this day. Mr. Fallon's son, James R. (Ray) Fallon, Jr., and five of his children played a key role in the company's operation, development and growth.

Fallon Ambulance employs more than 400 personnel, and operates more than 100 vehicles. Fallon Ambulance is the 9-1-1 provider for the municipalities of Milton, Quincy, Brookline, Weymouth, Braintree and Dedham and provides primary backup to a growing number of communities, including Boston, Randolph, Hanover and Norwell.

Fallon Ambulance Service additionally provides medical transportation for a number of area medical facilities including nursing homes, hospitals, and HMOs throughout Greater Boston.

In addition to its present headquarters at 111 Brook Road, West Quincy, the company operates satellite offices throughout its coverage area.

For additional information about Fallon Ambulance Services or programs that the company offers, contact Peter Racicot, senior vice president, at (617) 745-2117.

(Cont'd From Page 1)

tionship of openness and frankness. Our backgrounds, they're a little different. He's supported me in races and I've supported him is races. He cares deeply of the structure of government."

It was Raymondi who presented him with the council president's gavel.

Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro presented him with a photograph of himself on the final day as an elected official.

"He helped this council do great things," said Gutro, who is the favorite to succeed him as council president.

Ward 6 Councillor Alicia Gardner, who is also leaving the council after one two-year term, gave him an aerial photo of his home community, Houghs Neck.

McCauley is the only man who held all four elected offices in Quincy — school committeeman, ward councillor, at-large councillor and mayor from 1982 to 1989.

"You are one of the best minds in government," Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin told him.

As mayor, McCauley reveled in the reputation of a penny-pinching chief executive and he continued the image as the city's conservative fiscal watchdog when he returned to the Council.

Councillor-at-large John Keenan recalled a time when he was in high school and Raymondi sat on one side of him and McCauley on the other.

As the often loquacious Raymondi spoke, Keenan said he remembered McCauley looking around as if to say "Isn't his time up yet?"

"Some things never change," laughed Keenan.

"Hopefully, when our day comes, we can say we were as successful as they were."

"It's time, I guess, really to say good-bye," said McCauley, who lifted and paraphrased lines from General Douglas MacArthur for his swan song.

"Years ago," he said, "a long-since forgotten poet said that old politicians never die, they just fade away.

"So I conclude my political career tonight and just fade away, an old politician who tried to do his duty as God gave him the light to see that duty.

"Good-bye."

With them are grade 8 students (from left) Kathleen Gorman, Emily Hajjar and Christopher Mariano. Gov. Mitt Romney was also an award recipient but was not present at the ceremony.

Impact Quincy Honors Eight Community Heroes

By MIKAELA SLANEY

Impact Quincy honored eight "community heroes" during a recent award ceremony at City Hall.

Each recipient was recognized for their efforts to make Quincy substance-abuse free.

The main focus was on preventing teenage drinking and drunken driving.

The award recipients:

Governor Mitt Romney,; Ron Bersani, grandfather of Melanie Powell of Melanie's Bill; Lieutenant Governor Kerry Healey; Kim Arouca, congressional aide from the office of Congressman William Delahunt; Joyce Livramento-Young, support services director at Quincy Housing Authority; Christine Prendiville, health educator at Sterling Middle School; Marilyn Lumaghini, secretary at the Broad Meadows Middle School and George Haivanis, owner of Wollaston Wines & Spirits.

Romney and Healey were unable to attend the ceremony. Accepting on Healey's behalf was Craig Hughes, executive director of the Governor's Council on Substance Abuse.

The award presenters:

Barbara Fenby, health educator at Broad Meadows Middle School, with grade eight peer advocates; Bill Spinks, director of Prevention and Intervention Services at Bay State Community Services; Alejandro Rivera, program director of Impact Quincy; Michelle Routhier, ROSS grant Coordinator at Quincy Housing Authority; Earl Metzler, principal of Sterling Middle School and Peter Turowski, liquor inspector of the Quincy Police Department.

Speakers at the ceremony include:

Mayor William Phelan; Arthur Keough, chairman of Impact Quincy and Ken Tarabelli, executive director of Bay State Community Services.

Bersani and Governor Romney were awarded for their collective efforts to pass Melanie's Bill, enforcing stricter drunk driving laws, named after Bersani's 13 year old granddaughter who was killed by a repeat drunk driving offender three years ago.

"I know how hard and difficult that must have been for you," Phelan told Bersani.

"For something great in history to take place... it starts with one family... that risks sharing their story and reaches out to neighboring communities," said Fenby "then one governor who hears about it and believes in making positive change."

"(Healey) was able to convene the executive office of human services, bring together the secretary, the commissioner, all the different departments in the commonwealth, and also to deal with those issues that really permeate our field," said Spinks.

Rivera said that Arouca has been "crucial" to Impact Quincy. Routhier honored Livramento-Young for bringing "conviction and a sense of pride," to the Quincy Housing Authority. Metzler stressed the importance of teaching students the dangers of substance abuse, and credited Prendiville for her unrecognized efforts behind the scene.

Fenby recognized Lumaghini's personal history with substance abuse in her family, and the established drug-prevention forums to help other families coping with similar struggles.

"George Haivanis has his own responsibility in ensuring that establishments around Quincy are serving individuals responsibly, making sure that alcohol, which is a drug, does not get into the wrong hands," said Phelan

Raymondi Dissents Over Flooding Concerns

City Council Gives Final Green-Light For Concourse Takings

By MIKAELA SLANEY

The city council formally approved the land-taking for the Quincy City Concourse in an 8 to 1 vote, with Ward 2 councillor Daniel Raymondi as the lone dissenter because of flooding concerns.

The city council approval will assure the land-taking of nine parcels of commercially zoned land valued at $7,986,200.

The council also approved authority for the mayor to borrow $10 million for engineering costs and land-taking expenses.

DAN RAYMONDI

The council's full membership Finance Committee last week gave the project an "ought to pass" vote.

The project will connect Burgin Parkway with McGrath Highway across Hancock St.

Raymondi was unanimously voted down again with the reintroduction of three of his prior amendments, in addition to a new amendment adding "where it's practicable."

"I'd like to wonder, or inquire whether this city council is interested in resolving the flooding conditions that affects Bigalow St.," said Raymondi, "or if the majority, if everyone feels that it's uncommon."

"If the sense is that 'this is not a problem, and that we're going to construct this roadway whether it's going to impact traffic or not, whether the infrastructure underneath this road will accommodate the state funding or the Bigolow Street Relief Conduit' then I have some concerns about that," said Raymondi.

FIRE SAFETY

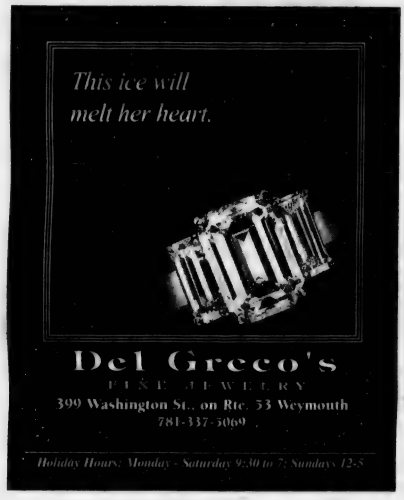
Protecting Your Home Against Carbon Monoxide

Who didn't shake their head last winter when they heard of the tragedies where lives were lost due to carbon monoxide poisoning?

Once again, I typically see a home as a family's safe haven and to hear of lives lost within one is truly tragic. I believe the incidents I refer to were caused by snow covering sidewalk vents so that the products of combustion from furnaces couldn't properly be expelled to the outside. The carbon monoxide then remained within the confines of the home killing its occupants.

What is carbon monoxide? It is a poisonous, colorless, odorless and tasteless gas which is produced whenever any fuel, such as gas, oil, kerosene, wood or charcoal is burned. When released into the atmosphere it is generally harmless to an individual. When released into a confined area such as a house or garage it can initially cause flu-like symptoms. At higher exposures, it can cause confusion, render an occupant debilitated and ultimately kill.



What should you do or avoid to minimize an accumulation of carbon monoxide within your home or garage? Have flues and chimneys checked for leaks or blockages by a qualified service technician. Have heating appliances serviced yearly prior to the heating season. Never use a charcoal grill within a home. Never use a gas oven to heat your home. Don't leave a vehicle running within a garage, particularly if it is beneath or attached to your home. Don't sleep in any room with an un-vented, gas heather. And finally, make certain any sidewall or direct appliance vent is clear of obstructions such as drifting snow and bushes so that proper ventilation is maintained.

How else can I protect my family? Install a carbon monoxide detector in your home. Make certain a recognized testing institute such as UL approves it. Follow the installation instructions. The State Fire Marshal's Office recommends placement near bedrooms so that family members will awaken at night. Place them where people spend most of their time, where they will be heard, and where they can be seen.

What do I do if I suspect carbon monoxide exposure? Get out of the house and get fresh air immediately. Call the fire department from a neighbor's house, and if you have symptoms, seek medical help immediately.

Once again, I prescribe to that ounce of prevention for protection. Maintain fuel burning appliances in proper working order, use them as directed, and be mindful of conditions that may restrict their ventilation. Install a carbon monoxide detector as per instructions and in the unlikely event of an exposure, leave the house and call the fire department immediately.

Be safe!

Recreation Schedule During Vacation Week

The Quincy Recreation Department will utilize 10 school gymnasiums to conduct an expanded schedule of recreation programs during the upcoming school vacation.

The department will open gyms from 9 a.m. to noon for a variety of activities from basketball, floor hockey and gym games.

The free program is for boys and girls ages 8 through high school. Registration is done at the program locations and participants are asked to wear sneakers and be residents of Quincy.

"The school vacation programs have been increasingly popular with our large population of working parents," said Recreation Director Barry Welch. "We are pleased that Mayor Phelan and the City Council continue to support these programs as an important part of the overall recreation programs."

Over 120 hours of gym programs will be conducted in all neighborhoods of the city and participants may attend the programs of their own choice. The core program is 9 to 10:30 a.m. for ages 8 through grade 5 and 10:30 a.m. to noon for middle and high school age. There may be slight changes in some locations to accommodate the numbers in attendance.

The department will continue to operate its popular night program for middle and high school participants during the vacation week with some modifications to accommodate the holiday season.

The following gyms will be supervised Dec. 27-31 from 9 a.m. to noon: Atherton Hough, Beechwood Knoll, Bernazzani, Merrymount, Montclair, Snug Harbor, Squantum, Wollaston, Atlantic and Point Webster.

The following locations will conduct their regular schedule of evening gyms: Atherton Hough, Tuesday, 5 to 7 p.m.; Snug Harbor, Tuesday, 5 to 7 p.m.; Squantum, Tuesday, Thursday, 5 to 9 p.m.; Atlantic, Tuesday, 5 to 9 p.m.; Bernazzani, Wednesday, Thursday, 5 to 7 p.m.; and Merrymount, Thursday, 5 to 7 p.m.

There will be no programs Dec. 24 and Jan. 2. All current recreation programs will resume their normal schedule Jan. 3.

For more information, contact the Quincy Recreation Department at 617-376-1394.

Morrissey Party Boon For Charity

Sen. Michael Morrissey's annual Holiday Party at the Sons of Italy Hall turned out to be a three-pronged boost for the needy in the Christmas season.

It not only raised large sums of money for DOVE, Inc., the haven for battered women's, and the DeVanna Center for battered children.

But it also brought in hundreds of pounds of food for QCAP's Food Pantry and many toys for the Marines' Toys for Tots Program.

Morrissey called the party a huge success, thanks to those who attended and brought along a little something for those who couldn't.

Grand Menorah Lighting At City Hall Plaza Dec. 27

Quincy's Jewish community will observe Chanukah, the Festival of Lights, Tuesday, Dec. 27, at 6:30 p.m. with a Grand Menorah Lighting on the plaza outside City Hall.

Then everyone is invited inside City Hall for a Chanukah party and a showing of what Rabbi Shmuel Bronstein calls "the World's Wackiest Menorah Lightings."

There will also be a Chanukah message from Mayor William Phelan, hot latkes, jelly donuts, music and a DVD to take home as a souvenir of the Menorah lightings.

"Chanukah is a holiday that enriches our lives with the light of tradition," said Bronstein, former rabbi at Beth Israel Synagogue,

"In ancient times our ancestors rededicated the Temple in Jerusalem with the Menorah. Today we rededicate ourselves to making this world a better and brighter place.

"The Chanukah lights provide us with warmth, joy, strength and inspiration. Such is the purpose of a community-wide celebration to be held at City Hall."

The eight-armed Menorah, which resembles a candlestick, represents the eight days of Chanukah with one candle lighted each day.

Some of the "wackiest Menorah lightings," according to Bronstein, include one in outer space, one on a gondola in Venice and one of ice in Anchorage, Alaska.

Rabbi Bronstein left Beth Israel earlier this year and is now rabbi of the Hingham Quincy-Chabad at 1356 Quincy Shore Drive.

Help Prevent Identity Theft

By KATE McSHANE

Identity theft is defined as any and all types of crime in which someone obtains and uses another person's personal information with fraud and deception.

Unfortunately, it is an ever-growing problem in the U.S., but there are steps that you can take to prevent it. In recent years, identity theft has become a federal crime and there are government agencies that actively seek out and prosecute these criminals.

Although there are severe punishments for identity thieves, there are still many hassles for victims to deal with. In some cases, it may take victims months or even years to restore their credit and reputation. Most victims of identity theft are not aware of what has occurred until their credit report has already been seriously damaged.

There are steps that can be taken to avoid being victimized. The following measures should be taken to help ensure that people do not have access to your personal information:

Do not give personal information such as social security number, date of birth, maiden name of mother, over the phone, through the mail, or over the internet unless you are sure of who you are communicating with.

• Dispose of documents containing personal information very carefully. Shredding is the preferred method.

• Mail should be taken inside as soon as you get home and it should be collected by someone else or held at the post office if you are away.

• Do not carry your Social Security card or number with you. Memorize your number in case you need it.

• Every year you should obtain a copy of your credit report and always go over your monthly credit card statements. You can get your credit report from one of the companies listed below. This way, you will be able to keep an eye on your accounts and will notice if something fraudulent appears.

• If you suspect that you are the victim of identity theft, there are measures that have been taken to protect victims. There are a few things that you need to do as soon as you suspect that you have been victimized. You must contact one of these three national consumer-reporting companies to put an initial fraud alert on your credit reports:

Equifax: 1-800-525-6285

Experian: 1-888-Experian

Trans Union: 1-800-680-7289

Once you have contacted one of these companies, they are required to contact the other two as part of a fraud alert. This fraud alert will only remain active for a few months, but it is possible to get it activated for seven years. This may seem like a long time, but it is better to be safe than sorry.

You will need to close the accounts that were tampered with or that were fraudulently opened in your name. Next, you will need to contact your local police department and file a report and then file a complaint with the Federal Trade Commission.

It is extremely important to notify all companies and organizations in writing. Make sure to keep a record of all correspondence. It is a vital resource if any problems are to arise in the future. It is troublesome to know that identity theft is a crime growing at a fast rate in this country. This is why it is extremely important to be aware of it and to know how to minimize your risk of being victimized.

Always remember to keep personal information to yourself. Remember to periodically check your monthly statements and credit report and to check out anything that looks unfamiliar or out of place. It's better to be safe and to spend a few dollars on a credit report than to spend a few months or even years trying to get your credit and reputation back on good standing. By being aware, we can help to stop identity theft.

Dec. 31 Last Day For Nominations

Deadline Nearing For Sun 'Citizen Of Year' Nominations

The deadline is approaching for nominations for The Quincy Sun's 21st annual "Citizen of the Year" award.

Established in 1985, the award recognizes an individual for outstanding community service or a special achievement.

Last year, Francis X. McCauley was honored for a distinguished 32-year public service career built on a foundation of honesty, integrity and history.

McCauley – the only resident to serve the city in all four elected municipal offices: school committee, ward councillor, councillor at-large and mayor – was selected for the honor from among 44 nominees submitted by Quincy Sun readers. A panel of judges representing a cross-section of the community made the final decision.

Again this year, Sun readers may nominate the person they feel is the most deserving of the award.

A nomination ballot to help the selection process appears on Page 15 of this week's issue of The Quincy Sun.

After nominations close Saturday, Dec. 31, a judging panel will be selected to make the final choice from nominations submitted.

If you know someone you would like to see recognized with the 2005 award, fill out the ballot and mail it to:

The Quincy Sun
Attn: Citizen of the Year
1372 Hancock St.
Quincy, MA 02169

Nominations should be postmarked no later than Dec. 31.

Ballots can also be dropped off at The Sun office at the above address by Dec. 31.

Those submitting nominations should identify themselves. They can also attach to the ballot a letter detailing the reason for their nomination.

Nominees can be someone in elective office, a member of an appointed board, a clergy member, a teacher or school administrator, a police or firefighter, someone in the business community, a sports figure or an "unsung" neighbor or friend who has given freely of his or her time to a worthy project or cause.

Those nominated in the past are eligible to be nominated again this year. Since this is not a popularity contest, each nominee has an equal chance of being selected regardless of the number of nominations received.

Anyone nominated just once has the same chance of being the award recipient.

Again, the deadline for nominations is Saturday, Dec. 31.

The name of the winner will be announced in The Quincy Sun in January.

those who are unable to shop just leave money in red envelopes on the trees.

"Sometimes there are four quarters, sometimes there are $100 bills. The quarters are just as important as the $100 bills to the people who gave them, if they're on a budget," said Lawless.

"The need gets greater. When we started 25 years ago I think we had eight families," said Lawless.

The Quincy Crisis Center is delivering turkey dinners and gifts to needy families that are unable to pick them up themselves. The center has just over 160 families on their list, but are prepared to help as many as 240.

"We have volunteers coming and going all day long," said Rev. David Wooster, executive director of the Crisis Center. "There's a lot of cooperation between agencies.

"There seem to be more people in need this year. A lot of it has to do with cost of heating oil

"We have folks explain why they need help. Less than half of them are people we've helped before. More than half only call for help at Christmas.

"You hear 'My husband's been in Iraq,' and 'my rent's gone up.' Fuel, water and taxes have gone up, so the rent's gone up. In most families the head of the household is disabled. We get calls, 'This person just got back from the hospital," said Wooster.

The Crisis Center does an average of 45 deliveries per week. On their designated delivery day (D day), 70 volunteers try to make 150 deliveries.

Members of the Quincy Lodge of Elks donated roughly 200 Christmas dinner baskets to needy seniors and families whose names were offered by the Germantown Neighborhood Center, and the Atlantic Neighborhood Center. Members of the Elks delivered the dinners Sunday with the help of officer Kent Yee.

"We've had more requests for Christmas baskets," said Exalted Ruler John McHugh, "This is the most we've delivered in quite some time."

He attributed the increase to the economy.

"We do this every year. This is one of the biggest things our members like to do," he said.

Approximately 890 members make up the club whose other charity work includes two senior dinners, and an annual veteran's dinner.

The Salvation Army, 6 Baxter St., has assisted over 375 families so far this year, compared to 336 total last year. They have given 375 food vouchers for families to buy food, as well as donating food baskets and toys.

"We'll see more families I'm sure," said Major Doug Jones. "I think the economy is going through trouble. The number of people in need has increased, support has been increasing along with it."

The Salvation Army purchased toys or acquired them through toy drives. They took applications from needy families in November, and on distribution day, Dec. 15, parents came in to select toys for their children.

Families, community leaders and the cub scouts have taken turns ringing the kettle bell.

"The community is aware of us. They're being generous and supportive of the work of the Salvation Army in their community. We appreciate all of the volunteers we have," said Jones.

Employees of Eastern Bank's southern Massachusetts offices raised $10,000 which will be divided between the Quincy and Plymouth branches of the Salvation Army.

The Quincy Community Action Program will be helping over 700 children from over 400 families through their Giving Tree Program, their Housing Program, and the Emergency Food center and gift cards sponsored by the State Street Grant.

"This can be a very stressful time of year for low income families when they may not have something for their child," said Tracy Donahue, QCAP's Director of Planning and Development.

"We're grateful to all of the businesses and individuals in the community who donate. We couldn't do it without them and their support," she said. "We're grateful for all of our staff and volunteers. They make the gift-giving possible. It's really quite an effort."

A foundation from the State Street Corporation, an investment company, gave a $10,000 grant to Community Action which was divided between staff reimbursement and gift cards for needy families.

"That was unexpected and really welcome," said Donahue.

The program will be providing food orders for 350 families through the efforts of the South West Community Center.

Through the Housing Program, the QCAP will be helping 14 families with 29 kids, who are either living in a shelter, or at "high risk" of becoming homeless.

Bank of America, Patriot Ledger employees, Bright Horizons at Crown Colony, and Perot Systems have brought gifts to QCAP for children enlisted in the Housing Program.

WJDA radio worked with Quincy Community Action in helping hundreds of South Shore children and their families with their 10th annual WJDA Giving Trees which featured over 1000 gift-request ornaments.

"We've been pretty successful," said Program Coordinator Debbie Logan. "There have been occasions where there were ornaments left over on the trees. This year they were all gone within the first week."

The ornaments sponsored infants through preschool aged children from Quincy, Weymouth, Braintree and Hull.

"Between the businesses and people, it's been a great community-based effort," said Logan. "It keeps people helping families in their own backyards. Especially with everything happening in the world."

The ornaments include games and toys as well as necessary clothing. There are three ornaments per child.

Families with siblings, who are not covered by the three ornaments, receive gifts through the donations of Evergreen Investments and Thayer Academy.

The volunteer-based Koch Club will be assisting an estimated 50 families with 100 children with food, toy and gift donations.

"We've got consistent donors that like what we do," said Thomas Koch, executive director. "They see all their money being donated. One hundred percent of the money goes directly to the recipients."

South Shore Savings Bank did their part with a drop-box to collect gift and good donations for the homeless.

Locations for the Giving Trees included:

South Shore Buick, Olindy's Bowling Lanes, 1000 Southern Artery residents, We Care Cleaners, Harbor Express Water Shuttle, Marina Place, Braintree Cooperative Bank, Curves for Women, Weber Dodge, Bank of Canton, Curry Hardware, River Bay Club, Milton Senior Center, Hancock TV & Appliance, The Outback Steakhouse, Villa Rosa Restaurant and WJDA's Studios.

Council Honors Bob Noble On 80th Birthday

World War II veteran and Quincy Sun photographer Robert Noble found himself the unexpected subject of photographs and honors Monday night from the City Council for his 80th birthday.

His daughter, Ward 6 City Councillor Alicia Gardner, presented to him a citation on behalf of the council.

She quoted Abraham Lincoln:

"It's not the years of your life that counts. It's the life of your years."

"I'm completely surprised," said Noble.

"I'm a resident of Quincy of 52 years. We've never wanted to go any further than the city of Quincy," he said indicating his wife, Gloria.

BOB NOBLE, Quincy Sun photographer and veteran, receives City Council citation from his daughter, Ward 6 Councillor Alicia Gardner, in recognition of his 80th birthday. It was Gardner's last meeting as a councillor.

"We're very fortunate to have reach the age we've reached and still be healthy enough to take an active part in what goes on in Quincy."

Faxon Park Vote Delayed

The City Council delayed a vote on the P.U.D. permit granting authority to Avalon at Faxon Park West until January, so the plan could be reviewed by the new city council.

The delay was suggested by Robert Fleming, attorney for Avalon Bay Inc.

The proposed plan is on a 14 1/2 acre site adjacent to Avalon Bay, Faxon Park. It will have 146 apartment homes totaling 646,694 square feet with 10 percent of the housing to accommodate low-income families.

Fleming said he hoped that the new council would come to vote "without prejudice."

Cohen Named To 7th Term On Norfolk Aggies Board

Harold Cohen of Sharon has been sworn in to his seventh term on the seven member board of trustees of the Norfolk County Agricultural High School in Walpole.

Other members include the three county commissioners, John Gillis of Quincy, Peter Collins of Milton and Francis O'Brien of Dedham.

Four members of the board are appointed by the governor. In addition to Cohen, they are David Lehto of Walpole, Daniel Harrington of Norwood and Donald White of Holbrook.

Energy Bucks Progam Offers Savings On Energy Bills

Fuel Assistance, Utility Discount Rates And Energy Efficiency Services

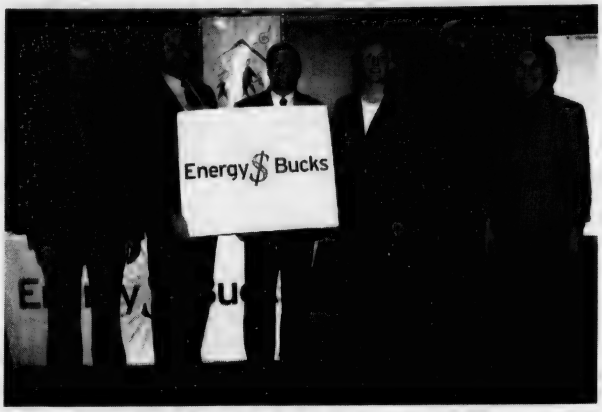
In a proactive effort to show consumers ways to save money and offer assistance before winter hits, state utilities and Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc. (QCAP) recently kicked off the Energy Bucks season themed "Get an Early Start. Do Your Part. Save Energy."

Energy Bucks is an easy way to access three different programs: fuel assistance, utility discount rates and energy efficiency services.

Energy Bucks is an integrated campaign combining grassroots outreach, community-based activities and advertising to build awareness of the variety of energy efficiency and discount services available to income-eligible families.

Energy Bucks can help families save up to 30 percent on energy bills by calling QCAP at 617-479-8181, ext. 101, or visiting www.energybucks.com to see how to apply. Help is available, but less than 30 percent of eligible households currently utilize the money-saving options available to them.

More than 800,000 Massachusetts households are eligible for some level of energy assistance. The Energy Bucks campaign encourages people to visit their local Community Action Program and increase their energy savings. They can make their homes more energy efficient, enroll in money-saving programs and stay warm this winter.



The gas and electric utilities offer discount rates and energy efficiency services to income eligible customers. The Commonwealth of Massachusetts offers fuel assistance with federal and state funding accessed through local Community Action Programs who also assist with the delivery of the energy efficiency services.

Energy Bucks creates one point of contact to ensure that eligible customers receive all appropriate services.

"Energy Bucks will be a great resource for Massachusetts residents this winter," said Penni McLean-Conner, NSTAR vice president of customer care. "We're very eager to get the word out about the program so that families can begin saving money as soon as possible. We encourage people to visit their local Community Action Program or the Energy Bucks web site, and tell their families, friends and neighbors about the help that's available."

Energy Bucks is sponsored by National Grid, NSTAR Electric & Gas, Unitil, Western Massachusetts Electric Company, Bay State Gas, KeySpan Energy Delivery and the Cape Light Compact, an energy efficiency organization, the Low-Income Energy Affordability Network and Massachusetts Community Action Program Director's Association.

"By accessing this program, eligible National Grid customers can learn how to be more energy efficient and save money this winter," said Stephen Hall, vice president of business services National Grid. "Energy Bucks is another example of our commitment to our customers and community."

REPRESENTATIVES FROM the Quincy Community Action Council, legislators and utility officials recently gathered to kick off Energy Bucks. The program is an integrated campaign that reaches out to 800,000 citizens across the state who are eligible for fuel assistance, discount rates, and energy efficiency services. Energy Bucks can help families save up to 30 percent on energy bills this winter. Visit www.energybucks.com for more information. From left are: State Representative Joe Driscoll; David MacLellan, NSTAR; Stephen Hall, National Grid; Trish Appert, QCAP Director of Operations; Phil Chwalek, QCAP Energy Auditor; and Beth Ann Strollo, QCAP Executive Director.

QCAP Fuel Assistance operates the federally funded Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program in Quincy, Milton, Braintree and Weymouth, providing assistance with heating bills for low-income households. Last winter, nearly 3,000 families were served with fuel assistance through QCAP.

"With rising energy costs, this winter is going to be terribly difficult for low-income, elderly and working families trying to heat their homes," said Beth Ann Strollo, QCAP executive director. "The Energy Bucks campaign is so important — it really helps get the message out to many families and individuals who may be eligible for these funds. Our hope is that this will encourage more people to apply so that no one is left out in the cold this winter. QCAP is grateful to both Energy Bucks and the South Shore utilities for spreading the message and providing families with energy efficiency services and utility discounts."

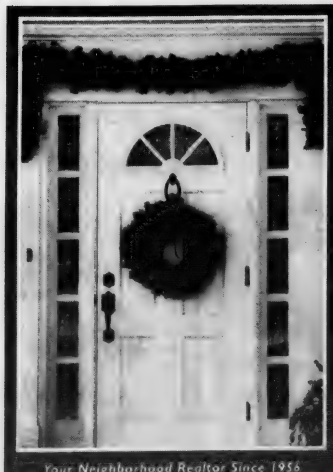
Energy Bucks targets a mix of 16 large metropolitan areas and towns: Quincy, Boston, Brockton, Cambridge, Fall River, Fitchburg, Greenfield, Haverhill, Lowell, Lynn, New Bedford, Pittsfield, Plymouth, Somerville, Springfield and Worcester.

Eligibility for these programs is determined each year and varies by program and household size. A family of four with a weekly income below $900 qualifies for some Energy Bucks programs.

"There are a number of services out there to help people who need it this winter like Energy Bucks," said Bruce Johnson, director of energy programs at KeySpan Energy Delivery.

"By visiting www.energybucks.com or www.keyspanenergy.com, residents can find ways to save money and learn how to make their homes more energy efficient."

A typical household could save up to 30 percent annually by participating in fuel assistance, discount energy rates and energy efficiency services. The federal and state government through the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and the Department of Housing and Community Development funds some of the programs promoted by Energy Bucks.



All are administered locally by community action agencies in cooperation with electric and natural gas utilities and energy efficiency organizations.

Moss and Mildew Threaten Roof

Q. I have a question about maintaining hand-split cedar-shake roofs. The problem is mildew and moss, even in open areas, although it's worse where the roof is in partial shade. It makes the roof look green, and I am concerned that it prevents the wood from drying out and is causing it to deteriorate. I would appreciate any suggestions. — John C., via e-mail

A. Mildew and moss on a cedar-shake roof can look quaint and picturesque, but its presence indicates an encroaching problem that can lead to a very expensive repair or complete roof replacement.

Most cedar roofs don't develop a moss and mildew problem for several years after installation. As the wood ages, the effects of rain, sun, cold and heat cause microfissures to develop, and as these tiny cracks widen, mold and mildew can gain a foothold. This usually happens first in shaded areas or where branches or debris keep the sun from drying the wood after storms. Left untreated, the encroaching fungi warp the shakes faster than aging alone, leading to curling and cupping, and eventually, leaks.

To treat the moss and mildew problem, you'll need to wash the entire roof with a cleaning solution and use moss-killing chemicals on the worst areas. A broom can sweep away much of the moss, but for stubborn growth, a pressure washer is probably necessary. Pressure washers can dislodge the shakes, however, so you may want to contact a roof cleaner specializing in cedar to handle this. Use caution with any cleaning solutions or moss-killers — put the kids and pets indoors, cover plants and outdoor furniture, and wear protective gear.

Once you've gotten rid of the moss and mildew, have the roof treated with a wood preservative. This will extend the life of the shakes and retard fungal growth. Then, thin out the tree branches over your roof and make sure none are actually touching the shakes. (Since moss is growing even in exposed areas, look at tree growth on your entire lot and decide if additional pruning is necessary to let sunlight and air through.)

Depending on the weather in your area, you will need to climb onto the roof at least once a year to sweep off debris and run a garden hose over the shakes. Regular maintenance like this can keep your cedar roof in good shape for 30-40 years, or longer.

Answers From The Home Doctor

Home Protection From Weather Damage

(NAPS) The Home Doctor offers answers to timely building questions.

Q: In light of the volatility of recent weather patterns, how can I help protect my biggest investment, my home, from nature's unpredictability?

A: Your question reflects a lot of home and property owner's concerns. The busiest hurricane season since 1933 surfaced several serious issues, including global weather patterns, quality construction and community preparedness, to name a few.

While there are no quick fixes to any of these issues, one thing is for certain: weather happens. And for homeowners, this can sometimes be devastating. Fortunately some long-term investments can be made to help maintain a home's strength and increase its value.

I suggest you look first into exterior upgrades. Asphalt roofing is now being manufactured to meet impact-resistance testing. Shingles such as Certain Teed's Landmark TL Ultimate (Impact Resistant) have been tested by Underwriters Laboratories to endure high levels of impact.

In fact, homeowners who have impact-resistant shingles installed may be eligible for insurance premium reductions depending on the location of their property and their insurer.

Another safeguard to consider is exterior cladding designed with the weather in mind. For instance, Millennium vinyl siding, also by CertainTeed, comes with a unique "Won't Blow Off" warranty and has proven to resist being torn from the home during severe weather conditions. You may also look for insulated vinyl siding, which can increase a home's R-value to help keep it warm in the winter and cool in the summer.

Installing ENERGY STAR rated replacement vinyl windows is another smart investment. And, if you live on the coast, you now have the option to select windows with impact-resistant glass.

Visit www.certainteed.com or call 800-782-8777 to learn more about building materials that will help your home maintain its integrity and value for years to come.

Tackling The Number One Home Improvement Project

Professional Painters Secrets

(NAPS) If you are planning a home painting project, you have a lot of company. Experts say painting is now the number-one home improvement project tackled by Americans. So how do you ensure professional results?

A painter is only as good as the tools he or she uses to complete a project," said professional painting contractor, Nick Stolarski.

To make things roll along more smoothly, you may want to brush up on equipment and supplies that can make the job easier and provide a more professional result.

- Seal any cracks and gaps around the windows and baseboards with a water-based, paintable caulk, such as Polyseamseal All-Purpose Adhesive Caulk, Water-based sealants are low odor and clean up easily with soap and water, while the fast-drying formula helps minimize preparation time.
- Sand over walls and baseboards to create a smooth surface to ensure paint will adhere effectively and evenly. A durable aluminum oxide, A-weight paper with 100- to 150-grit is suitable for most general-purpose sanding jobs.
- Use painter's-grade masking tape to protect any areas not to be painted. Using a dispenser such as the Duck brand Turbo Masker masking-tape dispenser allows for quick, easy and accurate application of painting tapes so you can spend less time taping and increase the efficiency of painting projects.

When covering delicate surfaces such as wallpaper, treated woodwork and drywall, be sure to use a low-tack adhesive masking tape, such as Duck brand Perfect release Plus Painter's Tape, to ensure that delicate surfaces will not be damaged when removing the tape.

- Protecting floors is necessary on any job. While cloth drops are more expensive, they work best, especially over carpets. There are also plastic drop cloths that feature a pre-taped top edge of professional-grade masking tape to make installation easier and help keep them in place.
- A quality brush makes it easier to apply paint evenly. A one- to two-inch, high-quality, nylon/polyester, angled brush can be used with all coatings, will hold paint better and provide better brush control.
- For most indoor applications, latex interior paints can be useful since they are designed for durability and stain resistance, splatter resistance and easy touch-up.

With the proper products, homeowners can get a head start on achieving a great-looking paint job without professional costs.

Presidents Edge Silver Lake In Opener

BOYS' BASKETBALL

By CHRIS POISSON

A high school state tournament aroma breezed through the CTE Gym last Friday three months early.

In the season opener, the Quincy and Silver Lake boys' basketball teams exchanged blows all night before the Presidents landed the knockout punch in double overtime for a 75-73 victory.

"It was a tournament game in December," said head coach Bob Fisher. "It was extremely well played. It went back and forth and there were about 15-20 lead changes. We were never separated by more than three or four points. It was a classic high school ball game early in the year. What a way to start the season. Very emotional. Very intense. We had a nice crowd on opening night."

Quincy hosted Snowden Monday and traveled to Plymouth South yesterday (Wednesday, 6:30 p.m.). Next week, it battles Walpole Wednesday at home and Friday on the road.

Junior forward Steve Connolly delivered the early present to his teammates when he scored the winning basket on a driving layup with five seconds remaining. He finished with 13 points and nine rebounds.

"He played outstanding defense, holding their second leading scorer Josh Doherty to eight points," Fisher said.

The Presidents wouldn't have been in position to win if it weren't for the dazzling performance by Doug Scott. In his first varsity game, the freshman point guard poured in 37 points, including 13 in overtime.

"He was special," Fisher said. "In all of my years I've never heard of a freshman doing that in his first game. He was outstanding with the ball. He played excellent defense and made key shots."

Quincy dominated the boards against the bigger Lakers, grabbing 17 offensive rebounds. Senior center and tri-captain Joe Griffin pulled down a game-high 13 rebounds. "Griffin and Connolly were immense on the boards," Fisher said.

Senior guard and tri-captain John Orlando played a great defensive game while fellow senior tri-captain Lavell Johnson struggled offensively with eight points. "They were all over him, which opened it up for Scott. He had a good game despite his shortcoming with his shooting."

Sophomore forwards Dashawn Matthews (five points, four assists, four rebounds) and Giovanni Cesare (four points) provided a spark of the bench.

The Presidents came up with a defensive stop at the end of regulation to force an extra frame, where they held a one-point lead with one second left. But John Mendez hit the second of two free throws to send the game into another session.

Raiders Rebound At B-R

If defense wins championships, the North Quincy High School boys' basketball team should be in good shape if it can continue to play like it did last Friday night.

After opening the season last Tuesday with a 58-54 loss at Marshfield, the Red Raiders traveled to Bridgewater-Raynham to face the Trojans, who scored 80 points in their first game.

Like the Patriots shutting down the Colts in recent years, North Quincy hounded B-R en route to a 34-25 victory.

"Beating B-R at B-R is a good sign," said head coach Jim Rendle. "It's nice to get back on track. It was a big win for us."

North Quincy (1-1) played Barnstable Tuesday in the home opener. Next week, it participates in the Chelsea Holiday Tournament against Somerville Wednesday at 3:45 p.m.

The Red Raiders kept the Trojans off the scoreboard for the first eight minutes of the game and held a 12-6 lead at halftime.

"B-R was coming of an 80-point game and we came out and played real good, hard-nosed, tough defense," Rendle said. "It was a very hard-fought, defensive struggle. I was pleased with that because we didn't play with defensive intensity in our first game."

Senior guards Imad Elkatrib and Kyle Costa led the team on the glass, grabbing nine and eight rebounds, respectively.

"B-R is big and strong underneath and we kept their big men off the boards," Rendle said. "Our bigs didn't get a lot of rebounds but they negated B-R and let our guards get some of them."

Senior center John Murray scored a game-high 15 points and Costa added six points and dished out six assists. Senior forward Akil Benjamin chipped in seven points and stood out defensively.

Against Marshfield, North Quincy hurt itself at the free-throw line, hitting 11-of-20 while the Rams went 20-of-23.

The Red Raiders had two possessions in the final minute to take a lead, but committed costly turnovers. Costa (21 points) and Murray (19) combined for 40 of the team's 54 points.

"It was a lackluster defensive performance," Rendle said. "Our imbalance offensively and our lack of defensive intensity cost us. Marshfield is a good club, a great shooting team. We made them look a little better than they were."

HOLD YOUR HORSES!

Can you be sure that the vehicle you are going to purchase has the amount of horsepower claimed by the manufacturer? To make sure that you are getting what you pay for, the Society of Automotive Engineers (SAE) has updated its engine testing standards. This will eliminate possible disparities between a vehicle's advertised horsepower claim and the power that it actually delivers. Definitions pertaining to acceptable intake-air density and exhaust back pressure are now more precise. In addition, accessory losses, such as those caused by the power-steering pump, are now included. In order to comply with the SAE-Certified label in their advertising, car manufacturers must abide by the new standards and their procedures must be monitored by qualified third-party witnesses.

Stricter engine testing standards can only mean more precise information for new car buyers. At LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO, we wholly believe that the consumer deserves to receive accurate information of any car they buy. We are always truthful and honest and want you to feel secure about any transaction with us. Come by 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree or call 781-843-1550 today for any automotive needs you may have. North Quincy Bows To Marshfield, Brockton

GIRLS' BASKETBALL

The North Quincy High School girls' basketball team stumbled out of the blocks last week, leading to a pair of home losses to begin the season.

The Red Raiders fell to Marshfield, 55-41, in last Tuesday's opener and followed that up last Friday with a 65-49 setback to Brockton.

"Like I told the girls, we're a work in progress," said head coach Doug MacFarlane. "We can stay with teams. We can't get down early and expect to win every time. It's going to be an interesting year."

North Quincy (0-2) has 11 days off before it faces Winthrop next Tuesday at 1:15 p.m. in the Chelsea Holiday Tournament.

Against Marshfield, the Red Raiders committed 27 turnovers and shot a frigid 26 percent while making only 9-of-26 layups.

They were down 20 points in the first half before a late run made it 35-21 at the break. In the second half, they changed their defensive scheme and began with a 10-0 run to close within four points.

"We were down 11-2, 17-3 at one point," MacFarlane said. "Then we finally woke up. First-game jitters. Whatever you want to call it. We changed up our defense at halftime. I was pleased we were able to come back in the second half. You can't spot a team a 20-point lead and expect to come back and win."

Sophomore forward Rebecca Goreham filled out the stat line with 16 points, eight rebounds, six assists and six steals.

Senior tri-captain Elyse O'Connell (five assists, five steals), junior guard Lauren Stille and sophomore guard Kasey O'Connell each scored five points.

In the Brockton game, the Red Raiders improved by shooting 41 percent and turning the ball over eight fewer times. Still, they dug themselves too deep of a hole from the start.

"Unfortunately, we started off slow again and I hope that doesn't continue for the rest of the year," MacFarlane said. "They were up 15-16 points the whole game. They're a very good team. Tall, athletic. We couldn't match up with them under the basket. It was a tough game."

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

by Andrea Wyatt
M.S.S., C.S.C.S.

Weight-Loss Reality

Q. I like watching the TV shows where people go on an exercise-and-diet program and lose a lot of weight. Although the shows often seem to be unrealistic, the pictures tell the story and these people are losing weight, as they are thinner and look better. I have always wondered how they are able to lose so much weight, because when I follow the same program I don't see the same results.

A. Television, books and magazines are filled with stories of the journeys people have taken to lose weight. Reality shows have strategically designed their programming to depict the struggles and successes of the participants working hard to lose weight and become healthier. The key to remember here is that although these people are real and are usually truly working hard to change their lifestyle, it's still television!

Many TV programs are showing you the highlights and lowlights of how different people respond to exercise and nutrition programs for a given amount of time. Their environment is usually controlled and removes them from their normal daily schedule and lifestyle. This factor alone can be the difference for most people striving to improve their health and appearance.

Although you may be completing the same exercise program and eating similar foods to the television participants, you also have to deal with the everyday stresses and distractions that can pull you away from making healthy choices. The commitment to live a healthy lifestyle through exercising, making positive eating choices and living a balanced and low-stress life is an ongoing process. It will definitely take more than one hour a week, which is how often these shows usually air. Remember, you are only seeing small snippets of each participant's day, not all of the other preparations that are in place to help them succeed.

While you shouldn't try to re-create what you have seen on television, you can set up a support system just as you see on the TV shows to help you along the way. Meeting with a personal trainer, consulting a nutritionist and arranging workouts with family and friends are great ways to stay accountable to living a healthy lifestyle. Personal trainers, nutritional help and group workouts can be for anyone, not just people on TV.

Set your goals to withstand the long-term test, not just short-term success. Although you can look at the television shows for motivation to get started and keep going, the best way to see great results is by making yourself a priority. Look at your current lifestyle and make it the best it can be.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program. If you have a fitness or training question, e-mail Andrea at letters.kfws @hearstsc.com or write her c/o King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

An Important First Step Toward Good Dental Habits

Children's First Dental Trip

(NAPS) Teething typically begins between the fourth and seventh month, when your child has a few teeth, brush them with a soft toothbrush or rub them with gauze at the end of each day. As soon as two teeth are touching, begin to floss gently. And about six months after the first tooth emerges, it's time for your baby's first trip to the dentist.

"Choose a dentist who is comfortable with children," says Sharon Bergen, senior vice president of education and training for Knowledge Learning Corporation, the nation's leading provider of early childhood care and education. "A pediatric dentist may be a wise choice." The office of a pediatric dentist is designed to make children feel secure and safe. The decor is usually colorful, and the staff is focused on caring for children and putting them at ease.

"Try to make the child's visit to the dentist fun," says Bergen. "You might tell your child something as simple as 'You are going to visit a doctor who will count your teeth.'"

The first visit to a dentist will likely be brief, giving your child an opportunity to become familiar with the office. The dentist will want you to accompany your child to the examination room, where you may be asked to hold her. Dierdre Froehlich, a Portland Oregon dentist, says: "I like to sit knee-to-knee with the parent, with the child on her back on the parent's lap, with her head towards me. This lets her look at Mom or Dad." As your child becomes comfortable, the dentist will examine teeth, gums and bite and gently clean her teeth.

The dentist will discuss with you such topics as good oral hygiene practices for your child, fluorine needs, habits such as thumbsucking, developmental milestones, proper nutrition, and when to schedule your child's next exam.

"Your child's first visit to the dentist is an important first step toward a lifetime of good dental habits." says Bergen.

Preparing For A Doctor Visit

(NAPS) You get ready for a date. You prepare for meetings and presentations at work. But most people don't think to prepare for visits to the doctor. If you're one of them, you're missing out on an important way to help make sure you get the best possible health care.

"I don't think any of us prepare for our medical visits, and I think that's a big mistake," Dr. Margarita Alegria, director of the Harvard-affiliated Center for Multicultural Mental Health Research at Cambridge Health Alliance, said at a recent talk at the National Institutes of Health. Alegria investigates disparities in mental health care services among people from different populations.

Research like Dr. Alegria's may lead to solutions to health disparities, but in the meantime, researchers do know that no matter what ethnic background you have, one key to getting good health care is good communication between you and your health professionals. You can do something about that right now.

The first step in good communication is finding a doctor you feel comfortable talking with. Talking about your health means sharing information about how you feel, both physically and emotionally. Having a good relationship with your main, or primary, doctor is one of the best ways to ensure your good health. This doctor knows you and your particular health history. He or she can help you make medical decisions that suit your values and con guide you toward other medical specialists and health care providers you may need.

A basic plan for your visit can also help:

• Before going to the doctor, make a list of the things you want to discuss.

• Think about how you're going to describe your symptoms.

• Put your questions in order so you're sure to ask about the most important ones first.

• During your visit, make sure you understand what the medical test you are getting are for.

• When a doctor makes a diagnosis, make sure you understand your condition and fully discuss your treatment options.

If you're not comfortable or unable to do these things yourself, consider bringing a family member or friend and let them know in advance what you want from your visit. Make sure you play your part to get the best health care possible.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

AGE-RELATED TOOTH DARKENING

One unwelcome fact of life is that teeth darken with age. As we grow older, the outer layer of enamel begins to wear away, revealing the naturally yellow dentin that lies beneath it. Although we cannot prevent this sign of aging from occurring, we can take steps to minimize it. The first such step involves visiting the dentist at least twice a year for professional cleanings to remove stains caused by smoking, coffee, red wine, berries, and other highly pigmented foods. Beyond that, professional tooth whitening can help increase the wattage of your smile. This process works best on teeth that have become yellowed. Tooth whitening may not work as well to improve teeth with a grayish or brownish tinge.

Could tooth whitening improve the look and feel of your mouth? These procedures have become more popular over the years and there are many options available from your dentist. Our experienced dental and support staff takes pride in providing the most comprehensive care possible for all members of your family in a relaxed, comfortable setting. Remember, when you look good, you feel good. We have the technology that can give you a confident and beautiful smile. When you come to visit us at 44 Greenleaf Street, you can expect the highest level of cosmetic and restorative dentistry available. Call us at 617-479-6220 for an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Tooth whitening will not lighten the color of bonded teeth or tooth-colored fillings.

A Thought For The Week

The magic of the Christmas Season has laid its hold upon the land. The tinsel, the lights and decorations, the holly wreaths are all in place and millions of children know that Santa Claus is coming soon in some mysterious way to visit their homes in the shimmering silence of the dark.

This is a time for children, and it is a time, too, for all men and women in all lands to remember the wonder of the Christ child's birth on the first Christmas... It is the power of this happening that puts magic in this season and lends the light of hope and understanding to all the world's people.

Let this Christmas be for children – may it bring them the warmth of a fire, the smell of a tree, the excitement of waiting for Santa's visit. Let it bring visions of sugar plums on Christmas Eve, and above all as the hour approaches, let it bring the warmth of knowing that the Babe born in Bethlehem so very long ago is very close to us all this night.

We at the Deware Family Funeral Home wish everyone a wonderful, magical Christmas.

At Sacred Heart Church

Archbishop O'Malley Guest Homilist At Ecumenical Feast Of Lights Service

Archbishop Sean Patrick O'Malley will be the special guest homilist at the 30th annual Ecumenical Epiphany Feast of Lights Service Sunday, Jan. 8, at 7:30 p.m. at Sacred Heart Church, 386 Hancock St., North Quincy.

The worship is sponsored by the Inter-Church Council of Wollaston and North Quincy.

Other honored guests include the Rev. Dr. Diane Kessler, executive director of the Massachusetts Council of Churches, and the Rev. William Underhill, former rector of St. Chrysostom's Episcopal Church in Wollaston and founder of the event.

Light is the prominent feature of the service, representing the light of Christ entering the world and gradually spreading through time and space. The single flame of the Paschal Candle is carried into the darkened sanctuary, beginning a gradual lighting of the church which climaxes when each worshipper's candle is lighted, representative of their mission to carry the light of Christ into the world.

Also featured are costumed members of local churches playing the roles of the magi and the apostles of Jesus who bring the light of Christ to the world.

The Inter-Church Council has 12 member congregations representing Baptist, Catholic, Congregational, Episcopal, Evangelical, Lutheran, Methodist, Nazarene and United Church of Christ faith traditions.

A social hour will follow the service in the Sacred Heart School cafeteria.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Although taking advice isn't always easy for the headstrong Sheep, you might want to consider what someone you respect says about an upcoming decision.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A new offer is tempting, but don't be bullied into a quick decision. Rely on your keen Bovine business sense to alert you to anything that might be questionable.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Your Gemini Twin nature rallies to help you deal with this week's hectic schedules, both in your personal and professional lives. One caution: Watch your diet.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Avoid rushing to make up for time lost on a stalled workplace operation. Best to set up a schedule and pace yourself. Welcome the help of colleagues.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Despite those glittering holiday distractions you love so well, be sure to keep your feline senses set on high to alert you to anything that might require fast action.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Making an effort to restore fraying relationships proves to be more successful than you dared hope. The holidays also bring new friends into your life.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Private and professional matters compete for your attention. Be honest in your assessment of which should get more of it, and for how long.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A seemingly endless list of must-do tasks is best handled by tackling them one by one, and taking energy-restoring timeouts between each job.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A vexing relationship seems destined to deteriorate no matter what each side tries to do. A third party's advice just might prove helpful.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Reach out to ease any tensions caused by home or workplace pressures before they threaten the relationship-building progress you've made.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You often go out of your way to show kindness to others. So, don't be surprised if other people want to do something nice for you this week.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) People in your life respect your Piscean wisdom, so don't hesitate to speak up about a matter that you feel isn't being handled quite the way it should be.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your personal warmth helps you make friendships, and your sense of fair play helps you keep them.

A Job Well Done

By LT. DAN MINTON
Quincy Police Crime Prevention Officer

On Dec. 4, at approximately 7:20 p.m., while stopped at a red light in Quincy Square, Officer Dennis Keenan randomly checked the license plate on a gray Honda in front of him. The plate came back as "Revoked for Insurance." Once the light turned green, Officer Keenan activated his blue lights to pull the car over. The Honda kept going by the Thomas Crane Public Library and turned right onto Spear Street.

LT. DAN MINTON

Officer Keenan put his siren on and informed Police communications that the vehicle was not stopping. The Honda turned right onto McGrath Highway, then took another right onto Washington Street. Officer Bruce Tait pulled up behind Officer Keenan's cruiser as the Honda ran a red light at Washington and Coddington Streets and increased speed.

As the Honda traveled north on Hancock Street approaching Veterans' Stadium, Sgt. Greg Goyette, for safety purposes, directed the officers to discontinue the pursuit because there was a large wake at Keohane's Funeral Home approximately a quarter-mile award. As the Honda approached the funeral home, it was forced to stop due to the congestion.

Officer Keenan then pulled up and observed the Honda cross the double solid line and go north in the southbound lane of Hancock Street. Officer Don Allison, who was assisting with wake traffic, attempted to stop the Honda. The Honda then headed straight for Officer Allison, who was struck and knocked down. Officer Keenan informed communications that an officer was down and that the Honda was now headed down Fenno Street.

Trooper Tom Duane, who was also assisting with traffic, jumped into his cruiser and attempted to stop the Honda. The Honda, again being followed by Officers Keenan and Tait, then traveled onto Havilend Street and then south on Quincy Shore Drive at speeds estimated at 60 mph. The Honda then turned right onto Sea Street, then north on Southern Artery. As the Honda turned right on Furnace Brook Parkway, it nearly struck one of the two Quincy cruisers, then headed back to Quincy Shore Drive.

As the pursuit continued north on Quincy Shore Drive, "Stop Sticks" were deployed at the intersection of East Squantum Street. The Honda took a right turn on East Squantum Street to avoid the sticks and headed out to Squantum. The Honda traveled through parts of Squantum and then out to the security gates leading to Long Island. The Honda then made a left turn and pulled in behind the Nickerson Post, which was a dead end.

Officer Keenan and Trooper Duane approached the car and removed the suspect, then put him in a prone position, and with the assistance of Officer Tait and Trooper/Sgt. Montagano, handcuffed him.

The suspect, a 40-year-old male from Jamaica Plain, said he didn't stop because he didn't have a license. An inventory search (conducted after a car is towed by the police as part of the department policy) of his car revealed a small amount of marijuana and several prescription bottles, none matching the name given initially by the suspect. Communications Operator Carol Flynn researched the prescription information and found that the prescription owner's license was suspended and that the computers' license photo was the suspect. A further check also showed that the suspect had been arraigned 141 times on his adult record and had several aliases. After checking the VIN of the Honda, it was determined that the car was stolen in Cambridge in June of 2005.

The suspect was charged with "Failure to Stop for a Police Officer," "Operating a Motor Vehicle with a Suspended License," "Assault and Battery with a Dangerous Weapon," "Attempted Murder," "Possession of Class D Drug," "Receiving a Stolen Motor Vehicle," "Reckless Operation of a Motor Vehicle," "Forged RMV Document," "False Name to a Police Officer" and numerous traffic violations.

Officer Allison was transported to the Quincy Medical Center for treatment and released. In this case, public safety was paramount. The attempt to stop the Honda ceased due to pedestrian and traffic safety concerns by the funeral home, but once the suspect drove at the police officer, the need to stop him changed dramatically. "Nice work" goes out to the Quincy Police Officers and State Troopers involved in apprehending this career criminal.

If I Could Have One Wish Come True . . .

(Cont'd From Page 38)

It would be that everyone would have a good home and have food and no one would be hungry again.
Jesse Segal
Atherton Hough

It would be to let everyone have food, a home and to have a family that cared because that's what holidays are about.
Leah Ryan
Atherton Hough

It would be raining food all around the world. No one would ever be hungry ever again. No one would have to buy food either.
Trung Le
Atherton Hough

It would be for everyone on earth to have a home. People without a home have no money. So I hope they get a home this season.
Katheryn Herron
Atherton Hough

It would be to have my mother back on Christmas Day. We could have Christmas dinner together with my family like we always did. I miss her and she taught me a lesson: you never miss someone till they are gone. I love her. She is the best mother in the world.
Sydney Brawley
Atherton Hough

It would be a bike and a cell phone only for emergencies.
Jaimerae Shaheen
Atherton Hough

It would be that everyone is happy. People who are far from home to come home for this holiday season so they can be with their family and friends.
Peter Nguyen
Atherton Hough

It would be to get an I-Pod because I like to listen to music. I would put 2,000 songs on it and then I would use it all the time.
Steve Leuchte
Atherton Hough

It would be that everyone in the world is happy. By happy I mean everyone has a nice warm house to go to and no one has to worry about a death in the family, and that everyone would have a little money to buy food.
Devin McMahon
Atherton Hough

It would be to fly because I could fly to school and all around the world. I would not make anyone late for work or anything because I could fly anywhere I want to go.
Theresa Lepore
Atherton Hough

It would be to become immortal. I could make world peace. I would bring the world together in friendship.
Javier Ramos
Snug Harbor

It would be to have my cousins come over on every holiday because I only get to see them on my birthday and Thanksgiving. I miss them. When they come over, we play outside.
Marian Freedman
Snug Harbor

It would be for everyone in my family to have a good dinner. Everyone will hug each other, tell jokes and be happy.
Yan Yee Chan

Jackson Lam
Snug Harbor

It would be to own Best Buy. I will get every electronic item that I want.

Lindsey Nazzaro
Merrymount

It would be to become a famous hockey player.
Rudy Tryon
Merrymount

It would be that everybody had a home to live in for the holidays. Homeless people have a hard life in the winter.

Roisin Henry
Beechwood Knoll

It would be to have a Tamagotchi and Heelys for Christmas because most of my friends have them and I think they're really cool.
Niamh Brennan
Beechwood Knoll

It would be to get a lot of presents on Christmas because a lot of my toys are not fun any more, but I could give them to the homeless.
Joey Christello
Beechwood Knoll

It would be for my lost boy hamster, who is a father now, to come back because he was the reason that made the mother have 12 babies, and for me to have 12 babies and two parents. I think he passed away. Even though he did he will always be near me.
Jamie Chen
Beechwood Knoll

It would be to end world hunger because in poor countries people can't afford food and are dying of thirst and hunger. Children are getting diseases because of the food and dirty water they eat and drink.

Entertainment From 4 - 9 p.m.

Over 10,000 Expected At City's First Night

More than 10,000 revelers from Quincy and the South Shore are expected to usher in 2006 at Quincy's family oriented First Night New Year's Eve Celebration Saturday.

The 4 to 9 p.m. festivities offer an eclectic entertainment lineup, two fireworks displays, KidsFest hosted by Radio Disney, ice sculptures, grand procession parade and much more.

"This event gives families the chance to experience a first class lineup of entertainment and activities and enjoy the remainder of the evening in the comfort of their own homes," said Mayor William Phelan, adding that he and his family look forward to the event each year.

The extended forecast calls for mild temperatures. However, in the event that this should change, the event is weatherproof in that the distance between venues is minimal to make it easier for attendees to enjoy the festivities regardless of weather. Free parking is available beginning at 4 p.m. at the Ross Parking Garage (Granite Street), Hancock Parking lot (Chestnut Street) and President's Place Parking Garage. The MBTA Red Line's Quincy stop allows those attending to leave their cars at home.

Entertainment is spread across 17 venues and the First Night button is the ticket to all performances. Buttons may be purchased through Friday at the City Clerk's Office, Richard J. Koch Park & Recreation Complex, Thomas Crane Public Library, Quincy Credit Union and participating Dunkin' Donuts locations.

The cost of buttons is $7 per individual and a "Family Pack" of five is available for $20. Pre-event purchases are encouraged as the prices increase to $10 per button and $40 for the Family Pack on event day at the kiosk in McIntyre Mall.

Outdoor festivities include a Grand Procession parade beginning at 6:15 p.m. and two fireworks displays; the first at 6:30 p.m. followed by the Grand Finale fireworks capping off the evening at 9:15 p.m.. The fireworks displays are over at Faxon Field at the intersection of Southern Artery and Coddington St.

"An event of this magnitude would not be possible without the support of our major corporate sponsors, Fallon Ambulance and State Street Corporation, and I'm grateful for their commitment as well as the support from many other local businesses who see the value in presenting a convenient, affordable, family-oriented event," Phelan said.

At Jan. 3 Inaugural Ceremonies

Phelan To Focus On Strengthening Neighborhoods

Mayor William Phelan will focus on strengthening Quincy's neighborhoods in his third term inaugural address Tuesday, Jan. 3.

Phelan will announce plans for a number of new initiatives aimed at improving the quality of neighborhoods at the 10 a.m. ceremony in the Quincy High School auditorium. The public is invited.

Phelan, the city council and the three new members of the school committee will be sworn in.

Phelan will be sworn in by his father-in-law, former Mayor Arthur Tobin, clerk magistrate of Quincy District Court.

Ward 5 councillor Doug Gutro and Elaine Dwyer have the votes to be elected city council president and school committee vice chairman, respectively.

Two new councillors, Michael McFarland, at-large, and Brian McNamee, Ward 6, will succeed Frank McCauley and Alicia Gardner. The new school committee members are Ann Mahoney, Kevin Mulvey and James Timmins.

Agenda
On Page 36

Phelan's initiatives for the neighborhoods include plans to strengthen zoning regulations, stricter code enforcement, addressing parking and aesthetic nuisances, continuing the repair of streets and sidewalks, and improvement to neighborhood schools and other programs.

A main theme of Phelan's address will be keeping development in the downtown, Fore River Shipyard and Crown Colony Office Park and out of the neighborhoods. A key component of the initiative will be a neighborhood survey aimed at deriving direct input from citizens.

"Quincy has long been known as a city of neighborhoods," Phelan said. "We are a large city with a small-town feel because of our great neighborhoods and it is important that we preserve the quality of the places where we live.

"At all of our community meetings, the issues that people speak most about are the ones that affect the quality of their neighborhood. Residents should know that we have taken notice of their concerns and we will work to preserve that which we all hold as the top priority."

That evening the Inaugural Ball will be held in the new Grand Ballroom at the Granite Links Golf Club. The event will run from 7 to 11 p.m. and the public is invited to attend.

Clear Snow, Ice For Letter Carriers

The Wollaston Post Office Safety Committee, speaking for all Quincy mail carriers, urged residents to make sure their walks and stairs are cleared of snow and ice this winter.

"Every year," said the committee's warning, "many letter carriers are injured falling on ice forming on customers' walkways and stairs.

"We ask for your cooperation is keeping your property shoveled and treated for ice to help reduce these injuries and maintain consistent mail delivery.

"Any conditions that could affect the safe delivery of mail to your address should be brought to the attention of your local post office."

2005 IN REVIEW

By TOM HENSHAW

One of these days, the people of Quincy may look back upon the year 2005 as one in which their city took a major step foreward into a bright future.

"Out house is in order," said Mayor William Phelan as the year opened and so it was, although there were some murmurs of discontent when tax bills came out.

Moody's and Standard & Poor's. the bond rating companies, raised the city's bond rating and, despite a $221.2 million budget for Fiscal 1006, the tax rate was lower by 52 cents.

This was accomplished by raising the commercial classification to the state limit of 189 percent, which made the business community unhappy but not enough to suborn open revolt.

Downtown revitalization moved a step closer to reality when the city council approved zoning changes to allow 15-story buildings and landtaking for the Quincy Center Concourse.

Both were designed to bring more people into downtown Quincy, which would then become a diverse area with a mix of residences and stores.

The big cloud on the financial horizon was the long-standing dispute over plans for a new Quincy High School and how much change they could undergo and still retain the 90 per cent state reimbursement.

MAYOR WILLIAM PHELAN delivered his mid-term address in January, pledging tax relief for senior citizens who have owned a home in the city for at least 20 years.

COUNCILLOR FRANK MCCAULEY, unanimously re-elected in January to serve as council president, told those in attendance that 2005 would be his last year as city councillor. Quincy Sun Photos/ Robert Noble

This was Quincy in the year 2005:

JANUARY

Mayor William Phelan, in his mid-term address, declared that Quincy had dug itself out of its financial mess and was now poised to better aid its elderly and needy citizens.

"Today, while economic forecasters give us mixed signals about the future, Quincy's house is in order, and we are making the investments we need to ensure a brighter future," he said.

He proposed $400 tax breaks to Quincy homeowners age 65 and older who have lived in their houses for at least 20 years. The estimated cost would be $1 million.

Frank McCauley, vowing that the coming year would be his last in politics, was unanimously reelected to a second term as president of the City Council. McCauley, a former mayor, was 75 years old.

One of the biggest storms ever to hit the city of Presidents dumped 28 inches of snow on the city, more than the great blizzard that struck the city in 1978. This time no deaths were reported; no one had to be evacuated; and no power outages were reported by emergency crews.

However, the storm brought the cost of snow removal left the city with a bill of more $1 million for the current winter season.

Phelan named Personnel Director Roberta Kety, Executive Secretary Tom Largey and resident Bob Haley. McCauley selected Councillor John Keenan, Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin and realtor Arthur Foley.

Two term City Councillor-at-Large Joseph Finn, who had been giving serious consideration to challenging Mayor Phelan in the fall elections, announced he would not run for the corner office, citing "family and personal reasons."

Alan Cousin, founder and president of the Quincy Taxpayer Association, announced that he was leaving the city to take up residence in Cambridge and a new job at Harvard University.

David Bartley, former House speaker and president of Holyoke Community College, was the speaker at the winter graduation at Quincy College, the largest ever with 228 graduates.

Frank McCauley, in the 32nd and final year in public office, including four two-year terms as Mayor of Quincy, was named the 20th recipient of The Quincy Sun's Citizen of the Year Award for 2004.

Pharnal Longus, a retired professor of social work at Salem State College was the guest speaker at the annual Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. breakfast and the Rev. Sheldon Bennett was given an award for his work promoting human rights.

Four women were among seven new officers sworn into the Quincy Police Department, boosting the number of female officers on the 290-member force from six to 10. Two more women were due to be cops when their military service expired.

The City Council approved a plan submitted by Mayor Phelan to allocate an additional $50,000 in fuel assistance to Quincy families who are struggling with skyrocketing costs of natural

What You WON'T See in 2006

Well, the experts on just about everything will now be telling you what to expect in 2006.

Being no expert, I'll pass on what we are going to see in the year ahead.

But I can tell you, with strict confidence, what you won't see in 2006. Like:

You won't see Mayor Bill Phelan proposing a tax increase.

You won't see Health Commissioner Drew Scheele saying, "It's okay, you really don't need to wash your hands."

You won't see Frank McCauley announcing he has changed his mind and will begin his campaign for the 2007 election. And you won't see Sandra telling him he should.

You won't see Ann Mahoney, Kevin Mulvey or Jim Timmins at their first school committee meeting claiming they have the solution to the new Quincy High School issue. But you will see them working at it.

You won't see members of the Quincy High School class of 2006 graduating from a new school building. Maybe the class of 2007. Or 2008. Or . . . ?

You won't see City Purchasing Agent Laurie Allen saying, "Give it to the highest bidder."

You won't see Dan Raymondi with a loss of words.

You won't see School Supt. Rick DeCristofaro and Public Works Commr. Steve O'Donnell doing a duet to "Let It Snow, Let It Snow, Let It Snow."

You won't see City Clerk Joe Shea saying, "We should go back to paper ballots. It was more fun that way."

You won't see Leo Kelly, chairman of the city's Evergreen Program, decorating an artificial Christmas tree. (Better not, Leo).

You won't see Fr. Bill McCarthy or John Yazwinski closing the door on anyone at Father Bill's Place.

You won't see Majors Doug and Linda Jones of the Salvation Army's Quincy Temple Corps saying "no" to anyone in need.

You won't see Alicia Gardner saying, "Gee, I wish I had run."

You won't see Dan Flynn without a worthy cause or a development.

You won't see Ron Della Chiesa leading a Rock 'n Roll band.

You won't see Jake Comer, past National Commander of the American Legion, letting up in his campaign for a Constitutional amendment to protect the flag from the abuse it gets at the hands of some today.

You won't see Tom Galvin giving up his daily search for old Quincy postcards for his "Scenes From Yesterday."

You won't see Mike McFarland, who is changing seats from the school committee to the city council, with a frown. That smile is permanent.

You won't see a bar without someone standing outside smoking a cigarette. Even on the most frigid of winter.

You won't see Bill Draicchio, City Hall's Candy Man, with empty candy jars in the city clerk's office. Drop by and have a chocolate, gumdrop or lollipop.

You won't see Walter Hannon, Joe LaRaia, Arthur Tobin or Jim Sheets back on the political front.

You won't see Kevin Coughlin leaving a shopping cart on the sidewalk.

You won't see anyone complaining if the weather is mild for Quincy's First Night New Year's Eve celebration Saturday. Oh, maybe, the ice sculptors might.

And, you positively won't see 2005 again. That, you can be sure.

Wishing you all a Happy, Healthy New Year.

Quincy/South Shore AIDS Cares Receives Grant To Provide Emergency Support

Quincy/South Shore AIDS Cares (QSSAC) recently received a $5,000 grant from the M?A?C AIDS Fund.

Located at Quincy Medical Center, QSSAC provides free case management and education for individuals and families who are living with HIV and AIDS.

The grant will support QSSAC's emergency fund, which offers assistance to QSSAC clients facing financial crisis.

"Financial shortages are very common among our clients who often find it difficult to maintain steady employment due to health problems, such as medications side effects, or who have already used up their allocated sick leave benefits at work because of previous bouts of illness," said Kim Kroeger, HIV program director for South Shore AIDS Cares at QMC.

"These emergency funds play a significant role in ensuring that clients experiencing temporary financial crises are not at risk of losing their housing, suffering from poor nutrition and hunger, or enduring stress to meet their basis needs, while they are at the same time battling poor health."

Quincy/South Shore AIDS Cares (QSSAC) is focused on reducing the rate of HIV transmission and expanding HIV and AIDS services on the South Shore.

Primarily funded by the Department of Public Health, QSSAC offers free and confidential services for South Shore residents infected with or affected by HIV. QSSAC client services include individual case management, housing advocacy, referrals for mental health or substance use counseling, and support services. Last year, more than 100 clients utilized QSSAC services.

To learn more about QSSAC services, call 617-376-2038 or visit www.qssac.org

Quincy Medical Center, the lead agency in the Quincy/South Shore AIDS CARES, is a 232-bed acute care community-teaching hospital providing South Shore residents with comprehensive medical and surgical services. The medical center's Alliance for Quality with Boston Medical Center (BMC), formed in 1999, brings academic medicine to the community.

At Quincy Medical Center, physicians from Boston Medical Center direct the departments of medicine, surgery, anesthesia, emergency medicine, and psychiatry. Additionally, physicians from BMC who are board-certified in a range of medical and surgical specialties work with community physicians to ensure the continuity of patient care.

A Thank You From Okie's Family

We would like to thank John's friends from NQHS, as well as those of the Quincy community, for your outpouring of love and support during our time of grief.

The true character of John's friends and their parents was reflected by their sincere love and concern in these past few weeks. Each and everyone of you had an impact on John's life. You define the true meaning of family.

It is at times like this, when we come together, we realize life is not measured in the number of years we have lived but in how we live in the years we are given. John truly believed . . . "life is short but sweet for certain."

God bless you during this holiday season and know that Okie is and will always be with us in spirit.

Please stay safe and keep the faith.

Mutual Respect For All Religious Beliefs

The town where I grew up had, at that time, more Jewish than non-Jewish people. As children, we learned so sing Christian and Jewish songs, and the school was decorated with both Jewish and Christian themes. Much to our delight, we had no school during both Jewish and Christian holidays.

We both had mutual respect for each other's religious beliefs. I had Jewish friends who had "Christmas trees" decorated in their houses — they referred to the trees as "Hanukkah bushes." We both incorporated the beauty of a decorated pine tree into our holiday celebrations.

The strength of the religious convictions of us Christians was not affected at all by the fact that Jews also had decorated pine trees in their homes. This did not infringe on our Christian beliefs in any way because a pine tree holds no religious significance to Christians.

If a Crucifixion was referred to as something that it did not represent it would be highly offensive — just as it would be equally as offensive if a menorah was referred to as a holiday candelabra, or the Star of David as a Holiday Star.

This is because these items bear religious significance. These items are exclusive to the religion they represent. Most Christians dilute their own religious celebrations by placing more emphasis on Santa Claus than what Christmas truly represents.

People like Jerry Falwell should fall asleep counting their blessings instead of sheep if their biggest problem and issue in life is if a decorated pine tree is called a "Christmas tree" or a "Holiday tree." How sad that their religious celebrations are tainted with the sin of intolerance.

Ross Warns Of Tax Rate Hike At Inaugural

Dec. 29 - Jan. 5
1947-1948
58 Years Ago

Mayor Charles A. Ross warned in his inaugural address that Quincy was faced with an increase of $1.5 million in the cost of running the city government in 1948. He predicted a $7 or $8 boost in the tax rate.

"I would like to maintain our present tax rate ($33) but I can readily see that such cannot be done," he said.

Ross listed a new municipal health center and widening of Revere Road and Canal Street as two of the chief objectives of his administration, the last before Plan E goes into effect.

He also promised a citywide recreation program, construction of more stands and a garage in the municipal stadium and completion of plans for a proposed new surgical and medical addition to City Hospital.

Amelio Della Chiesa was chosen president of the City Council and A. Wendell Clark was re-elected vice chairman of the School Committee for the fourth year by a 5-1 vote over Mrs. Helen Spencer.

GALA NEW YEAR'S EVE

Quincy's smart set welcomed the New Year with a midnight show at the Art Theater — "Golden Earrings" with Marlene Dietrich and Ray Milland, the movie that asked the question: "Was there a man bold enough to earn the tigerish caresses of wild and fabulous Lydia?"

Less daring celebrants danced to the music of Lundin's Orchestra at the Finnish Temperance Hall, Suomi Road and Nelson Street, West Quincy, and Vick Vill's Band in the Brewster Boat on the Neponset River near the bridge.

School Legend Mary Sullivan Retires After 44 Years As B.C. High Lunch Lady

Mary Sullivan of Quincy, a Boston College High School "lunch lady" for 44 years, served her last piece of homemade cake Nov. 4, marking her retirement from the BC High cafeteria.

Since her career began in the 1960s, she baked over 1 million pieces of her legendary cake, serving over 10,000 students in her nearly five decades at the school.

Mrs. Sullivan inherited the job from her mother, former cafeteria manager who first worked at the old BC High on James Street in Boston's South End, serving for more than 20 years.

With some six hundred students in attendance, school administrators made a special presentation to Mrs. Sullivan during the BC High student lunch periods. Students were served free pieces of cake to mark the occasion.

MARY SULLIVAN of Quincy recently retired as a lunch lady at Boston College High School. She served the school for 44 years.

Boston College High School is a Jesuit, Catholic, college-preparatory school for young men founded in 1863. The school enrolls approximately 1,300 students from some 100 communities in eastern Massachusetts.

THERESA LORD-PIATELLI invests Sue Harris as the sixth president of Quincy College and hails her ability to "restore an enormous amount of credibility in this institution."

SUE HARRIS, the newly invested president, says she sees Quincy College as uniquely equipped to handle the challenges of the information age.

MAYOR WILLIAM PHELAN praised Harris for her efforts in establishing a good relationship with the city in four months as acting president of the college.

Sue Harris Installed As Quincy College's 6th President

Martha Sue Harris, inaugurated the sixth president of Quincy College, says the college is uniquely equipped to handle the challenges of the "information age."

At the inaugural ceremony last week at Bethany Congregational Church, across the street, she was praised for the progress the college has made under her as acting president last August and permanent president since September.

Theresa Lord-Piatelli, chairwoman of the college's Board of Governors said:

"I can think of no other person better suited to lead this college than Sue Harris. She possesses such a great depth of integrity that is exhibited in every aspect of her life- intellectual, academic, character and spirit."

Lord-Piatelli added: "Through her amazing efforts, President Harris has already been able to restore an enormous amount of faith and credibility in this institution."

Harris, 59, succeeds Sean Barry who was dismissed in August after a turbulent period involving the surgical technology program and charged regarding the handling of funds and finances.

Mayor William Phelan applauded Harris for her efforts in establishing good relationships in the city after just a short tenure as president.

Paula Smith, Dean of Enrollment Management, said:

"Through the carefully orchestrated plan of our president, we are working as a community with a common goal and pride in the part of each of us has in achieving that goal.

"The mission of Quincy College to provide opportunities for self-development is a part of each individual working here today."

Harris, in her inaugural address, spoke of the challenges that face institutions of higher education in the information age:

"Once upon a time— before Gutenberg's printing press— knowledge and understanding was so hard to come by that it was considered sacred.

"Today, with technology, information is just a google away— it's at anyone's fingertips. Yet we must remind ourselves and our students that those googled facts and canned explanations do not comprise knowledge. Information like this provides a fractured, pale veneer of facts without depth or comprehension."

Harris pointed out that Quincy College is uniquely equipped to handle the challenges of the information age.

"Quincy College, as a college of opportunity endowed with the riches of a diverse student population in an increasingly diverse city of enormous beauty and potential, is uniquely situated to provide higher education that embraces this challenge.

"Quincy College welcomes the complex thinking of non-traditional students as well as 18 year olds. We can help students learn to examine ideas in depth, to learn from diversity, to aspire— to analyze, integrate and synthesize what they are learning to evaluate and apply conceptual knowledge."

Among those attending the ceremony were Dr. Corlis McGee, President of the Easter Nazorene College; Michael Collins, Chancellor of Umass, Boston,; members of the Quincy College Board of Governors, former colleagues and members of the current college community.

Born in Peterborough, N.H., Harris graduated cum laude from Boston University in 1967 and later attended Harvard University in 1990 to complete her Masters in Education. She is currently pursuing her Doctorate in Education from Lesley University in Cambridge.

Harris has been with the college for the last 14 years. She started as Assistant Director of the Plymouth Campus in November 1991, and was instrumental in getting that campus up and running. She moved to the Quincy Campus in 1992 and worked as Director of the Evening and Weekend Programs until 1997. During this period, this division experienced large growth in enrollment and services. For the last five years, she has held the position of Dean of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Harris has made a lifelong commitment to education and was Education Director for the League of Women Voters of Massachusetts. She also taught in the Quincy Public School System for a number of years.

Harris lives in Quincy with her husband of 33 years and has three sons.

FEBRUARY

Joseph Berlo and Joshua Majorowski, both 17-year-old students, pleaded innocent in Quincy District Court to charges they planted a deactivated hand grenade that led to the evacuation of Quincy High School and the Center for Technical Education.

The hand grenade was found by a school janitor in a stairwell of the Center for Technical Education early on a Friday morning and students in both schools were sent home for the day while the buildings were searched for more explosives.

Mayor William Phelan called for creation of a special account, called a Neighborhood Stabilization Fund, to provide tax breaks annually to Quincy homeowners age 62 and older who have lived in their houses for 20 years or more.

OFFICER BOB HANNA, Quincy's first Crime Prevention officer, announced his retirement in February after more than 36 years on the Quincy Police Force.

But City Council President Frank McCauley, himself 75, turned thumbs down on the plan, calling it "not a good idea. The whole con-

The Thomas Crane Library Board of Trustees voted 2-1 to name the new $18 million wing of the main library after James Sheets, the former six-term mayor who was instrumental in obtaining the funding for the addition, which opened in 2001. The dissenting vote was cast by the chairman, Sandra McCauley.

Moody's Investor Services and Standard & Poor's Public Finance Ratings both upgraded Quincy's bond rating, Moody's from A2 to A3 and Standard and Poor's from A-minus to A. The upgrade meant the city would get more favorable debt service on future bond issues.

Architects unveiled several possible designs for a new Quincy High School and Central Middle School. including one that called for construction of a new Central Middle School and partial renovation of the existing Quincy High School as a new high school.

But the State School Building Authority threw cold water on the plan, calling it a "substantial change in scope from the old one and thus ineligible for the 90 per cent reimbursement from the state.

The city of Quincy received a $500,000 award from the state for the purpose of purchasing open space at Marina Bay to protect the 13 acres of uplands and wetlands from a proposed 12-unit townhouse development.

The State Contributory Retirement Appeal Board ruled that the city's retirement board unfairly billed the Quincy Housing Authority for hundreds of thousands of dollars in pension payments.

Mayor Phelan presented to the City Council a list of sweeping changes in the downtown zoning laws that would relax restrictions on building heights and ease density requirements at first steps in his plan to revitalize Quincy Center.

Fifth grade students at the Francis W. Parker Elementary School, after bringing their pennies to class for four or five weeks, accumulated 103,700 of them and celebrated the Lunar New Year by contributing $1,037 to the victims of the Southeast Asia tsunami.

Deaths in February included:

Anna M. Kane, 81, of Quincy, former president of the Quincy League of Women Voters and longtime advocate for the elderly.

George J. Prizio, 97, of Quincy, shipyard welder, accountant and convenience store owner, who held one of the first barber licenses issued in the state.

Edward Callanan, 79, of Quincy, retired Army colonel who fought in World War II, the Korean War and the Vietnam War.

MARCH

Mayor William Phelan strongly defended his administration's actions amid allegations that he misled the public regarding the funding status of construction of a new Quincy High School and a renovated Central; Middle School.

A letter released by the State School Building Authority (SBA) declared that the Central is not eligible for reimbursement until July 1, 2007, and projects allowed after that will be eligible for only 40 to 80 per cent, not 90 per cent, reimbursement from the state.

State Treasurer Tim Cahill, whose office oversees the SBA, told The Quincy Sun that the city must building a new high school on Faxon Field or risk dramatic reductions in state aid for the project.

"I believe the high school plan is site-specific," he told The Quincy Sun. "If you move it that would trigger the potential loss of grandfathering under the 90 per cent (state reimbursement)."

Despite warnings that the plan could lose 90 per cent reimbursement, the School Committee decided to pursue a revamped project that included a new Central Middle School and a partially renovated Quincy High School.

The State Department of Environmental Protection dismissed an appeal of the city's plan to renovate Veteran's Stadium. paving the way for installation of a new state-of-the-art Field Turf surface at the athletic facility.

The appeal, pushed by environmentalist William Aylward, failed because he failed to state his objections to an original Conservation Commission decision to state how the Order of Conditions was inconsistent with wetland regulations.

Security was tightened at Quincy High School after a gun-wielding intruder allegedly threatened a female stu-

Newly named Quincy Housing Authority Executive Director Jay MacRitchie, appointed to the post by a split vote in defiance of state wishes, said he is confident that he can improve the embattled agency's financial status despite his inexperience in housing.

Former members of the closed Star of the Sea Church in Squantum were permitted by the Archdiocese of Boston to hold a one-time mass for Easter in the Squantum School gym after they announced plans to hold it in the Protestant First Church of Squantum with a married priest officiating.

City Auditor Rick Fitzpatrick estimated that the city's storm cleanup costs had topped $2.1 million, the most since Quincy spent $614,000 on such expenses — and there was still $229,000 set aside for costs that might be expected in the next two months.

Eric Stoeckel of Burgin, Platner and Hurley Insurance agency was reelected president of the Quincy Business Association.

John Noonan was elected chairman of the Council on Aging for the 25th consecutive year while, at the same time, the Council lost one of its most effective members with the retirement of Frank Kearns.

The polished granite ball that adorned the Fore River Bridge rotary since 1937 was trucked to Barre, Vt., for repairs before it was returned to its original spot on Constitution Common in front of City Hall.

Barbara DiNatale, the city of Quincy's first female police officer in 1971, retired after 34 years on the force as undercover detective on the drug unit, juvenile officer and prosecutor at Quincy District Court.

Christine Schuster, who is credited with bring financial stability to Quincy Medical Center in five years as CEO, quit to become president and CEO of Emerson Hospital in Concord.

The World Championship Trophy won by the Red Sox for the first time in 86 years visited Quincy, sponsored by State Treasurer Tim Cahill and the State Lottery. So far it had visited 100 of the state's 351 communities.

Deaths in March included:

Gertrude B. "Trudy" Pearson, 86, of Keene, N.H., formerly of Quincy, retired teacher, Navy veteran of World War II and New Hampshire state rep.

APRIL

Mayor William Phelan's "Neighborhood Stabilization Fund," a tax cut program for elderly, longtime home owners, was temporarily derailed by a clash between Phelan and the City Council, which tied the tax cut to a year-old land deal between the city and Quincy College.

The Council approved the mayor's plan, which would give checks of about $400 to homeowners 62 or older who have owned a home in the city for more than 20 years but, after the college land deal amendment passed, Phelan refused to sign his own bill.

The city of Quincy was awarded a $2 million state grant to assist with Phase 3 of the Quincy Center Concourse, including design and construction of a "boulevard" roadway from Hancock Street to Route 3A on Southern Artery.

Frank McCauley, the last of his 32 years of public service drawing to a close, was named The Quincy Sun's 20th annual Citizen of the Year. He was the only person ever elected to the four top municipal offices, mayor, councillor-at-large, ward councillor and school committee.

The Dorothy Quincy Homestead at the corner of Hancock Street and Butler Road, one of Quincy's most overlooked historic treasures, was designated a National Historic Landmark. It was the childhood home of Dorothy Quincy, wife of John Hancock.

dorsement to Mayor Phelan's downtown rezoning initiative that would allow for taller buildings, more residential development and a streamlined regulatory process.

The project received a thunderous approval from most of the more than 100 residents who turned out for a public meeting and got their first chance to register their input on what was called "one of the most significant changes this city has ever seen."

A delegation from the former Star of the Sea Parish in Squantum met with member of the Boston Archdiocese reconfiguration committee and came away with a feeling of optimism. They were seeking to have the church reopened as a chapel with a visiting priest celebrating mass.

Rabbi Jacob Mann, 95, spiritual leader of Beth Israel Synagogue in Quincy Point for more than 60 years, died at his retirement home in Petach Tikvah, a suburb of Tel Aviv, Israel. He was believed to be Quincy's longest serving clergyman.

A blood drive was held for the Rev. David Wooster, program manager for the Quincy Crisis Center, who was at Massachusetts General Hospital recovering from a heart transplant. Wooster had undergone six surgical procedures in six months.

The Rev. Peter Quinn, pastor of St. John the Baptist Church in Quincy Center for the past 10 years, was reassigned to St. Catherine of Alexandria parish in Westford.

The city of Quincy belatedly observed Capt. Alan Brudno Day, honoring the native son who took his own life after suffering the tortures and torments of seven and a half years as a prison of war in Vietnam.

The Fire Department received shipment of two new fire pumpers that we purchased as part of the city's capital investment bond at a total coast of $599,999. They were to be stationed at the Quincy Center and West Quincy stations.

Mayor Phelan presented Blue Star banners to some 30 families of soldiers from the Quincy-based Massachusetts National Guard 102nd Field Artillery Battalion currently serving in Iraq. Blue stars signifies that a family member is in a war zone.

The Quincy Medical Center Board of Trustees named Dr. Gary W. Gibbons interim president of the 232-bed facility while the search went on for a permanent successor to Christine Schuster, who resigned after five years.

Deaths in April included:

Barry S. Kelliher, 65, of Quincy, president of Peabody Properties of Braintree for 20 years.

Louise M. Brabazon, 78, of Quincy, first female executive secretary to a mayor of Quincy (James McIntyre).

Jacob Mann, 95, of Petach Tikvah, Israel, formerly of Quincy, retired rabbi at Beth Israel Synagogue for more than 60 years.

MAY

Mayor William Phelan unveiled a proposed Fiscal 2006 budget of $221.2 million, calling for a 6.7 percent increase in spending, most of it on education, and restoring about a dozen positions that were cut over the past few years.

Dramatic changes were foreseen for downtown Quincy after the City Council's Ordinance Committee rubber-stamped a major overhaul of zoning rules, which included the construction of 15-story buildings in some areas.

Stephen B. Ross of Newton, a licensed psychologist and holocaust survivor who was held at 10 Nazi slave labor and death camps from 1940 to 1945, was the main speaker at Memorial Day services at Mount Wollaston Cemetery.

The City Council unanimously approved Mayor Phelan's proposal to purchase $3.2 million in property in Marina Bay and Houghs Neck and save it as open space, the largest such acquisition in Quincy's history.

Mayor Phelan refused to sign a version of his tax cut for longtime homeowners that was passed with amendments by the City Council. Instead, he refiled his own bill giving checks of up to $500 to homeowners over 62 who have owned their homes more than 20 years.

Former President Bill Clinton visited Quincy to lend his support to Cradles to Crayons, a North Quincy-based, non-profit agency that caters to low income families in Massachusetts.

Clinton was presented with a city of Quincy necktie and a lapel pin by Ward 3 City Councillor Kevin Coughlin, who sit on the Cradles to Crayons fundraising committee.

Mayor Phelan signed into law a measure giving the City Council final say over mooring fees. Harbormaster Andrew Ayer proposed to fees to pay for a mooring program established in response to a State Inspector General's ruling.

The City Council passed a key component to Mayor Phelan's plan to boost downtown development by approving the city's bid to take advantage of a state tax incentive program called District Improvement Financing (DIF).

Jo-Ann Bragg, a mainstay on the School Committee for 12 years, announced that she will not seek reelection to a fourth term, due to "the increased needs of my family and added demands of my work." Her decision left two committee seats vacant for the fall election.

Attorney for Sean Barry, president of Quincy College filed a complaint in Norfolk Superior Court against the college board of governors that placed Barry on administrative leave during an investigation of the school's fundraising foundation.

Attorney Margaret Donovan said Barry's rights were violated during a closed-door hearing of the board and attacked Board Chairwoman Theresa Lord-Piatelli as the president's "judge, jury and executioner."

Dorothy McTiernan, chairwoman of the foundation, said she was confident that "not one cent" of funds intended for student scholarships was spent by Barry for entertainment or travel.

The City Council entered the fray when Councillor-at-large John Keenan suggested it was time for the city to sever relations with the college and Ward 4 Councillor Jay Davis called for the Council to hold hearings on the controversy.

Council President Frank McCauley named a three-member subcommittee of Councillors Keenan, Davis and Alicia Gardner to hold hearings into the controversy and look into the possibility of cutting ties with the college.

But Mayor William Phelan reacted coolly to the measure, saying the city should give the college more time to work out its own problems.

The junction of Grafton and Lancaster Streets, site of Beth Israel Synagogue, was dedicated as "Rabbi Jacob Mann Square" in memory of the spiritual leader of the temple for nearly 62 years, who died at the age of 95.

The Archdiocese of Boston rejected a bid by the Manet Community Health Center to purchase for $420,000 the former St. Boniface Church in Germantown for conversion into a full-service, multi-million dollar health and neighborhood center. Church officials provided no explanation of the rejection.

After months of debate, the City Council approved a major overhaul of downtown zoning rules, paving the way for 15-story buildings in Quincy Center and financial incentives as a means of revitalizing the long-suffering business area.

A total of 669 seniors graduated from the Quincy high schools in ceremonies at Adams Field — 327 from Quincy High and 342 from North Quincy.

JULY

The Archdiocese of Boston gave the Star of the Sea Church, the suppressed Catholic parish in Squantum, permission to reopen as a mission chapel of Sacred Heart Church of North Quincy, a successful ending to an eight-month campaign by former parishioners.

Starting Sunday, July 17, a priest from Sacred Heart was permitted to celebrate one Sunday mass a week in Squantum but sacramental celebrations of baptisms, weddings and funerals were to be held at the governing parish church.

Ward 6 City Councillor Alicia Gardner withdrew unexpectedly as a candidate for a second term in the city's fall election, citing her husband's serious heart ailment that would require a lengthy treatment and rehabilitation period.

Brian McNamee, who lost to Gardner in the 2003 election by a scant 15 votes, and Mark Bracken, who lost out in the preliminary election two years before, had to scramble to get the required 50 signatures at the last minute.

Veteran School Committeeman Ron Mariano announced that he will not run for a fifth four-year term, a surprise decision that created a third vacant spot on the School Board.

Vice Chairman Michael McFarland already announced that he would leave the School Committee to run for an open city council-at-large seat and Jo-Ann Bragg, who plans retirement after

When the deadline for filing passed, Mayor William Phelan had no opposition in his bid for a third term and neither did five of the six ward councillors.

AUGUST

Sean Barry was fired as president of Quincy College after allegations surfaced that he mismanaged the college's fundraising foundation by reimbursing himself for business expenses through the foundation without permission.

Timothy Pettinelli, a 27-year veteran of the department, was named permanent chief of the Quincy Fire Department, succeeding the retired Paul O'Donnell. His father, Jack, and his uncle, Robert, had been firemen for 32 years each.

Mayor William Phelan promoted 20 police officers to the ranks of captain, lieutenant and sergeant to replace those who retired after some 30 years on the department. The force was expanded greatly in the 1970s and many retired at the same time.

The final portion of the Quincy Center Concourse, the middle section crossing Hancock Street to McGrath Highway, emerged as the most controversial part due to landtakings, which may include the Quincy Legion Post. But action on the plan was still two years away.

The Quincy legislative delegation was working with the Romney administration to finalize a bill that would establish "senior safety zones" throughout the city, allowing the city to erect traffic signs on roads near senior housing facilities.

A series of powerful thunder storms rolled through Quincy on a Sunday afternoon accompanied by flooding that shut down the Southeast Expressway for a time and resulted in widespread power outages.

The 11th annual Father Bill's Place Food Fest and Auction raised approximately $350,000 for the homeless shelter.

Motorists were warned to expected some traffic delays as long as three or four weeks while work crews replaced 100-year-old water mains along Beale Street and Lakian Square

Sen. Michael Morrissey co-sponsored legislation requiring all churches to disclose their financial records, a move which Morrissey said might help restore the Catholic Church standing in their communities.

Quincy Cares Campaign For Katrina Victims

(Cont'd From Page 17)

SEPTEMBER

The city of Quincy moved swiftly to aid the victims of Hurricane Katrina in Louisiana, particularly whose in Jefferson Parish, whose 14-year-old Babe Ruth baseball team was winning the national championship in Quincy when the storm struck.

Residents eagerly embraced the five-week Quincy Cares fundraising drive, developed by insuranceman Daniel J. Flynn, which raised $100,000 by month's end en route to a goal of $1 million.

Throughout the month, young and old devoted their spare time to devising way to aid those who lost virtually everything in the storm and the floods that followed in New Orleans and environs.

A fundraiser sponsored by Quincy Babe Ruth and Quincy Sons of Italy accumulated some $14,000 in one night at a party at the Sons of Italy Hall, four days later, more money was still rolling in.

Four 9-year-olds from Adams Shore raised $420 for the hurricane victims by selling lemonade for $1 a glass in front of 71 Curlew Rd. They were Marlena Forrester, Catherine Sullivan, Madison Kirby and Dominique Lucier.

Quincy Medical Center teamed up with the city to provide medical and psychological care for the refugees housed at Camp Edwards on Otis Air Force Base in Bourne.

Six candidates survived the preliminary election to face each other in the Nov. 8 final to fill three vacant seats on the School Committee. They were Anne Mahoney, Celeste McGlone, Kevin Mulvey, James Timmins, Ronald Iacobucci and Joseph Keegan.

Phelan, Cahill Clash Over New QHS Site

(Cont'd From Page 18)

OCTOBER

St. Boniface Church, closed for a year and a half, was sold for $440,000 to the South Shore YMCA in partnership with the city for conversion into a new Germantown Neighborhood Center

"The closing of the church was a devastating blow to this community," said Mayor William Phelan. "It is our hope we can make good out of a bad situation. By providing a new neighborhood center and service we can improve the quality of life for the residents of Germantown."

The Quincy Cares campaign to aid the victims of Hurricane Katrina in Jefferson County, La., passed the halfway mark in its goal to reach $1 million when a gala at the Quincy Marriott raised $185,000 to push the total to $550,000.

Phelan and State Treasurer Tim Cahill, a Quincy resident, continued to clash over the proposed location of a new Quincy High School and the possibility of reimbursement by the state School Building Authority (SBA) for any but the Faxon Field site.

"To imply that the state is open to reimbursing the city for a high school built on a different site is not true," said Cahill.

The latest city census, using a new counting method built around voting lists and school enrollments, showed the city of Quincy with 87,755 inhabitants, down by 270 from the 88,025 counted in the federal census in 2000. But City Clerk Joe Shea was still confident of reaching the 90,000 figure.

The most intense rainfall in years caused a power failure that disabled pumps carrying sewage to Deer Island and forced the MWRA to release 25 million gallons of untreated sewage into Quincy Bay.

"The MWRA spent $3.8 billion on a treatment plant that still dumps sewage into our bay," said Mayor Phelan. "That is simply an injustice."

The more than a foot of rain that fell on Quincy also flooded some West Quincy homes to a depth of five feet and the city had more than 30 pumps going at one time during the nine-day storm.

Dr. Corliss McGee was sworn in as the 13th president of Eastern Nazarene College, the first woman ever to head the 105-year-old school in Wollaston.

Mayor Phelan stirred a controversy by firing police officer Siobhan O'Connor after her court appearance for drunken driving but only transferring firefighter Paul O'Grady to a desk job after he served a year for vehicular homicide.

"The police and fire jobs differ markedly," he said. "Police are held to higher standards."

Linda Luccio of Braintree won the contest to name the theme of the 53rd annual Christmas parade with her entry — "Christmas — A Time for Peace and Family."

Grace Bulger, 4, of Hatherly Road, won the annual "Grow Together" Sunflower Contest, sponsored by Beechwood on the Bay and The Quincy Sun, with two eight foot sunflowers, grown by herself from seeds planted early in the summer.

Tina Le, 47; Steven Nguyen, 47; and Mercedes Tang, 30; all of 301 Adams St,, were arrested on charges of fraud and money-laundering involving $30 million over a period of 10 years

Mayor Phelan set up an energy conservation task force to examine ways the city could reduce the cost of heating more than 25 municipal buildings during a winter of high-priced oil and gas.

Officials from Quincy as well as emergency medical agencies took part in a tabletop exercise in response to a mock outbreak of avian influenza. Health Commissioner Drew Scheele, however, cautioned residents not to be frightened by news stories.

Ashlyn Frank, 7, and her friend, Alina Dunham, 4, raised more than $550 at their Squantum lemonade stand for pets, the forgotten victims of Hurricane Katrina.

DPW Commissioner Steve O'Donnell announced plans to spend $1.65 million next year to replace aging water mains, some of them 100 years old, with new pipes of larger diameter.

Edward M. Kennedy, who has represented Massachusetts in the U. S. Senate for 43 years, received the John Adams award for public service during a celebration of the 270th birthday of the nation's second president.

Deaths in October included:

Robert Killam, 87, of Quincy, former columnist for the Boston Herald and director of the New England Innkeepers Association.

Dr. Esther W. Davidson of Quincy, a longtime practicing psychiatrist in Quincy.

Stephen M. Lawlor, 50, of Quincy, special operations commissioner for Boston Emergency Medical Service for 27 years.

George H. Peachey III, 85, of Brockton, formerly of Quincy, retired assistant coach in several sports at Quincy High School.

Ta-Ko Chen, 49, of Quincy, a corporate lawyer and authority on governmental institutions during the Tang Dynasty in China.

Peter Boylston Adams, a direct descendant, took the occasion of John Adams 270th birthday party to express doubts about the war in Iraq.

"Our problem is we have an open ended engagement that never had a final objective," he said.

"We must establish a firm objective for what we would define as victory, set that standard, accomplish that standard and bring our young boys and young women home."

Repair work on Quincy's fire stations was moving too slowly for the city's firefighters who were irked by the resulting living and working conditions, which included open asbestos that posed a threat of respiratory illness and cancer.

"We're not happy and we're sick and tired of being treated like second class workers in this city," said Thomas Bowes, president of the union. "All we are looking for are decent working conditions, toilets that work, heat that works, stairs that don't fall apart and buildings that don't leak."

JOSEPH KENNEDY II of Citizens Energy Corp. pulls the hose from the oil truck preparatory to delivering the first discount oil from Venezuela to Paul and Linda Kelly of North Quincy. (NAPS) A chilly home, strange odor or unusual noise when the furnace clicks on is a homeowner's first warning to call a technician. Not every problem warrants a service call. Knowing when to place a call and what information to provide can save time and money.

Before Placing The Call

• Is the thermostat's selector switch on and set for the proper season and temperature?

• Does the thermostat need new batteries?

• Have you blown any fuses? Check the master switch and circuit breaker or fuse.

• Is the air filter dirty, limiting airflow?

• Is there a strange odor or unusual noise when the furnace kicks on?

What To Tell The Dispatcher

• Is the problem intermittent? Note if the problem occurs at certain times of the day. Do any events coincide with the system problem? (Does a factory opening at 6 a.m. coincide with your furnace malfunctioning?)

• Alert the dispatcher to unusual odors. Unfamiliar odors may signal abnormal operating conditions.

• Tell the dispatcher if you want an estimate before any work is performed.

• Provide contact information- a cell phone or work number, or the name of the individual at home who can authorize the work.

• Consider providing a "not-to-exceed" amount so the technician can perform services up to a stated dollar amount without signed authorization.

• Request a NATE-certified technician- they know heating and cooling and have proven their knowledge.

• Finally, minimize future service calls by having your home's comfort system regularly serviced by a NATE-certified technician.

These tips are brought to you by North American Technician Excellence, or NATE, the nation's largest nonprofit certification organization for heating, ventilation, air conditioning and refrigeration technicians. The U.S. Department of Energy endorses NATE for raising quality standards and energy efficiency.

For a contractor with NATE-certified technicians, go to the Consumer Contractor Connection at www.natex.org. And remember, when purchasing a new unit, select one with the EnergyStar qualified seal.

Stephanie McGrath Wins Conway Award

Quincy resident Stephanie McGrath, a mortgage processor for Conway Financial Services, recently was awarded the company's annual Thanksgiving award.

Conway Financial is a division of Norwell-based Jack Conway & Co., the largest independent real estate company in Massachusetts.

Chairman Jack Conway and President Richard F. Cahill presented the awards at the company's Thanksgiving breakfast, held each November at Plimoth Plantation. Winners received a holiday turkey in recognition of their efforts throughout the year.

"What makes the Thanksgiving award so special is that the winners are chosen by their colleagues," Conway said. "The team members of each office and division select the person they feel best represents the Conway spirit of cooperation, helpfulness and goodwill."

As part of the event, Conway associates and employees collected nearly $4,000 worth of canned food and other non-perishable goods to benefit the area shelters operated by MainSpring Coalition for the Homeless and the social-service programs of The Charity Guild.

MainSpring houses as many as 60 homeless individuals per night at its Brockton facility; nearly 40 homeless families are provided shelter at Conway House in Middleboro and Evelyn House in Stoughton.

The Charity Guild Inc. is a Brockton-based non-profit organization that provides food, clothing and donated household items to low-income individuals and families throughout the region. The group, which operates a food pantry and thrift store, receives no state funding and pays for its programs through the generous contributions of its members, area residents and local businesses.

Founded in 1956, Norwell-based Jack Conway & Co. is the largest independent real estate company in Massachusetts, with more than 1,000 agents in 45 offices from Boston to Cape Cod.

STEPHANIE MCGRATH receives her award from Richard F. Cahill, president of Jack Conway & Co. Real Estate. Both McGrath and Cahill are Quincy residents.

THIS IS A HAMMER

'Tis the Season ... for Drain Clogs

It never fails: Get the whole family together for a holiday celebration, and at some point a drain will get stopped up. It could be the toilet, the tub or the sink, but in any case, it's an instant problem that needs to be taken care of immediately, because hanging a sign on the door that reads "Don't Use — Broken" just won't be heeded by everyone.

The first line of defense against clogs is, of course, your trusty plunger. I'd recommend keeping one in every high-traffic area — one in the bathroom, one under the kitchen sink, and so on. In fact, if there are a lot of people coming over to the house at once, just carry one under your arm the whole time. (Just kidding!)

Here's a quick list of efficient solutions to common clogs:

Overflowing toilet: Close the shutoff valve located on the wall near the base of the toilet to stop the flow of water. Grab the plunger that you stored nearby for just such a situation. Make sure there's at least 2 inches of water in the toilet bowl. Place the plunger into the toilet at an angle (this keeps air from getting trapped in the plunger). Ensure that the edges of the plunger are touching the surface of the bowl on all sides; then, quickly but firmly, work the plunger up and down several times (15-20 is good). The water level will drop as the clog clears, but you may need to repeat the plunging process a few times.

Clogged sink: Leave the drain cleaner in the garage and whip out that plunger. Follow the directions above until the drain clears — or your arms get tired.

Clogged tub or shower drain: First, swipe a cloth across the drain filter to clear away hair or soap. Sometimes, this is all you have to do to fix the problem. Otherwise — you guessed it — put that plunger into action.

Now, what if a plunger doesn't do it? What if the clog won't clear? In that case, you will actually have to put the plunger away and employ the second line of defense, the snake. Not a real snake — a plumber's snake, a springy metal coil on a flexible line that is fed into the drain pipe, spun around to collect or loosen the clog material, and retracted. If you don't have one of these, run down to the hardware or home-improvement store and pick one up. If the clog has already occurred — put a sign on the door until your company leaves, and hope everyone reads it.

Quincy Police Part Of State-Wide Drunk Driving Crackdown

To reduce impaired driving on roadways, the Quincy Department has joined more than 270 local police departments and the Massachusetts State Police in the Governor's Highway Safety Bureau's (GHSB) "You Drink & Drive. You Lose." Mobilization during the holiday season.

The GHSB is a program of the Executive Office of Public Safety.

"During this holiday season, we'll conduct extra traffic enforcement to look for impaired drivers, as well as those who speed, drive aggressively, and do not use safety belts and child safety seats," said Chief Robert F. Crowley.

Alcohol was involved in 43 percent of the 476 motor vehicle-related fatalities in Massachusetts in 2004.

"To ensure a safer holiday season, we will have extra patrols across the state looking to identify and apprehend impaired drivers as well as to enforce all our traffic laws," said Colonel Thomas Robbins of the Massachusetts State Police. "The public can help us by reporting suspected drunk drivers with a call to 911 as well as by always wearing their safety belts – that is definitely your best defense against a drunk driver."

Recently the battle to reduce drunk driving in Massachusetts got an important boost with the adoption of Melanie's Law. This legislation strengthened the drunk driving laws of Massachusetts, especially the consequences for repeat drunk drivers. Yet even first-time offenders can be affected by this new legislation. For instance, anyone who commits manslaughter while operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol or drugs is subject to a minimum mandatory five-year prison sentence and 15-year license suspension.

LT. GOVERNOR Kerry Healey thanks Quincy Police Lt. Charles Santoro at a recent press conference in Boston to promote safe and sober driving during the holiday season. Lt. Santoro is involved in the You Drink & Drive. You Lose mobilization at the "voice" of the local police on radio advertisements across the state that will run through New Year's Day.

The Governor's Highway Safety Bureau along with state and local police provide the following tips to stay safer this holiday season:

- Keep your cool behind the wheel: allow extra time for unexpected traffic and weather conditions.
- Obey posted speed limits.
- Report suspected impaired drivers by calling 911.
- Always wear your safety belt– it's your best defense against a drunk driver.
- Don't risk it ... If you plan to drive, completely avoid alcohol or other drugs. For those under 21 the legal alcohol limit is .02, essentially zero tolerance.
- If your celebration plans involving drinking, before you head out choose a sober designated driver or decide to take mass transit or a taxi.
- Never accept a ride with a drunk driver.
- If necessary, spend the night where the celebration is being held.
- Remember your liability as a party host and take steps to prevent guests from drinking too much as well as keeping those underage from consuming alcoholic beverages. Be prepared to provide a sober ride, a taxi, or a bed to a guest that has had too much to drink.

Nominations Close Dec. 31

Deadline Saturday For Sun 'Citizen Of Year' Nominations

Saturday is the last day for nominations for The Quincy Sun's 21st annual "Citizen of the Year" award.

Established in 1985, the award recognizes an individual for outstanding community service or a special achievement.

Last year, Francis X. McCauley was honored for a distinguished 32-year public service career built on a foundation of honesty, integrity and history.

McCauley – the only resident to serve the city in all four elected municipal offices: school committee, ward councillor, councillor at-large and mayor – was selected for the honor from among 44 nominees submitted by Quincy Sun readers. A panel of judges representing a cross-section of the community made the final decision.

Again this year, Sun readers may nominate the person they feel is the most deserving of the award.

A nomination ballot to help the selection process appears on Page ?? of this week's issue of The Quincy Sun.

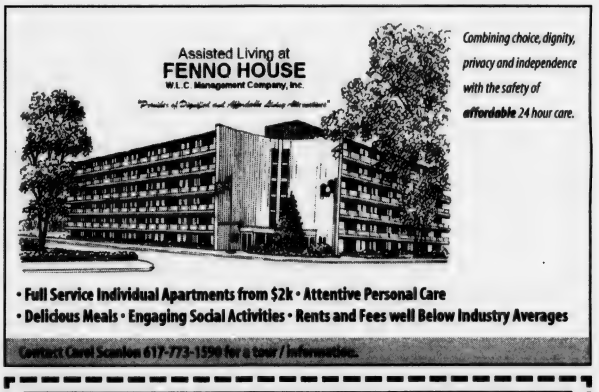
After nominations close Saturday, a judging panel will be selected to make the final choice from nominations submitted.

If you know someone you would like to see recognized with the 2005 award, fill out the ballot and mail it to:

The Quincy Sun
Attn: Citizen of the Year
1372 Hancock St.
Quincy, MA 02169

Nominations should be postmarked no later than Dec. 31.

Ballots can also be dropped off at The Sun office at the above address by Saturday.



Those submitting nominations should identify themselves. They can also attach to the ballot a letter detailing the reason for their nomination.

Nominees can be someone in elective office, a member of an appointed board, a clergy member, a teacher or school administrator, a police or firefighter, someone in the business community, a sports figure or an "unsung" neighbor or friend who has given freely of his or her time to a worthy project or cause.

Those nominated in the past are eligible to be nominated again this year. Since this is not a popularity contest, each nominee has an equal chance of being selected regardless of the number of nominations received. Anyone nominated just once has the same chance of being the award recipient.

Again, the deadline for nominations is Saturday.

The name of the winner will be announced in The Quincy Sun in January.

Home Exercise Equipment

Q. There seem to be thousands of different pieces of equipment that you can use to exercise at home. I'm interested in buying some home exercise equipment, but I'm not sure where to begin. My first instinct is to get a treadmill because I like to walk and jog outdoors, but I'm not sure if I will keep using it once I bring it home. How can I tell which piece of equipment is right for me?

A. You've already taken a great first step, which is not to make an impulse buy of any exercise equipment because you "think" you'll use it at home. Homes across the country have become large storage containers for every type of exercise equipment and tool you can image — from treadmills and abdominal machines to yoga mats and stability balls.

Before you begin your search, first look at your current commitment to exercising and the type of exercise routine you're doing. If it's hard for you to find the time to exercise, and the thought of having a bike, treadmill or elliptical machine in your home sounds like a great idea ... think again. Most people who purchase exercise equipment without a true commitment to an exercise routine usually end up with an expensive clothes rack.

If you decide you really need to have exercise equipment in your home, think small. Larger equipment does not guarantee a larger result. You might invest first in a library of exercise videos or DVDs to check your level of commitment. Find a video that sparks your interest and will keep you heading toward your fitness goals. Many videos encourage you to purchase resistance bands, medicine balls and other exercise tools, which can be good investments.

These fitness aids are less expensive than big machines and are easy to store, and you can follow along with the instructor on the tape or CD for a guided program. This equipment can give you great feedback on your consistency, motivation and dedication to exercise — information that will help you answer your question of what equipment, if any, to purchase.

Don't get me wrong, there are many people who are devoted to using their home exercise equipment to maintain a healthy lifestyle. Unfortunately, they are in the minority.

If you're still interested in buying a safe home exercise machine, do your research. Don't get caught up in the hype of "the one and only exercise machine you will ever need." Ask for recommendations from fitness professionals, as well as friends who have bought home-exercise equipment (and actually used it). Also search online for recalls, lawsuits or complaints against the company distributing and manufacturing the equipment.

Be honest with yourself and your commitment to your exercise routine, and remember that the equipment will only benefit you if you use it.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program.

New Year's Resolutions To Prevent Cancer

It's time to ring in the New Year — time for fun and frivolity with noise makers, champagne, kisses at midnight. And it's time for that annual self-improvement ritual, preparing your list of New Year's Resolutions.

High atop nearly everyone's list is the desire to lead a healthier life in the New Year. The American Cancer Society can help improve the odds with tips on healthy eating, becoming more active, quitting smoking, and getting regular checkups that can greatly reduce the risk of developing cancer and help people detect cancer early, when it's most treatable.

Here is a list of the Society's New Year's resolutions for a fresh start toward better health in 2006:

1. Eat a variety of healthful foods, with an emphasis on plant sources.

Include five or more servings of a variety of vegetables and fruits in your diet each day, choose whole grains rather than processed (refined) grains and sugars and limit consumption of red meat and processed meat.

2. Adopt a more physically active lifestyle.

For adults that means engaging in at least moderate activity for 30 minutes or more on five or more days of the week and for children and adolescents it means 60 minutes per day of moderate-to vigorous physical activity at least five days a week.

3. Maintain a healthful weight throughout life.

4. If you drink alcoholic beverages, limit consumption.

Alcohol increases the risk of several cancers. Men who drink alcohol should limit their intake to no more than 2 drinks per day, and women to 1 drink per day. Regular consumption of even a few drinks per week is associated with an increased risk of breast cancer in women, so women at high risk of the disease may want to consider not drinking any alcohol.

5. If you're a smoker, quit.

There's no one right way to quit, but there are some key factors in quitting smoking successfully: make the decision to quit; set a quit date and choose a quit plan; learn how to deal with the withdrawal symptoms and create a maintenance program.

No one has to quit alone. Call 1-877-YES-QUIT (1-877-937-7848) to obtain information on a program run by the American Cancer Society or be referred to a state-run program.

6. You can also join the ACS Action NetworkSM and work as a grassroots advocate to enact public policies to help smokers quit, such as insurance coverage for tobacco cessation programs and smoke-free workplaces laws. Research shows that smoke-free workplaces laws encourage smokers to quit as well as protect non-smokers from exposure to secondhand smoke — a known health hazard.

To learn more about becoming an advocate, call 1-800-ACS-2345 or visit www.cancer.org.

7. Talk with your doctor about a regular schedule for cancer screening tests based on your age and personal risk factors.

These tests include mammograms and clinical breast exams for breast cancer; fecal occult blood test (FOBT), sigmoidoscopy, and colonoscopy for colon cancer; PSA test for prostate cancer; and the Pap test for cervical cancer.

For more information, call The Society's toll-free number 1-800-ACS-2345 or visit www.cancer.org.

Food Poisoning: Tips To Keep Safe

(NU) A century ago, food-borne disease such as typhoid fever and cholera were common. Even though improvements in food safety have conquered these illnesses, many food-borne diseases are still causing harm today.

According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, approximately 76 million cases of food-borne disease occur each year in the U.S. The most commonly recognized food-borne diseases are those caused by salmonella and campylobacter. Together, these bacteria cause 80 percent of the deaths associated with meat and poultry products. Seafood is a leading cause of food-borne illness.

"With properly treated seafood and poultry, and a little food safety know-how, consumers can greatly decrease their chances of dangerous food contamination," said Aaron Ormond, a microbiologist and director of research at Global Food Technologies, a company that produces technology instrumental to food safety.

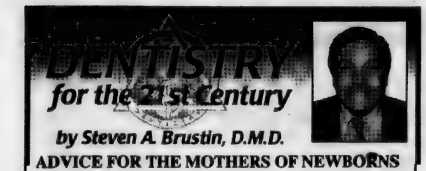
Ormond offers the following tips to keep your family safe from potentially fatal food-borne illnesses:

• Check color, odor and texture. When purchasing chicken, its coloring should be pink, not gray or yellow. Fish meat should be shiny and firm, not easily separated from the bone and have a fresh, mild smell.

• Inspect the package. Purchase meat and seafood that has received an anti-pathogen treatment that doesn't alter the food's color, smell, taste or appearance, such as those offered by Global Food Technologies. Be sure to avoid products that have outlived their "sell-by" dates or have dents or tears in the packaging.

• Avoid cross-contamination. Use separate cutting boards- one for raw meats and another for fruits and vegetables- to diminish the likelihood of cross-contamination. Also, wash your hands thoroughly with an antibacterial soap before and after you handle raw meat and seafood.

• Store at the right temperature. Fresh seafood and poultry should be stored at 40 degrees or below to ensure freshness. When cooking poultry, breasts should be cooked at 170 degrees, whole chicken or turkey at 180 degrees and ground poultry at 165 degrees.



Quincy Medical Center Nurse Receives International Honor

Quincy Medical Center's commitment to infection control took center stage during the biennial convention of Sigma Theta Tau International, held recently in Indianapolis.

Quincy Medical Center nurse Deborah Hylander, MSN, RN, CIC, COHN-S, recently received an Innovations in Clinical Excellence Award at the biennial convention of Sigma Theta Tau International held recently in Indianapolis.

Hylander, director of Infection Control, Employee Safety and Workers' Compensation, was recognized by the international honor society in nursing for her paper - A Research Utilization Program to Implement Best Practices for the Prevention of Catheter-Related Bloodstream Infections at an Acute Care Facility, which highlighted Quincy Medical Center's proactive improvement efforts related to the quality and standard of care for patients receiving intravenous (IV) therapy through a reduction in the rates of IV-associated infections.

She was one of five recipients, nationwide, for the evidence-based practice awards, which was co-sponsored by Nursing Spectrum magazine.

ADVICE FOR THE MOTHERS OF NEWBORNS

Mothers of newborns must become aware of the fact that their own dental health may affect their babies' oral health. Experts agree that children can "catch" tooth decay from adults, whose mouths contain the bacterium that causes dental caries. Infection of this sort usually occurs early, within the baby's first two years, and is spread via kissing and sharing food. Children are most often infected by their mothers, owing to the fact that babies' and toddlers' immature immune systems fail to recognize their mothers' bacteria as being foreign. With this in mind, new mothers are advised to visit the dentist regularly and maintain good oral hygiene. They should also start cleaning their babies' teeth as soon as they erupt.

Preventive dentistry begins with the first tooth. Let us help you in preventing dental disease and helping your children belong to the cavity-free generation. We pride ourselves on exceptional listening skills and keeping your best interests at heart. Regular dental visits will help your child stay cavity free. You can be sure that you will never be advised of, or supplied with, treatment that you don't want or need. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we take the time to answer all of your questions and explore every possible option. Call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Be sure to tell the dentist if you are expecting.

'Home And Home' Series With Walpole Wednesday, Friday

Presidents Off To 3-0 Start

BOYS' BASKETBALL

By CHRIS POISSON

The Quincy High School boys' basketball team may have lost a handful of quality players from last year's championship squad, but head coach Bill Fisher believes the building blocks are still in place.

"There are a lot of good intangibles the kids are building on," he said. "We lost a lot last year but we haven't lost our work ethic, our intensity and our focus. The chemistry seems to be there. The kids seem to be supporting each other and cheering for each other during the games and at practices."

To date, that has translated into a perfect 3-0 record as the Presidents had a week off before they hosted Walpole yesterday (Wednesday). They will battle them again Friday on the road at 6:30 p.m.

"We're playing well, but we still have to get better," Fisher said. "It's nice to be 3-0. We feel good. But we have a lot of work to do in terms of defense, transition and offense, which has been up and down. Hopefully we can straighten a few things out."

After its thrilling season-opening win against Silver Lake, Quincy responded last week with a 68-54 triumph over Snowden Monday and a 65-48 victory at Plymouth South Wednesday.

Against Plymouth South, Quincy's young bench provided a spark as the starters struggled early on. Junior center Kinsin Theodoris and sophomores Giovanni Cesare, Parris Amado and Deshawn Matthews played well.

"It was rough in the beginning," Fisher said. "I needed to call three timeouts in the first seven, eight minutes. We were not playing well. We were not executing well. The bench gave us a boost. Kinsin Theodoris kind of got us going. All the young kids played very well for us."

Ten of the 13 players scored. Senior tri-captain and forward Lavell Johnson scored a team-high 16 points, Cesare netted 14, freshman point guard Doug Scott added 12, senior center Joe Griffin contributed eight and Theodoris seven.

"We shot the ball better and we defended better," Fisher said. "Defensively, after the first eight minutes we picked it up and played our best half-court defense of the season."

Against Snowden, Johnson poured in 19 points, Scott 12, Griffin 12 and junior tri-captain Steve Connolly eight.

"We got out of the gates pretty fast and established control early in the game," Fisher said. "They're a good ball club and we never could really put them away. Defensively, for the most part, we played well. The most impressive thing was our rebounding. We're a small team in terms of height. But we're very aggressive in rebounding and that's a good sign."

Raiders Bounce Barnstable, B-R

So far, defense has backboned the North Quincy High School boys' basketball team to a pair of wins this young season.

In their home opener last Tuesday, the Red Raiders held on for a 60-53 victory over Barnstable, which had scored 90 points in its previous game against Dennis-Yarmouth.

That performance followed their game against Bridgewater-Raynham where they limited the Trojans to just 25 points.

"I'm very pleased with our defense to date," said head coach Jim Rendle. "We're 2-1 and we've played some pretty good competition."

North Quincy faced Somerville yesterday (Wednesday) in the Chelsea Holiday Tournament and will play Everett today. Next week, it opens league play against Plymouth South Tuesday at home at 6:30 p.m.

On the eve of Atlantic Coast League play, Rendle said his team needs to shoot the ball better and is looking for someone to step into the role of the third scorer to complement senior point guard Kyle Costa and senior center John Murray.

"We have a long way to go," Rendle said. "We have to start shooting the ball better. We have to get a little more balance on offense. Costa and Murray have been consistent. We need someone else to step up and start scoring consistently for us."

Against Barnstable, Costa and Murray once again paced the offensive attack. Costa turned in a dominant all-around game with 13 points, nine rebounds, seven assists and five steals. Murray scored a team-high 15 points to go along with seven rebounds and three blocks.

Senior guard Imad Elkatrib showed he could be the third option with eight points. He also pulled down seven rebounds to go with three steals and two blocks.

The Red Raiders built a 17-point lead midway through the second half before Barnstable caught fire, hitting five straight shots, including three 3-pointers, to tie the game with under three minutes remaining.

"They're very capable of scoring a lot of points," Rendle said. "They're dangerous like that. They were a big, athletic team and we played some pretty good basketball. If they didn't go on that streak, we pretty much held them in check."

Quincy Hockey Begins With 3 Wins

By CHRIS POISSON

It has only taken three games for the Quincy High School hockey team to triple its win total from a year ago.

The Presidents, with 13 returnees, are off to a blazing 3-0 start after struggling through a dismal one-win campaign last season.

They opened Dec. 14 with a resounding 7-4 victory at Plymouth South and pulled out a 4-3 win at league favorite Whitman-Hanson Dec. 17. Last Wednesday, they blanked Plymouth North, 2-0.

"At 3-0, I'm a little surprised," said head coach Bob Sylvia, whose team has dedicated the season to the late George Peachey, a volunteer coach the past 15 years. "I'm starting to believe. It seems like they're developing a little bit of character and that's a good sign."

Quincy had a week off before it traveled to Lynn English yesterday (Wednesday) and will have another week break before facing cross-town rival North Quincy Jan. 4 at 7:10 p.m. at Quincy Youth Arena.

The Presidents' surge out of the gates has altered their expectations for the season.

"Obviously we want to make the tournament," said Sylvia, who is in his 40th year. "We want to do that every year. Ideally, we'd like to win the league championship. Thirdly, we'd like to win more than one game in the tournament.

"Three weeks ago, I wouldn't have said the league championship was within reach. At this point, we'd be crazy if we weren't going to strive for No. 1 in our league. It's a very realistic goal at this point, if we're going to work for it."

Against Plymouth South, sophomore forward Ted Walsh recorded a hat trick and senior forward Mike McKeon netted a pair of goals. Senior co-captains Matt Giordani and Mike McPherson added the others. Senior Alex Smith and junior Bo Craig shared the goaltending duties.

"We were on the road and beat Plymouth South and scored seven goals and I got a little bit excited," Sylvia said. "We weren't doing that much scoring in three games last year."

In the Whitman-Hanson game, McKeon pocketed a pair of goals to power the offense. McPherson and sophomore Kyle Craig played strong defense and Smith played well in net.

"That was our biggest win here in years," Sylvia said. "On paper, they were picked to win the league. It's a nice feather on our cap, especially for a team looking for an identity after winning just one game last year."

Against Plymouth North, the Presidents peppered the Blue Eagles with 53 shots but managed only to get one puck past the goalie when Giordani tallied the game-winner with three minutes remaining. McKeon added an empty-net goal and Smith made 16 saves for the shutout.

"The defensive part of our game held up," Sylvia said. "We just didn't seem to be clicking offensively. That was a game we should win so we were lucky to get out of there with a win. We dodged a bullet."

Rounding out the roster this year are Smith, Bo Craig and freshman Jeff Giordani as the goalies.

FLAT CHANCE!

According to a survey by the American Automobile Association, flat tires are responsible for stranding more drivers than any other cause. When a flat strikes, motorists can either call for help or fix the flat themselves. The former tack leaves them contending with an average 45-minute response time, while the latter do-it-yourself approach can prove dangerous. One alternative is the sealant tire, which seals punctures in the tread area up to one-quarter inch in diameter. If the sealant is effective, it masks impending tire failure until the motorist is able to get to a gas station. In addition, run-flat tires that can be run at speeds up to 55 mph for 50-150 miles are becoming more widely available.

Advances in tire manufacturing, and in tire technology in general has provided drivers with new and safe choices. At LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO, we can provide you with advice and services that will benefit you in the long run. Tires are vital to a car's performance and safety. If you need tires, or would like your tires checked please come by 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree today. For further assistance please call 781-843-1550 at your leisure. We are "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." Sunoco and most major credit cards honored.

HINT: Run-flat tires, which utilize stiffened panels on the side walls to keep running without air, require low-pressure warning systems that alert drivers of reduced air pressure.

A Job Well Done

By LT. DAN MINTON
Quincy Police Crime Prevention Officer

The "Cops In Shops" program has been very successful. Here are two examples. On Dec. 3, at approximately 8:45 p.m., Officer Steve Burgio and Sergeant Joseph Lencki were in plain clothes working at the Regal Beagle Liquor Store.

LT. DAN MINTON

Officer Burgio observed a vehicle with three young males in it pull up to the store. The front passenger went into the store and after showing a Massachusetts license indicating he was 21 years old, purchased three 40 ounce bottles of beer and returned to the car.

Both officers approached the car and after identifying themselves, obtained identifications from the occupants. The driver was 20 years old and the rear passenger was 18 years old. The 21-year-old said the beer was just for him.

When asked if there was any alcohol or drugs in the car, the driver said there was a small amount of marijuana under the seat. The driver, a 20-year-old male from Quincy, was arrested on the charges of "Possession of Class D Drug" and "Minor Transporting Alcoholic Beverages."

On Dec. 4, at approximately 10:35 p.m., Officers Michael Duran and Dennis Keenan were working "Cops In Shops" in plain clothes at Franklin Beer and Wine Store on Franklin Street.

They were conducting surveillance from the outside of the store when a vehicle occupied by four people pulled up front. A male passenger exited the vehicle, entered the store and came back out with a 30 pack of canned beer, which he put in the trunk of the car.

Once the suspect got back into the car, the police officers approached and obtained identifications, which showed the driver and two other females were 18 years old. The suspect, a 21-year-old Quincy resident, denied buying the beer for the minors.

After being questioned by the officers, all three females admitted the suspect intended to buy the beer for them. The male suspect was placed under arrest for "Selling/Delivering Alcohol to a Person Under 21," and the 30 pack was placed into evidence for trial. Nice Work!

The "Cops In Shops" program is a community-wide, cooperative effort between Quincy retailers and the Quincy Police Department to deter minors from attempting to purchase alcohol and stop adults who buy alcohol for minors.

Incidents like those just described should make people reluctant to take the chance of being arrested — you can't be sure that the clerk behind the counter is not a police officer!

Council Approves $7.9M In Landtakings For Concourse

(Cont'd From Page 20)

2005 IN REVIEW

DECEMBER

The City Council surprised and dismayed the business community by raising the tax classification to the state limit of 189 per cent of fair market value for commercial, industrial and personal property (CIPP) in Quincy.

The shift from 175 per cent meant a $10.32 per $1000 valuation residential tax rate for Fiscal 2006, down from $10.84 in the previous year and $23.28 for CIPP, up from $22.32.

"It hurts businesses, particularly small businesses," said Peter Forman, president and CEO of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce.

""I don't consider this an increase in the commercial rate; it's a decrease in the residential rate," said Ward 2 Council Daniel Raymondi, who introduced the 189 per cent tax classification measure.

Mayor William Phelan announced plans to use a $3.83 million payment from Quincy College to offset the tax levy during the coming year. The money was due the city as reimbursement for pension payments made on behalf of the college from Fiscal 1998 through 2004.

Mayor Phelan announced that the city's excess tax levy capacity a... free cash certification were the highest in city history in the same year, a unique accomplishment in municipal finance.

"Our city's financial health continues to improve from where we were four years ago," he said. "I am proud of what we have accomplished thus far."

The Council, by an 8-1 vote, gave the mayor the go ahead to take downtown land on his proposed rout for the Quincy Center Concourse that would link Burgin Parkway with McGrath Highway across Hancock Street. The land was value at $7,986,200.

Robert Noble, once a German prisoner of war, spoke at the rededication of the World War II statue and memorial and urged the crowd to treat the soldiers returning from Iraq in the same generous manner he and his colleagues were greeted 60 years ago.

The statue had been in its new place in Merrymount Park only a couple of days when vandals sprayed it with paint and three 13-year-old boys, two from Quincy, one from Weymouth, were charged with defacing it.

At about the same time, the figurine of the Baby Jesus was sprayed with black paint in the creche beside City Hall but Tom Koch, executive director of the Park Department, said there was no apparent connection between the two acts of vandalism.

City Council President Frank McCauley attended his last council meeting after 32 years in elective office on the school committee, the council and the mayor's office , and, paraphrasing General MacArthur, told his colleagues "I conclude my political career tonight and just fade away."

But when McCauley was honored as the Citizen of the Year by the Jewish War Veterans, Mayor Phelan said, "I have a feeling you are not going too far and we will be hearing from you in the years to come."

Sean Galvin of Galvin Construction Company was elected president and chairman of Quincy 2000 Collaborative, the city's public/private partnership for economic development.

Deaths during December included:

Maurice Grossman, 83, of Brookline and Woodstock, Vt., formerly of Quincy, philanthropist and retired president and CEO of Grossman's, Inc.

SCOTT DEWARE

A Thought For The Week

"A new broom sweeps clean," is a phrase often used. It is also a useful tool as we prepare for the ending of the old year and the beginning of the new.

Bad news and tension often leave a residue even after the problem is resolved. Worry and lingering despair are often left behind to gnaw at what should be a new day. So, grab that new broom and sweep out all those bad thoughts and fears. While you're at it, knock down the cobwebs left from personal problems and worries; they only serve to keep you from enjoying the good things which come your way.

Starting the new year with a clean broom does not mean you should forget the old year; it only means that the good things, the ones which are valued and worth saving, will remain. Like the pesky cobweb, you may find those worries creeping back, unless you are ever-watchful and nip them before they get a good hold. A new broom sweeps clean; it also allows us to keep the new year bright and happy.

We at the Deware Family Funeral Home wish for a new clean-sweeping broom for every home this year; may it give you the freedom to enjoy each day as it comes.

HAPPY NEW YEAR...

Delahunt Challenges Oil Companies To Aid Needy

Cong. Bill Delahunt and the Massachusetts congressional delegation have challenged American oil companies to emulate Venezuelan-owned CITGO and provide discounted heating oil to needy American families.

"We again appeal to your sense of corporate citizenship," said the legislators in a letter to top executives of the eight largest companies.

"Especially in this season of record industry profits, please advise us . . . what kind of assistance you can lend to low-income Americans attempting to struggle through the next few months."

CITGO, which is wholly owned by the state oil company of Venezuela, has pledged top provide 12 million gallons of home heating oil at 40 per cent discount to low income families and social service institutions in Massachusetts.

The discount oil program was set in motion by Delahunt in discussion with Venzuelan President Hugo Chavez, a frequent critic of the administration of U.S. President George Bush.

Quincy Teams With District Attorney To Protect Senior Citizens

Quincy Police Lt. Charles Santoro and Mary Kiropatkin from Colonial Federal Savings and several members of South Shore Elder Services joined District Attorney William Keating recently in an effort to help prevent financial exploitation of vulnerable elderly.

Lt. Santoro and Kiropatkin were among more than 75 banking officials, senior advocates and police from across Norfolk County at Keating's inaugural F.L.A.G. partnership conference recently. The F.L.A.G. program, acronymic for Financial Law Enforcement And Government Agencies, draws on the successful program in place in the city of Chicago and Cook County, Illinois.

"The point of this project is to train front-line bank personnel in detecting signs that an unscrupulous caretaker, relative or companion may be working to coerce or swindle an elder, and particularly a frail elder, out of their money," District Attorney Keating said after the conference, which was hosed by the Bank of Canton at its headquarters there.

"We were very pleased to have Kerry R. Peck travel here from Chicago to talk about the program and how it is working there," Keating said. "Just as drivers with car phones often alert law enforcement to dangerous driving, we recognize that bank personnel can be very effective partners in recognizing elders who may be falling victim to financial exploitation."

The other keynote speaker was Kevin Kiley, from the Mass Bankers Association; Channel 5 consumer reporter Susan Wornick was the special guest speaker.

District Attorney Keating said he hopes that the good response to this first conference will encourage other banks to participate in future training opportunities. "These kinds of crimes may not be happening en masse in Norfolk County, but the impact of this sort of elder abuse can be catastrophic on a senior citizen and indeed their whole family," Keating said.

Seniors Invited To Breakfast With Mayor At Beechwood

Quincy seniors are invited to welcome the New Year with Mayor William Phelan at the Beechwood Community Life Center, 440 Squantum St., Wednesday, Jan. 4 at their Current Events Breakfast.

All seniors are encouraged to reserve a seat for this very special meeting.

"The Mayor accepted the invitation to meet with the city's eldest citizens as planning for FY 2006 gets underway," said Sharron Beals, Beechwood's Executive Director. "Our city's elder population is on the rise. Statisticians tell us that by the end of this year one in three Quincy residents will be 60 years or older, and the greatest population growth is that of "at risk" elders (75-100) who continue to reside in their own homes."

Jennie Perito, retired Registered Nurse and member of Beechwood's Elder Advisory Council will emcee the breakfast forum. She, John Noonan, Bill MacDonald and Maryann Mahoney comprise the planning team who organize the Beechwood monthly Senior Breakfasts.

To make reservations for the breakfast, or to learn more about the Center's Senior activities, call 617-471-5712.
